EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

Proclamation by the President Convening Both Houses

AUGUST 7, AT NOON.

The President Declares This Action is Absolutely Necessary.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—At six o'clock this evening, the following proclamation was issued:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30, 1893.

Whereas the distrust and apprehension concerning the financial situation which pervade all business circles have already caused great loss and damage to our people and threaten to cripple our merchants, stop the wheels of manufacture, bring distress and privation to our farmers, and withhold from our workingmen the wages of labor; and

Whereas the present perilous condition is largely the result of a financial policy which the legislative branch of the government finds embodied in unwise laws which must be executed until repealed by congress.

Now therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, in performance of a constitutional duty, do by this proclamation declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the convening of both houses of the congress of the United States, at the capitol in the city of Washington, on the seventh day of August next, at 12 o'clock noon, to the end that the people may be relieved through legislation from present and impending danger and distress.

All those entitled to act as members of the fifty-third congress are required to take notice of this proclamation and attend at the time and place above stated.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States at the city of Washington, on the thirtieth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the independence of the United States one hundred and seventh.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

NEWSPAPER OPINION

On the Action of the President in Regard to Extra Session.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The Herald says: While the president and his cabinet have for some time realized with the country the necessity of calling an extra session to stop the compulsory purchase of silver, the step taken yesterday was evidently hastened by the sudden announcement of the suspension of silver coinage in India, the consequent decline in the price of the metal here and the general alarm naturally produced by these extraordinary causes. We need hardly say that the repeal of the law which has proved so ruinous to the country will be a national boon on which the people are to be congratulated.

The Times says: The policy now determined on by the president is a broad and Catholic one. There is no one in the union from the capitalist, wherever he may be found, to the workman in the factory or the mine or on the farm, that will not be disadvantaged by the prompt removal by congress of the most serious source of disturbance to credit and through credit to trade and industry. It is decided now by the course of events which no one can misunderstand, that henceforth this country must have, and will have a currency as good as the best.

The World says: There is a general feeling that the repeal of the mischievous Sherman act will remove the chief cause of the distrust and disturbance. The collapse of the free silver policy in India, has completed the demonstration of the failure of this system and added urgency to the call of action. President Cleveland has been led by changed conditions to change his mind and to hasten the meeting of congress. It is the mark of a wise man and a strong one. Only fools never change.

The Recorder says: It is the best and wisest step that could be taken. We are glad the national administration has come down to the common business sense of the situation. We are glad that, invested with the responsibility of governing, it assumes the responsibility of government.

The Press says: The repeal of the silver purchasing clauses of the Sherman law is demanded by the conservative sentiment of the country. It is extremely doubtful if a majority of the democrats in congress can be persuaded to vote for this repeal unless they are bribed by the offer of the administration to favor the restoration of the state bank currency. The return of wildcat banks would be an evil worse than free silver coinage and should be resolutely resisted by the republican minority.

BACK TO THE BATTLEFIELD.

Five Thousand New York Veterans Will Go to Gettysburg Again.

NEW YORK, June 30.—About 2,000 veterans, who took part in the battle of Gettysburg, and now live in this city, are expected to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them by the state to revisit their old battleground during "New York day," July 1, 2 and 3. Over 5,000 veterans from other parts of state will also be present.

The state made an appropriation for 7,000 veterans. This is for railroad travel alone. The veterans will have to furnish their own rations. The railroad tickets are good until July 8. The following veteran regiments have notified Secretary Zabriskie that they will leave in a body: The Forty-fourth of Albany, Sixty-second, Seventy-third and Eighty-third of New York, Eighty-fourth of Brooklyn, Seventy-seventh of Saratoga, 120th of Kingston, 123d of Washington county, 124th of Orange county and 150th of Poughkeepsie.

An order was received at the custom house from Secretary Carlisle Thursday stating that temporary leaves of absence granted to veteran treasury employes to go to Gettysburg must be deducted from the annual fourteen days' vacation.

General Sickles, with Generals Joseph B. Carr, H. W. Slocum and Daniel Butterfield, the last of whom was Meade's chief of staff throughout the fight, left on the headquarters train at 9 o'clock Friday morning.

Colonia Beats the Wasp.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 30.—Colonia and Wasp had a race today down the bay. Wasp had 300 yards start, but Colonia caught her in 4½ minutes. Vigilant is all rigged and Herreshoffs will receive a bonus of $3,000.

Time, [illegible].

This race meeting has been called the "last in Connecticut." The races were designated so on account of the anti-pool bill, which, it is presumed, will prevent the circuit racing for several seasons, that has prospered in this state.

Payment of July Interest on Reading Bonds Deferred.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—The receivers of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company find themselves compelled to defer temporarily the payment of the interest on the general mortgage bonds due on July 1. It is well known that the company has seldom been able to earn its fixed charges during the first six months of the year, and in the present condition of the money market the receivers do not feel justified in sacrificing the property of the company in order to meet this interest now. They will announce the time of payment of these coupons as soon as they are able to do so.

Injunctions Granted to the Edison Illuminating Co.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Judge Lacombe of the U. S. circuit court today granted injunctions to the Edison Illuminating company of New York, against the Highland house and the Imperial hotel, prohibiting them from using incandescent lamps, infringing the Edison patent, under which the Illuminating company is sole licensee in the city of New York. The decision will doubtless secure to the Edison Illuminating Co. the incandescent lighting business in New York city and go a long way towards securing to similar licensees the same monopoly in the other cities.

Failures for Past Six Months.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Bradstreets reports 6,239 failures in the United States during the six months ending June 30, with liabilities over $170,000,000 and assets over $100,000,000; against 5,001 failures, liabilities $56,000,000, assets $29,000,000, in the like period of last year. The number of failures during the first half of this year was the largest six months total on record.

There were 897 failures in Canada during the past six months; 64 less than in the like period of last year, but the aggregate of liabilities is $8,215,000, an increase of about 14 per cent.

Surprise in Financial Circles.

NEW YORK, June 30.—President Cleveland's action in calling an extra session of congress for August 7, next, thirty days ahead of the time generally expected was a decided surprise in financial circles here. It caused a decided feeling of relief and the consensus of opinion is that the financial and commercial affairs would henceforth be in the direction of improvement.

A New York Seventh Regiment Officer Arraigned For Embezzlement.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Lieut. J. Watson Cochran, a prominent member of the Seventh regiment, was arraigned in the Essex Market police court today and held in $5,000 on a charge of embezzlement. Cochran was a clerk for C. Godfrey Gunther's Sons, fur dealers, No. 186 Fifth avenue, and is alleged to have taken over $5,000. He was arrested on Saturday last, immediately after his return from camp at Peekskill. [illegible]

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

What Senators and Representatives Say on the Subject.

DIFFERING OPINIONS.

It is a Question Whether Congress Can Furnish Relief.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Interviews were had with many senators and representatives tonight on the financial situation.

"I voted against the Sherman act before and will vote for its repeal now," said Mr. Brown of Indiana. "The Sherman act, it is claimed, was passed to prevent the enactment of a free coinage bill. It would be nearer the truth to say that it was passed to keep Mr. Harrison from vetoing a free coinage bill and appearing before the country as an opponent of silver."

Senator Cockrell of Missouri was found at his residence in earnest conversation with Representative Dockery. He said he had no interview to give.

Representative Enloe of Tennessee said: "It may restore public confidence. Still it is a question in my mind whether or not congress can furnish any relief. The country, however, seems to think it can and it is the part of wisdom for the president to give it a chance. I think there is no cause for this financial demoralization, except that the public confidence has been shaken."

Mr. Enloe said he believed it hardly probable that the Sherman law would be repealed without a substitute.

Representative Durborrow of Illinois said the president was right in calling the extra session in August. The president had had the matter presented to him in all lights and had now transferred it to the shoulders of congress, where it belonged. Mr. Durborrow did not care to forecast the action of congress on the matter, but he thought the immediate result of the extra session would be to restore confidence in business and financial circles to a large extent.

Senator Ransom of North Carolina thought the action of the president good and wise, but would advance no opinion as to the outcome of the matter in congress.

Representative Capehart of West Virginia said he favored the repeal of the Sherman law.

Coles, a Telegraph Operator, Skips Out with $246.

HARTFORD, Conn., June 30.—A telegraph operator named Coles, who has been employed at the local station of the canal division of the Consolidated road, at Farmington, is missing, with $246 belonging to the railroad company. He decamped Wednesday night.

On Wednesday the young ladies of Miss Porter's school started for their homes, and the sale of tickets at the local station was unusually large in consequence. During the absence of George W. Waterman, the agent, Coles took the entire receipts of the day and boarded the southbound 6.28 train. He was traced as far as Plainville, but there all trace of him was lost.

Before leaving the station, Coles cut out the instruments in the building, and thus delayed the sending of the news of his embezzlement for some time.

A New Haven Printer Drowned in Long Island Sound.

NEW LONDON, June 30.—The oyster steamer Isaac A. Brown, which arrived in the harbor this morning with a party of excursionists from New Haven, reported the loss of one of the party by drowning. The lost man is George Snow, aged 26, who lived on Union street, New Haven. He was employed by J. J. McKiernan a Grand avenue printer in New Haven.

It is stated that Snow fell over the stern of the boat two miles west of Faulkner's Island about 1 o'clock this morning. He was missed, and the steamer was stopped, but no trace of him could be found. As soon as the boat arrived at this city two of the party started back for New Haven, on the train, to inform the friends of Snow of his sad fate.

Horses Towing the Viking Ship.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y., June 30.—Several hundred persons gathered Thursday to see the Viking ship, which passed here in the Erie canal, towed by a team of horses. About 1 o'clock in the morning the steam tug having the Viking in tow was in collision with a canal boat between Amsterdam and Fultonville. The Viking's crew left the tug in a sinking condition, came ashore and towed their ship three miles to Fultonville. Captain Andersen is trying to get another tug to take them to Buffalo.

Shorter Days for Employes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 30.—The banks and trust companies belonging to the Providence Clearing House association have voted to close business on Saturdays in July and August at noon, and to make all clearings at 10.30.

Leading mercantile establishments all over town are today signing an agreement to close their places of business at 5 each day except Saturday, making an eight-hour day during the heated term of two months.

A Bill to Permit Causes in Equity.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 30.—The final session of the general assembly was detained fully two hours this afternoon to act on a measure which its advocates were determined to rush through. It was a bill to permit causes in equity in cases of civil action to be tried by a jury. The house passed the bill and the senate rejected it, 11 to 9.

It came out in the debate that the immediate application of the bill was to the suit of the Adams Express company against Clapp Spooner of Bridgeport, the defaulting treasurer of the company, and that Mr. Spooner's attorney, Samuel Fessenden of Stamford, caused the bill to be introduced. In the debate several senators favored the principle of the bill but could not consent to its present special application.

Denver Chamber of Commerce Opposed to Extra Session.

DENVER, Colo., June 30.—Representative business men of the state called upon Governor Waite today and urged that he call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of passing an act staying proceedings for the collection of debts.

The governor expressed himself as unwilling to take action in the matter, unless the business men throughout the state favored it, which he thought was impossible. The chamber of commerce is unanimously opposed to the extra session, asserting that it is unnecessary and that Colorado is in as good financial condition [illegible]

BANKER DREXEL DEAD.

A Name Long and Honorably Known in Financial World.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—A dispatch from Carlsbad states that A. J. Drexel, the banker, died there today.

Anthony Joseph Drexel was born in Philadelphia in 1826. His father was a native of Dornbirn, Austrian Tyrol, but he came to this country in 1817, settling in Philadelphia. After some delay he engaged in the banking business.

The Drexel banking houses have supplied and placed hundreds of millions of dollars in government, corporation, railroad and other loans and securities. These securities were placed for investment. The houses had no dealings with speculative bonds or stocks, but have engaged only in sound and sure transactions.

HUNTING BURIED GOLD.

Part of Missouri Being Dug Up to Find $1,000,000 in Gold.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 30.—There is considerable excitement in Knobnoster, Johnson county, over a search being made for the $1,000,000 in gold supposed to have been buried by Spaniards many years ago. Tradition says that the Spaniards were conveying the gold from Mexico when they were attacked by Indians and forced to hide their treasure. On a spot where debris of the wagons has been found excavations were begun Monday, but so far no trace of the gold has been found.

NEW HOUSE FOR LIZZIE.

Will Probably Leave the Old Homestead Next Month.

FALL RIVER, June 30.—Charles C. Cook who had charge of the business affairs of the late Andrew J. Borden, has purchased for Misses Lizzie A. and Emma J. Borden, the three-story mansion at 61 High street, known as the Butterworth homestead.

The price is said to be about $15,000. The sale was made yesterday.

The remaining members of the Borden family will probably remove to their new house within the next month.

The Butterworth place is in the fashionable center of the city. The Second street estate will probably be sold.

The Yale-Harvard Game in New York Today.

NEW YORK, June 30.—With weather such as New York is blessed with today the great ball game tomorrow between Yale and Harvard on the polo grounds ought to attract an audience that will vie in number with the immense gathering on the opening day of the league season. Both teams are in this city, and each is practising as if a king's ransom depended upon the result of tomorrow's struggle.

The Yales are in excellent condition. Harvard has catcher Mason a bit crippled and Hallowell also on the hospital list, but Mason is resting all he can and he is expected to round to in shape for tomorrow's contest.

If Hallowell doesn't mend in time Corbett will take his place at center.

Fischer Wins the Berlin-Vienna Bicycle Race.

BERLIN, June 30.—Joseph Fischer of Munich, arrived at the end of the course at 1.07 o'clock this afternoon. He started from Floridsdorf at 4.29 o'clock yesterday morning and was thus thirty hours and fifty-seven minutes on the road.

Internal Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The receipts from internal revenue today were $525,680; from customs, $470,550, and miscellaneous, $14,753. The national bank notes received today for redemption amount to $170,269.

Coroner's Verdict on the Parkville Disaster.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The coroner's jury on the Parkville disaster on the Manhattan Beach division of the Long Island railroad returned a verdict at midnight last night, laying the whole responsibility for the disaster upon the railroad company.

Pythians Elect Officers.

At a regular session of Gardner lodge, No. 46, K. of P., Friday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: C. C., George R. Angell; V. C., H. A. Bill; P., David Gilmour; M. of A., Thomas M. Hargraves.

A Torchlight Procession.

About fifty members of St. Mary's Total Abstinence and Benevolence society formed on Church street last evening, and headed by Olin's Preston drum corps and carrying blazing torches marched through Main street to Thames, countermarched through Main, thence to Broadway, to Otis, to Spalding, to East Broad, to Boswell avenue, to Franklin, disbanding at the society building on Broadway. Good-sized gatherings viewed the procession at every point of the line.

The Ella's Pleasant Trip On Race Day.

The passengers of the steamer Ella, on the return voyage from yesterday's race, seemed a unit in declaring the trip a complete success. Much credit is due Warren K. Dows, who chartered the boat for the race, and got together a select and limited company. A commanding position was taken up a little above the last quarter flag, giving all on board an excellent view of the straining crews at the most exciting point in the race. After touching at New London, where many landed to see the sights and listen to the ubiquitous but unmusical fish horn, the steamer took a turn down the harbor. The passengers left at New London were picked up in an hour and Norwich was reached at 8 p. m. This being the second successful party Mr. Dows has managed, it speaks well for the outcome of similar ventures in the future under his guidance.

A Royal Reception Given the Victorious Yale Crew.

TIN HORNS AND FIREWORKS.

Thousands Parade New Haven Streets Amid Much Noise

NEW HAVEN, CONN., June 30.—A royal reception greeted the Yale crew on their arrival tonight. The train with the eight on board was met by a large and enthusiastic body of New Haveners at the depot. The oarsmen were put on a tally-ho which stood in waiting and taken to the campus. They were tonight tendered a banquet. The coachers were present and responded to toasts.

Tonight thousands crowded the streets and made a terrific din with tin horns and fire crackers. During the celebration John McGee Ellsworth of Penn Yan, N. Y., had four of his fingers on his right hand blown off by a giant fire cracker. He was taken to the hospital, where the members were amputated.

George Allen, the veteran Yale coach, said tonight in regard to the race: Yale won because she was better drilled. No Harvard crew ever showed more sand, but the stroke Harvard rowed was vastly inferior to Yale's. It was a terrible race to row and the oarsmen of both boats escaped luckily with so little exhaustion as they did. The Yale boat was so nearly full of water at the close of the race that it could not be lifted by the crew. Another mile and it might have sunk. This was the closest finish between the boats since '82. The time is excellent considering the conditions under which the race was rowed. In this respect the race is an exact repetition of the contest of '85, which was also rowed down stream against a stiff head wind and the time was 25.25.

Captain Ives was presented with a souvenir pin tonight by the class of '95.

President Cleveland in New York.

NEW YORK, June 30.—President Cleveland, accompanied by Secretary Lamont, Mrs. Lamont and Miss Lamont, arrived here at 10.30 o'clock tonight. The party was met at the station in Jersey City by Dr. Bryant, surgeon general of the United States.

"I have nothing at all to say now," the president said. "I have issued a proclamation calling congress together on August 7. In that I have given my reasons for doing so, and that is all there is to it."

While crossing the river on the ferry-boat Colonel Lamont said to the reporters: "I am in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law, and don't favor free coinage as a substitute, and the president holds the same opinion on that matter as myself. There have not been any personal appeals to him for an early session, or opposition to such from silver men to speak of."

"Mr. Cleveland," continued Secretary Lamont, "is going directly on board Mr. Benedict's yacht Oneida, which is waiting on the East river off Twenty-sixth street. Mr. Benedict is on board and they will cruise slowly along the Sound reaching Buzzard's bay on Sunday evening or Monday morning. He will remain there about three weeks. Dr. Bryant will accompany him." Col. Lamont denied that there was to be a midnight conference on the Oneida between the president and New York bankers. He said so far as he knew Secretary Carlisle was not coming to New York.

The President Goes to Buzzard's Bay.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The president left the city at 4.30 this afternoon for Buzzard's Bay, Mass., to be absent probably three or four weeks.

Peary's Start Delayed.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The Peary Arctic expedition will not start from here tonight as was originally intended. Owing to a delay in receiving necessary supplies, the departure of the Falcon will not be made until tomorrow evening.

A Field For River Pirates.

The large number of boats, yachts and other vessels attracted to New London by the Yale Harvard boat race rendered the pirate trade prosperous. The pirates are getting bolder year by year and the river police patrol detailed for race week was inadequate to successfully cope with them.

New Voluntown Mail Driver.

J. M. Whitman, who has been the overland mail carrier between Norwich and Voluntown for several years, is succeeded today by William Whipple of that town. Mr. Whitman's generous nature and accommodating ways have won him an army of Norwich friends, who regret his departure.

Yale's Strategy in Baseball.

Yale's oaric victory yesterday improves her chances mightily for the ball game with Harvard in New York this afternoon. The victorious crew will be brought on the field at about the third inning. Of course the crowd will go crazy, and the enthusiasm will have a rather demoralizing effect upon the Harvard players. This method of warfare has been tried before, and with good results.

A Conditional Injunction Granted.

Judge Shipman in the United States court has filed an opinion on the motion for a temporary injunction in the case of Palmer Brothers of Montville against the Orsfield Mills of Stonington, Conn., and Westerly, R. I. The complainant claimed an infringement of a patent on quilting machines for embroidery. The opinion orders that the injunction be granted unless the defendant files a bond for $10,000 to account for any damages that may accrue until a final decree is entered in the case.

Mr. Wright Wins a Prize.

Fred R. Wright, grandson of Mr. Fred Richter of Laurel Hill avenue, won the prize of $250, offered by St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., to the student averaging the highest in the several studies pursued during the school year, for the second time. Mr. Wright is spending part of his vacation at his home in Aspen, Colorado. In a year he will complete his academical course and enter Harvard college.

The Sex's Relative Social Importance.

Some novel features have been arranged for the annual exercises of the New London Business college, to be held in the Lyceum theater July 6. Besides music by the college orchestra, readings, recitations, etc., by the graduates, two young men and two young women will discuss the question, "Resolved, That woman exerts a greater influence upon social, commercial and national affairs than man." The decision in the debate is left to the house, each invitation containing a printed slip with the tickets "negative" and "affirmative." The annual address by the Rev. W. J. Yates is entitled "How to be Somebody."

Mr. Harding's Retirement.

Today Mr. Edwin F. Harding, for nearly seven years physical director of the Norwich Young Men's Christian association, will sever his connection with that institution. Mr. Harding is a competent director, and by his genial manners and friendly disposition has won the esteem of our citizens. For a year and a half he has acted as superintendent of the Second church Sunday school.

After leaving this city he will spend part of the month of July in camp on Shelter island, and in the fall will either accept a position in Boston or New York, or return to Norwich in the capacity of a private instructor. Norwich friends wish him success in his future work.

ELECTRIC ROAD EXTENSION.

Sharp Discussion in the Common Council Chamber, the Matter is Referred to a Special Committee to Report Monday.

A full board of aldermen and councilmen was present Friday evening at the special meeting to consider the application of the Norwich Street Railway company to extend its tracks.

Mayor Harwood stated briefly the requests of the corporation, and Clerk Spalding opened the discussion by reading a petition headed by the names of H. H. Gallup, John P. Murphy and J. H. Cranston, that the West Side extension be to the city line, not terminating at Dunham street.

The petition for extension "from Main street to and through Shetucket street to Laurel Hill bridge, and over and along said bridge to Laurel Hill avenue, and in and through Laurel Hill avenue as far southerly as the foot of Whitaker hill," was first presented to the meeting. The original plan of the company was to lay the tracks on the westerly side of the street the entire distance. This route was not congenial to the people beyond River avenue, it developed from remarks by W. H. Chapman and Lawyer C. F. Thayer. Attorney Lucas and President Cogswell said that the road would agree to keep in the middle of the highway after reaching River avenue, if the community desires.

The proposal to lay tracks from West Main street, in and through Thames to West Thames street to Dunham street, was then taken up. John Woodmansee and F. A. Mitchell argued that the rails should be strung in the middle of the street from the brow of West Thames street to the proposed terminus, instead of on the west side, as required the remainder of the distance.

President Cogswell said there was no objection to his suggestion on the part of the company.

John P. Murphy and H. H. Gallup made strong appeals for the continuance of the extension to the city line, which they claimed was demanded by the present and future industries at Thamesville, averring that the company by refusing morally abrogated its agreement made [illegible] years ago when the electric system was introduced.

President Cogswell and Mr. Lucas com[illegible]

There was a discussion over the planned extension to Maple street.

When Mayor Harwood brought up the subject of the kind and quality of track and method of laying Councilman Henderson spoke sharply against the T rail. Superintendent Shaw explained that it was the only practicable rail, and that with any other the road could not be operated safely or successfully. President Cogswell supplemented these remarks in the same vein.

On motion of Alderman Perkins, the decision of granting the extension was referred to a special committee, consisting of Mayor Harwood and the street committee (Aldermen Aborn, Councilmen Murray and Henderson), following which the council adjourned. The committee is to report at the regular council meeting Monday evening.

ADJOURNED SINE DIE.

End of the One Hundred Days' Legislative Session.

HARTFORD, June 30.—The general assembly of 1893 today shut up shop after an existence of just 100 days. The members of the house were as hilarious as school boys on "last day." They divided business with pleasure, and if the speaker were a pedagogue, and his gavel a rattan, more than one of the boys would have been "warmed."

One of the pleasant features of the day was the presentation by Mr. Hicks of Tolland to Mr. Gunn of Milford of a solid silver and china coffee set.

When the news came of Yale's victory over Harvard there was a wild scene. It opened when a couple of members came marching into the chamber bearing aloft the Yale colors.

Between pleasantries the house managed to handle a number of important matters. It conferred on women the right to vote in school elections; appropriated $6,000 for retaining ponds for shad, trout and salmon; allowed taxpayers to sign more than one application for a license, and finally appropriated $400 for an exhibition of Connecticut working cows at the World's Fair.

At 1 o'clock hunger overcame the desire to do business and a recess was taken for an hour.

When the house reconvened the work of clearing the table of all remaining business was entered upon earnestly. An effort was made to pass the Hartford county bridge bill in concurrence with the senate, but it failed, and the bill was killed for good.

When all the business had been completed, there was a half hour of courtesies. The republican side of the house recognized the work of its leader, Mr. Wood of Manchester, and through Mr. Barlow of Stamford presented to him a handsome clock and two vases. Mr. Wood modestly returned thanks for the gift.

Then politics was cast aside, and both parties united in honoring Andrew F. Gates, the clerk, and George A. Kellogg the assistant clerk. Colonel Mowry of Norwich, presented to Mr. Gates a silver tea set, which will come in useful to the clerk a few months hence. Mr. Kellogg, who has thus far manifested no signs of approaching marriage, was remembered with a gold chain and charm. The presentation was made by Mr. Noble of East Windsor.

Shortly before 4 o'clock both branches had finished all business and as the governor had no further communication to make, the senate and house convened in chamber of the house for final adjournment. Lieutenant Governor Cady presided and the state officers and heads of departments occupied seats on and around the speaker's platform. Addressing the members Governor Morris said:

Mr. President and members of the general assembly:

We are now met together to close the labors of the session.

Owing to the want of legislation during the past two years and the new methods of doing business arising out of the development of electricity as a motive power, your labors have been unusually protracted and severe. How far they have been successful time alone can determine. We can only hope that they will prove to have been timely and judicious.

Gentlemen, I tender to you my heartfelt thanks for the uniform courtesy which I have received at your hands during the session.

Mr. Sheriff, you will now make proclamation.

When the governor had concluded, Sheriff Preston made the proclamation, and Secretary Phelan, with the usual invocation, "God save the State of Connecticut," declared the general assembly adjourned sine die.

In the senate the bill creating a naval reserve was taken up and on the favorable report of a conference committee, the bill was amended and passed. The bill now allows four companies to be organized from the forty-eight militia companies.

The bill allowing saloons to open an hour after the closing of polls on election days was indefinitely postponed.

Senate concurred in continuing the bills relating to settlement of contested election cases to the next general assembly.

Resolution of thanks to "Dan" Lee, janitor of the cloak room, for boutonnieres for the senators during the session. Passed.

Resolution paying certain reporters and attaches of the capitol. Passed.

Bill allowing borough of Willimantic to issue $150,000 bonds was passed.

The senate presented a handsome silver tea set of nine pieces to Clerk Comstock. Senator Pierce made the presentation speech, to which Clerk Comstock neatly replied.

At 3.40 the senate took a recess to 3.60.

The State Can Wait.

The Connecticut legislature practically concluded its work Thursday and the great public feel a sense of relief. On the whole, very little important legislation has been effected. The state can very well afford to wait two years more, however, for the performance of further legislative work.—[Meriden Republican.

YALE WINS!

The Blue Above the Crimson

AN IDEAL DAY.

All the Conditions Favorable.

THE COURSE LINED BY CRAFT.

The Closest Race on the River.

HARVARD LEADS FIRST MILE.

Yale Crew Wins by Four Lengths.

TIME 23.01 1-2.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 30.—Yale won the great boat race today. New London seemed full of visitors when the sun rose this morning. What was the condition when the excursion trains came in from Boston and New Haven, each loaded with passengers? Everybody started for the river early, and the excursion steamers and launches were quickly filled with passengers who waved their red and blue flags impatiently waiting for the start.

The observation trains, too, were filled early, while those who could not follow the race picked out positions near the drawbridge where the finish could be seen.

A thick, sound fog hung over the city at sunrise. The air was sultry, however, and at 6:15 o'clock the sun came out hot. There was a slight southeast wind early, but scarcely enough to ruffle the surface of the Thames.

At the crew quarters every effort was made to keep the men in quiet surroundings; only the most prominent visitors and coachers were allowed to remain in quarters over night, and the members of both boats lounged about apparently as if nothing of importance were within a month of happening.

Both Crews Arose at 7 O'Clock

this morning and immediately breakfasted, a hearty meal being allowed them. The shells were taken down at 8 o'clock and carefully inspected by the coachers.

Every bit of color was out upon the vessels in the Thames, and one schooner was nearly covered with blue and bore three great banners for Yale. Small boats plied to and fro and the scene was a picturesque one for all who were not thoroughly anxious for the outcome of the race. Those who feared a postponement had only slight anxiety, for the conditions bade fair to be almost perfect. The thick fog was cleared away by the sun, and the water was as fine as could be desired for a race.

The powers that be met at 9 o'clock to make final arrangements. Bob Cook, Yale's chief, met Perkins, Harvard's director, and they decided upon the the officials of the race, in addition to Mr. Reeves, who was chosen referee a month ago. The officers were: Timers, Mr. Allen of Yale and Mr. Keyes of Harvard; judges, Mr. Cook of Yale and Mr. Perkins of Harvard.

At 9:15 o'clock the wind veered almost due south and strengthened in force. The tide was almost full, and the wind, in an almost opposite direction, commenced to influence the sea in a decidedly choppy manner.

At 10:50 the Yale crew had reached the starting point and the Harvard men were only a few minutes behind them. It seemed an age while the crews were waiting for the signal to start, but finally it came at 11:04 and the boats were off pulling in best of style.

Yale Had the Best of the Start, but it was only for a few seconds. For the Harvard men did beautifully, and by the time the first half mile flag was reached, crimson was ahead by just a trifle. Time—Harvard, 2.51; Yale, 2.52.

Then rose rahs from the launches and the prospect of a Harvard victory were bright; even stronger were the hopes when the mile flag was reached and Yale was a half second more behind. Harvard, 5:57; Yale, 5:58 1-2.

That was the last of Harvard's lead, for Yale came to the front now, and kept it for the balance of the race. Harvard kept pluckily at work, however, and the race lost nothing in interest. Rowers of the blue had made a good lead, and as they went by the mile-and-a-half flag the time was: Yale, 9, Harvard 9.02. By this time blue banners were waving on launches and on the observation train, which though late in reaching the start, was now abreast. Few Harvard flags were in sight, for all had not lost hopes but that the shell might come to the front by a mighty effort. In the next half mile Yale had forced ahead a little more, and the first half of the race was finished. Time—Yale 12.08, Harvard, 12.10.

Now the enthusiasm of the spectators increased, for the crews now approached the excursion boats, black with spectators, which were anchored along the eastern bank of the river. Carriages drove rapidly along, trying to keep up with the rowers.

Two and a half mile time—Yale, 15:0?, Harvard, 15:07. In the next half mile Harvard dropped back still more, in spite of the best the men could do, and when the three-mile point was reached the time was—Yale, 18:20; Harvard, 18:25. Then came an increase in speed for Harvard, and amid terrific din from the boats along the banks. Guns were fired in quick succession. Fair spectators became almost frantic in waiving their banners and the cheers increased. Two seconds gain had been made by the time the 3 1-2 mile point was reached. Yale, 21:20; Harvard, 21:2?.

Now came the finish for what had been one of the prettiest races in New London history and which well repaid every one for his trip in coming.

Yale finished beautifully, crossing the finish point in 23m. 1½s. Harvard by this time was four lengths behind its time, 23:15.

The race between the Yale and Harvard crews this year, while intensely exciting, has been very slow indeed, compared with the previous record of the past seven years. In 1884 Yale succeeded in winning the race with a time almost five minutes faster than that of today with Harvard, only 17 seconds slower than its rivals then.

Last year's crews of both colleges made a far better showing.

On the other side of the Atlantic the English crews of Oxford and Cambridge are much more evenly matched, and while they row a four mile and [illegible] course [illegible] In 18[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

Call For Organization in Vermont on Fourth of July.

RUTLAND, Vt., June 30.—Considerable interest is being taken in the organization of a People's Party in Vermont. The first meeting of farmers and workingmen for that purpose is called at the Hardwell House July 4. A number of delegates from workingmen's organizations in the state will be present. The money question will be discussed at the meeting, and the majority, if not all, who will attend, believe in a bi-metallic basis for the national currency.

There are a number of free silver men among the delegates. Many of the delegates who have been heard from have announced their intention of organizing a party of reform at once, so as to be ready for the campaign of 1894. They claim that there are thousands of farmers and workingmen in the state ready for a change.

WILL GO OUT OF BUSINESS.

Smelters During a Radical Step in Silver's Interest.

DENVER, June 30.—A decidedly new and vigorous move in [illegible] was made by the smelter men who met here yesterday afternoon. Late last night ex-Governor G. B. Grant, of the Omaha and Grant smelter, who was chairman of yesterday's meeting, gave out the following for publication:

"In accordance with the resolution passed by the [illegible] smelters' meeting yesterday afternoon, the Missouri Valley smelters, representing almost 90 per cent of the smelting business of the United States, have decided to cease purchasing silver ores, and to go out of business. They have approximately but [illegible] ounces of silver to reach. [illegible] ply the government cannot purchase the amount made obligatory by the Sherman bill during the next two months."

BUSINESS AT STANDSTILL.

Drop in Silver Results in Depreciation of Mining Stocks.

DENVER, June 30.—The great drop in the price of silver has resulted in a depreciation in the price of mining stocks such as was never before witnessed. Mollie Gibson stock, which a couple of months ago was selling at $?.?? per share, and which closed Wednesday at $?, slumped yesterday to $1.55, and was selling at that figure in the east in the afternoon, with prospects of sinking to $1 or less.

Business in the mining exchange is practically at a standstill, only good stocks being traded in. There is absolutely no market for silver stocks at any price, nor will there be until there is a change in the aspect of the silver market.

ON THE DEFENSIVE.

Silver Men Call For a Mass Meeting Against Financial Tendency.

DENVER, June 30.—Hon. Thomas M. Patterson, editor of the Rocky Mountain News, speaking in regard to the silver question, said:

"In order to emphasize the ruin that imminently threatens the trans-Missouri country, and especially the silver mining, because of the ruthless policy outlined with the money power of the east and Europe, The Rocky Mountain News will this morning call for a mass convention in Denver of a character that in numbers and influence will arrest the attention of the country to its protest against the monstrous crime that is contemplated."

CLOSING DOWN MINES.

If Sherman Law is Repealed Idaho Mining Will Cease.

SILVER CITY, Ida., June 30.—Orders have been issued during the past two days for closing down the silver and lead mines in North Idaho and at Wood River. Thousands of miners will be thrown out of employment during the next week, and there will be much distress.

Present indications are that business of all kinds will remain at a standstill until congress meets, and, if the Sherman law is repealed, and nothing better enacted to take its place, the production of silver in this state will cease.

IN HOT DAYS OF SUMMER.

One or Two Days May Double Infant Death-Rate.

The Necessity of Giving More Attention to Food.

Best Rules Laid Down by Physicians and Experienced Mothers.

"When the hot days of summer arrive, when the temperature rises to 80° and 90° in the shade, let the mother beware," says Dr. Meigs.

One or two such days will often double the mortality among young children.

The months of July and August are the hottest and sickliest of the year, most conducive to bowel affections, and most fatal to the children under five years of age. Proper food is, therefore, absolutely essential to the life and happiness of infants, and proper food is lactated food.

The mistakes in the diet of young children and its injurious effects in years past have been the result of both the ignorance on the part of the mothers as to what constitutes a proper nourishment, and the difficulty of obtaining milk either fresh or unadulterated. Ignorance cannot be cured at once; but lactated food has been so heartily and persistently indorsed by physicians, and so loudly praised by the happy mothers of infants whose lives it has saved, that the consumption of this "baby food for infants" has multiplied wonderfully.

It is to be had at any first-class drug store, and is as economical as it is pure and good.

Babies take it eagerly. Its preparation is very simple. It is a triumph of earnest efforts to make infants well and keep them so. It has been scientifically tested, discussed at meetings, and tried in practice. So entirely has it won the confidence of the medical profession that the most eminent physicians publicly and unreservedly recommend it as the best possible food for infants.

Lactated food is so made that age, climate, or variations of temperature do not affect it. Sugar of milk is the basis of mother's milk, and it is the basis of lactated food. With it is combined pure barley malt, the finest wheat gluten, and the nutritious elements of the oat. It is thoroughly cooked by high steam heat, and is pre-digested, nutritious food that fulfills every requirement of the growing child is the result.

Thousands of happy infants have been brought up on it. It saves babies' lives!

Its use prevents cholera infantum, the scourge of July and August!

Mrs. Ella Trumble, 101 Crosbury street, Saginaw, Mich., writes:

"No one thought my child would live, and she was so weak and thin when we began taking lactated food I feared she would not stand the heat of summer. But now she is plump, happy and good-natured, is perfectly well although teething, never cries, and sleeps well all through the night.

"It's Our Family Doctor Now."

"The [illegible] and Blessing [illegible] Poor Suf-ferer [illegible]."

Mr. Cook found health, happiness and economy in the use of a simple remedy.

"I suffered for years with DYSPEPSIA and LIVER COMPLAINT, and was nearly a cripple with a sore leg, writes Mr. James Cook, of [illegible], New York, and after spending $475 with doctors I found myself no better. I then determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y., and after using three bottles which costs me just $3 I was entirely cured."

Such words from a gentleman of Mr. Cook's standing, should receive great attention from those in need of a medicine that cures disease.

We guarantee Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy to absolutely cure Kidney and Liver complaints, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder, Bright's Disease, all urinary troubles, Diabetes, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Rheumatism, Skin Eruptions, Scrofula, Tumors, Ulcers, Sores and Pimples, Disordered Stomach, Sick Headache, [illegible] and Purify the Blood. It Permanently Cures All Female Weaknesses.

We could name scores of people here, and elsewhere, who have felt not actually sick, but weak, worn and weary, but who are now strong and well, solely by the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It's a food for the brain, nerve and muscle, thereby curing sleeplessness, headache, and all nervous troubles.—[advt 6]

An Early Experience of Bishop Brooks.

Dr. Edward Swasey of this city sends the following story, which relates to the boyhood of the late Bishop Brooks:

When a mere lad, he with one of his brothers was sent on a short visit to his aunt, his father's only sister, on a well stocked farm in Maine.

They both were making the most of their holiday and enjoying to the full measure every moment of their time. But at length Sunday morning came and with it the sound of church bells and the usual family preparations to attend church. But the boy Phil had suddenly disappeared, and no one knew where he had betaken himself to. Diligent search was made both through the house and through the barn for him, but he did not appear. At last my mother looked under the bed in the guest's chamber (the least frequented chamber in a country house), and there she found the future bishop of Massachusetts.

Poor boy, he had probably had some inkling of what the church [illegible] in those days in a Congregational country church, both as to duration and the length of the sermon! His little scheme to secure a forenoon out of doors rather than spend it shut up in church had been frustrated. He was brought into the light, however, and taken to church.—Boston Saturday Gazette.

"Now good digestion wait on appetite, And health on both."

To assure both the above ends, good, wholesome, palatable food is demanded. It is next to impossible to present a sufficient variety of appetizing bills of fare for our meals without a liberal allowance of pastry and other food to which shortening is required. How to make crisp, healthful, digestible pastry has puzzled the cooks. A difficulty in all good cooking in the past has been lard. Always fickle, never uniform, most unwholesome—lard has always been the bane of the cook and the obstacle to "good digestion."

THE FATHER.

Thord Overaas, of whom we are about to speak, was the wealthiest man in the parish.

His tall figure stood one day in the pastor's study. "I have got a son," he said eagerly, "and I wish to have him baptized."

"What shall he be called?"

"Finn, after my father."

"And his godparents?"

They were named, being relatives of Thord and the best men and women in the district.

"Is there anything else?" asked the pastor and looked up.

The farmer stood a minute.

"I should like to have him baptized by himself," he said.

"That is to say on a week day?"

"Next Saturday at 12 o'clock."

"Is there anything else?"

"Nothing else."

The farmer took his hat and moved to go.

Then the pastor rose. "There is still this," he said, and going up to Thord he took his hand and looked him in the face, "God grant that the child may be a blessing to you!"

Sixteen years after that day Thord stood again in the pastor's study.

"You look exceedingly well, Thord," said the pastor. He saw no change in him.

"I have no trouble," replied Thord.

The pastor was silent, but in a moment he asked, "What is your errand tonight?"

"I have come tonight about my son, who is to be confirmed tomorrow."

"He is a clever lad."

"I did not wish to pay the pastor before I heard how many were to be confirmed. I have heard that, and here are $10 for the pastor."

"Is there anything else?" asked the pastor, looking at Thord.

"Nothing else." And Thord went away.

Eight years more passed by, and one day the pastor heard a noise without his door, for many men were there and Thord first among them. The pastor looked up and recognized him.

"You come with a powerful escort tonight."

"I have come to request that the banns may be published for my son. He is to be married to Karen Storliden, daughter of Godmund, who is here with me."

"That is to say, to the richest girl in the parish."

"They say so," replied the farmer, stroking his hair with one hand.

The pastor sat a minute as if in thought. He said nothing, but entered the names in his books, and the men wrote under them.

Thord laid $3 on the table.

"I should have only $1," said the pastor.

"I know that perfectly, but he is my only child. I will do the thing well."

The pastor took up the money. "This is the third time now, Thord, that you stand here on your son's account," he said.

"But now I am done with him," said Thord. Taking up his pocketbook, he said good night and went.

Just a fortnight after this the father and son were rowing over the lake in still weather to Storliden to arrange about the wedding.

"The cushion is not straight," said the son. He rose to put it right. At the same moment his foot slipped, he stretched out his arms, and with a cry fell into the water.

"Catch hold of the oar!" roared the father. He stood up and stuck it out. But when the son had made a few attempts he became stiff.

"Wait a minute!" cried the father, and began to row.

Then the son turned over backward, gazed earnestly at his father and sank.

Thord could scarcely believe it to be true. He kept the boat still and stared at the spot where his son had sunk, as though he would come up again. A few bubbles rose up, a few more, then one great one. It burst, and the sea again lay bright as a mirror.

For three days and three nights the father was seen to row round and round the spot without either food or sleep—he was seeking for his son. On the morning of the third day he found him and carried him up over the hills to his farm.

It was about a year afterward when the pastor one autumn evening heard something rustling outside the door and fumbling about the lock. The door opened, and in walked a tall, thin man with bent figure and white hair. The pastor looked long at him before he recognized him. It was Thord.

"Why do you come so late?" asked the pastor.

"Why, yes, I do come late," said Thord. He seated himself. The pastor sat down also, as though waiting. There was a long silence.

Then said Thord, "I have something with me that I wish to give to the poor." He rose, laid some money on the table and sat down again.

The pastor counted it. "It is a great deal of money," he said.

"It is the half of my farm, which I have sold today."

The pastor remained long sitting in silence. At last he asked, but gently, "What do you intend to do now?"

"Something better."

They sat there awhile, Thord with downcast eyes, the pastor with his raised to Thord. Then the pastor said slowly and in a low tone, "I think at last your son has really become a blessing to you."

"Yes, I think so myself also," said Thord. He looked up, and two tears coursed slowly down his face.—Bjornstjerne Bjornson.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 2. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—How to meet trouble. Acts xvi, 22-26; II Cor. vii, 5-7.

"Man is born to trouble, as the sparks fly upward." This is the testimony of the wise man. It is also the experience of every son of man. No social position, no class of society, no amount of wealth, no family inheritance, will exempt any one from trouble. The poet has truthfully said:

Into every life some rain must fall
And some days be dark and dreary.

Since trouble is so universal it is only natural that we should seek some way of meeting it. Since it must come to all, what more reasonable than that all should be interested in the query, How may we meet trouble? He best answers this question who finds his answer in the word of God.

1. We should meet trouble by looking on the bright side of it (Acts xvi, 22-26). Paul and Silas are in serious trouble. They have been arrested, scourged and imprisoned. Surely this is trouble indeed. But what is the effect upon them? Not discouragement nor despair. Their cause is a good one. Their God is still Jehovah, and instead of fastening their minds and eyes upon the gloominess of the Philippian jail they look up through all their trials, and the prison, instead of becoming the habitation of despondency and despair, is made the house of God where songs and prayers arise. "At midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises unto God." What a lesson to all who despair in trouble! Look up and not down in the darkest hours. The sun may be hidden, but it still shines. The cloud may be dark and gloomy, but it still has a silver lining. There is a bright side to all troubles. Seek it out and look upon it.

2. We should meet trouble by seeking comfort in God (II Cor. vii, 5-7). Again it is Paul who is in trouble. This time it is mental trouble. Titus has been sent to Corinth, but fails to return. There is opposition from the Jews and fear and anxiety for the new Christians at Corinth. But he trusts in God, and "God that comforteth those that are cast down comforteth us." Titus returns and brings encouraging news, and Paul's heart rejoices when it had been cast down. No matter what the cause of our trouble, no matter how serious its character, God is able and willing to comfort us in it. If we trust him, it will not last always. No clouds can last forever. "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." Therefore let us meet trouble by a sublime yet simple faith and trust in God.

What a Little Boy Could Do.

A lad in Boston rather small for his years works in an office as an errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him a little about being so small and said to him, "You never will amount to much; you never can do much business; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them. "Well," said he, "small as I am, I can do something which none of you four men can do." "Ah, what is that?" they asked. "I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied. But they were anxious to know and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do. "I can keep from swearing!" said the little fellow. There were some blushes on four manly faces, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on the point.—Christian Herald.

Christianity, the Conqueror.

Christianity alone truly teaches the great lessons of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of men. Christianity is not the religion of any one country or century or any race or condition. All other religions were ethnic, tribal or at most national, but Christianity was suited to, needed by and intended for all classes and conditions of men in all countries and at all times. It alone aimed to conquer the world. That conquest is its divine destiny and its exalted purpose. Toward the attainment of that end it is moving forward with rapid strides, increasing energy and multiplying assurances of success.—Rev. R. S. MacArthur.

Christian Endeavor Notes.

At the great naval review on Hudson river there were among the crews of the men-of-war, the training ship and other vessels over 80 floating Endeavorers.

Chicago now has a full fledged and pledged Chinese Christian Endeavor society.

The annual convention of the English Christian Endeavor societies was held June 6 at Bradford, Pa.

The executive committee of the New Jersey state union, on behalf of the 33,000 Endeavorers of New Jersey, sent to the legislature an emphatic protest against their infamous laws in favor of racing and gambling.

The young ladies of the Corydon (Ind.) society ring the bell and open the church for the Endeavor meeting, thus saving the society 50 cents a month.

A native missionary at Ningpo, China, is supported this year by the Delaware (N. J.) society.

The society at the Brooklyn navy yard has grown from a membership of 14 last November to one of 97.

At the Mariners' church in New York city is the oldest established work for seamen in that city, and also the youngest floating society.

The three societies in the Langcliffe (Pa.) Presbyterian church gave $125 for foreign missions last year, most of it on the 2 cents a week pledge plan.

Hopkinsville, Ky., has a strong local union composed of five societies.

Brooklyn now has 198 societies. Its junior union comprises 25 societies.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 2.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xvi, 6-15—Memory Verses, 14, 15—Golden Text, Math. xxviii, 19—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

6. "Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia." As we left our studies in this book six months ago we parted with Paul and Barnabas at Antioch in Syria teaching and preaching the word of the Lord. Then came the separation of these two as they were about to start on their second tour, Barnabas and Mark sailing for Cyprus, while Paul and Silas went through Syria and Cilicia. By consulting the map, without which it is impossible to understand this lesson, we see them still moving westward, but hedged in on north and south and compelled to move on through Mysia.

7. "After they were come to Mysia they assayed to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered them not." One of the most striking things in this book is the partnership of the Holy Spirit and the apostles, just as Jesus had said that it would be (John xiv, 16, 17; xv, 26, 27; xvi, 13; Acts i, 8). And so it was afterward proved to be as when they said, "We are the witnesses, and so is also the Holy Ghost;" also when the Spirit said unto Philip to join himself to the eunuch's chariot, when the Spirit called for the special separation of Paul and Barnabas, and when the council at Jerusalem said to the Christians at Antioch, "It seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us" (Acts v, 32; viii, 29; xiii, 2; xv, 28). Then comes the question, Where is this partnership today? Are we who profess to be workers with God completely and absolutely under the control of the Spirit?

8. "And they, passing by Mysia, came down to Troas." It would not be safe to conclude that opposition was an indication that the Spirit was telling us to move on, for the opposition at Iconium is given as the reason why Paul continued there (chapter xiv, 2, 3), and elsewhere he speaks of a great door and effectual with many adversaries (I Cor. xvi, 9); also at Corinth, where there was much opposition, the Lord came to him and strengthened him to abide 18 months in that city (chapter xviii, 6, 9, 10). We may be sure of this, that if we are wholly under the Spirit's control, seeking only the glory of God, He will guide us in some unmistakable way (Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21.)

9. "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Having arrived at the seacoast, they no doubt continued in prayer, and in the stillness of the night this is the message. There was no word of Scripture to give them special guidance any more than there was to send Philip from Samaria to the way to Gaza. As a rule the word of God is a full and sufficient guide, and if anything more is needed it shall be given to the humble, trusting soul by some event of Providence or some whisper of the Spirit, but never in opposition to the written word.

10. "And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them." The party seems to be increased here by the addition of the writer Luke, for instead of saying "they," as heretofore, it is now "we." In Col. iv, 14, he is called "Luke, the beloved physician" and is elsewhere mentioned by name in Phi. 24 and II Tim. iv, 11. Observe Paul's promptness in obeying the call, and fancy he and his party looking about the wharves for a vessel in which to cross to Europe, or possibly there was regular communication. We cannot think of them going without much prayer.

11. "Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis." By consulting the map we find that Samothracia was an island in the Ægean sea, almost in a direct line from Troas to Neapolis, and perhaps about half way across, Neapolis being the port of Philippi and about 10 miles distant from it. What was accomplished on the way across or at Neapolis is not written, but we cannot suppose the apostle and his companions to have let slip any opportunity of making Jesus known. He who teaches to "buy up the opportunities" (Eph. v, 16, R. V., margin) was doubtless accustomed to do the same.

12. "And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia and a colony, and we were in that city abiding certain days." Strangers in a strange land; no one to meet and welcome them; no kindly greeting; not expected by any. What a good time for satan to get in some work on his line, and probably he tried it! Well, Paul, you are quite a distance from home, and nobody knows you or wants you here; your man in the vision who called you this way is not up to time; guess you have made a mistake; you are not wanted here; better get back. Such comforting suggestions would have been very like satan, but Paul knew him, and he knew Jesus too.

13. "And on the Sabbath we went out of the city by a riverside, where prayer was wont to be made, and we sat down and spake unto the women which resorted thither." Thank God for the women who pray and who love to meet for prayer! Note that the gospel was first preached in Europe at a women's prayer meeting, and listen to Paul exhorting the brethren to help the women in this very place, women who labored with him in the gospel (Phil. iv, 3). We can readily imagine what Paul talked about, for he had but one chief topic—one person had taken him captive (chapters ix, 20; xvii, 3, 3; xxviii, 23, 31).

14. "And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us, whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul." Paul was not suffered to go into Asia (verse 6) at this time, but here was a woman of Asia, who up to her light worshiped God, and doubtless eagerly prayed for more light, and now she has received it by a special messenger all the way from Syria, and but recently from the Holy City, Jerusalem, one who had himself seen the Lord (I Cor. xv, 8). This was the greatest day in all her life, for she had heard of Him of whom Moses and the prophets had written. He had really come and had been despised and rejected and crucified according to Isa. liii and Ps. xxii. He had risen again according to Ps. xvi. In Him had been fulfilled every type, and now she hears all this from one who had actually seen Him and received it from Himself. Her soul is full; she can ask no more; she accepts Him as her salvation.

15. "And when she was baptized and her household she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there. And she constrained us." Happy indeed are those who not only receive Jesus into their hearts, but constrained by His love to them cheerfully hand over to Him spirit, soul and body with all they possess for His service.

Spontini's Decorations.

Gasparo Spontini regarded himself in the light of a demigod, and when inspirations crowded upon him he donned a wide, togalike gown of white silk with a border of gold and a fez of white silk embroidered in gold, from which a heavy tassel hung down. With great dignity he sat down before his desk, and if a grain of dust was visible on the paper on which he penned his music he rang the bell impatiently for his servant to remove the obstacle. Spontini owned so many medals and decorations that they could no longer be accommodated on his breast. At a grand musical reunion at Halle an old musician remarked to a comrade, "See how many decorations Spontini has, while Mozart has not one." Spontini, who overheard it, replied quickly, "Mozart, my dear friend, does not need them."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Lucky Pins" the Fad.

"Lucky pins" are the favorite little gifts of the hour, and several special patterns are used to signify good fortune to the wearer. The mysterious virtue of the horseshoe has long been recognized, and of late years the mistletoe sprig has been considered equally fortuitous, while, added to the merry thought, it acquires new virtues. This, with the "Campanello Margherita," which is the facsimile of an ancient gold bell found during the present excavations near Rome and presented to the queen of Italy, are the popular mascots of the day. The sides of the latter bear the inscription, "Tei Cum, Veo Tet," of which this is the translation: "I (little bell) was made against fascination."—New York Tribune.

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Saturday July 1, 1893

IS THIS A DAY FOR PERFIDY?

This will be an eventful day with two Norwich citizens because it has in it more [illegible] of life than there than for any other [illegible] citizens of the place. THE BULLETIN is not responsible for the [illegible] statements concerning the deal [illegible] alleged to have been made between Judge Kellogg, who is indebted to the republican party for his honorable [illegible] long service as city court judge [illegible], and the Hon. S. Ashbell [illegible], who is obligated to the democratic party for every position of public [illegible] and trust which he has ever occupied.

These men have not hastened to deny, and these democratic affirmations of a [illegible] and dishonorable transaction to be completed July 1 are untrue. These reports have been accepted as true by many [illegible], and they say frankly and [illegible] that they expect the vile bargain [illegible] publicly confirmed today.

THE BULLETIN is not unfamiliar with [illegible] of both these men for the past [illegible] years, but it is not willing to believe this unmanly and dishonorable trade [illegible] if the [illegible] openly consummated, [illegible] the people of the reported [illegible] will inform them of the appointment of Judge Kellogg which will [illegible] to affirm these statements.

[illegible] Pierce of Senator Crandall's [illegible] who is so much of a politician [illegible] of a man that he allowed his [illegible] to be made a "rider" to the attorney [illegible] bill in the legislature, was charged with making a deal with Senator [illegible], when he voted with the republicans to defeat the constitutional convention bill, and he indignantly repelled the charge, saying through the press "I would not be guilty of such a perfidy as [illegible]."

He did not want to stand before the people as a seller of his vote, which he owed to the party he represented. He [illegible] that a loathsome spectacle, and [illegible] decent man would repudiate.

[illegible] THE BULLETIN the buyer and the seller of a vote are partners—partners in the transaction, and for the condemnation which follows it. The people have a way of dealing with confessedly-corrupt men of this character, and we have no doubt if such a perfidy is shamelessly carried out in the face of the people of Norwich today they will remember it, and at the proper time repudiate the men, and thus show their contempt for and disapproval of such a transaction.

THE CLOSED SESSION.

The legislature of 1893 is a thing of the past. It was not the best nor the worst legislature Connecticut ever saw. It was [illegible] better than the general assembly of '91, which undoubtedly was the most [illegible] partisan and most oppressive body in the history of the state.

The political spirit which was developed into obstinacy in the dead-locked body of '91 had its influence upon the assembly of '93, and discord and the defeat of several good measures can safely be attributed to the partisan spirit which manifested itself over minor points under discussion and resulted in a disregard of the best interests of the state.

The [illegible] and house resolutions and bills [illegible] numbered nearly 2,800, which [illegible] in excess of the resolutions and bills of the general assembly of 1891.

The legislators have labored beneath the shadow of the capitol for twenty-six weeks, and doubtless were glad when their duties came to an end. They have received generous attention from the press, which has not always been in accord with their acts nor illiberal in the bestowal of advice and epithets.

THE BULLETIN has been pleased by the independence and courage shown by the people's representatives, and hopes neither crops nor business have suffered by their long retention at the capital.

CLEANING PENSION ROLLS.

The dispatches sent out from Washington constantly about purging the pension lists are very unreliable and misleading. On Thursday of this week the public was informed that a long list of pensioners had been dropped from the roll. It is an easy matter to drop pensioners from the roll, but every pensioner knows that it is not easy to get a name on the roll. Every one of these names were put on the rolls after their claims to be there were proven. It is [illegible] Washington [illegible]. It is [illegible] furnish the evidence that they are innocent.

It has never been an easy matter to get a pension, although it now seems to be the simplest matter to get branded as a pension imposter. A large per cent of applicants have not been able to prove their claims and to satisfy the examiners. For years fraud has been guarded against, and special agents employed to ferret out fraud. Last year two hundred special agents found and proved 173 fraudulent cases. They were not made political capital of. In the matter of purging the rolls of these loud-mouthed democrats are only following a good republican example.

And how about democratic states? New England has a little less than eighty-three thousand pensioners who draw thirteen and a half millions annually. New York has nearly seventy-eight thousand pensioners who draw annually eleven and three-quarter millions. The democratic state of Missouri draws seven and three-quarter millions annually for her pensioners, and West Virginia, Missouri and Kentucky draw a million more than all the New England states. The pensioners in the southern states draw nearly twenty-four million dollars a year, which is almost twice the amount drawn in New England. When the democrats are abusing pensioners they are slandering some of the best and bravest men of their own party, as well as patriotic republicans, who deserve of their country all it has ever done for them.

MR. OLNEY'S TRIUMPH.

Only two republicans, Partridge of Lisbon and Hunt of Sterling, voted for Marlor for school commissioner against Jeremiah Olney in the house on Thursday. They will have to explain to their constituents how they came to vote for a democrat against a capable and experienced republican. The Courant, commenting upon Mr. Olney's triumph, says: "But Mr. Olney is 'all right' and so is the school fund and its immediate future. Governor Morris will not remove him nor appoint a successor. He knows the value of time and all that he devoted to this business would be lost. The Courant is willing to congratulate Mr. Olney, but it insists on congratulating the state. A mean trick has failed." THE BULLETIN joins The Courant in its congratulation of the school fund commissioner and the state.

AN EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

The pressure brought to bear upon the administration by the bankers and business men of the country proves that President Cleveland can be moved when the occasion is of sufficient importance. Under the circumstances most presidents would have moved with more alacrity; but those who claim to know Mr. Cleveland felt sure he would not change his first resolution to call an extra session of congress early in September.

The strained financial condition of the country made it apparent that such an act upon the part of the president would do much to restore confidence, and yielding to the petitions of the people he issued Friday evening a proclamation calling upon both houses of congress to convene at noon on Aug. 7, "for the purpose of relieving the people from present and impending danger."

This act will have a reassuring effect upon the country and will be hailed with satisfaction everywhere.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

No one ever expected to see the silver dollar so near bankruptcy that it could not command fifty cents. It is rolling rapidly down the hill.

Dr. Nansen has sailed for the Arctic regions to take a six years' drift in the polar currents for scientific observation. He is taking all the risks to get into the swim, and may never get out of it again.

Congressman Bland thinks "India is conspiring to bulldoze the congress of the United States!" He doesn't see that its free silver monument has fallen over upon it with such force that it has shattered "the white metal" the world over. Bland must be blind!

Gov. Altgeld of Illinois is reported to have said "he has a hide like a rhinoceros, and that the papers cannot penetrate it in three days." If this is true, he probably has a brain like a rhinoceros—which usually has more mud over it than the brain of any other creature, except the frog or the clam.

South Carolina goes into the liquor business on its own account today. The governor sets up business on fifty thousand dollars capital, and the state bar-room will be as much of an institution there after today as a United States post office. This is a staggering policy, and it may lay that state out.

The blue triumphed over the crimson on the Thames Friday for the eleventh time since '76. It was a glorious day for Yale, and for Bob Cook! He is the master of the Yale stroke, and carries more bottled-up inspiration with him for use than any other college coacher in the country. When he tells the Yale boys to get there they think they must, and win!

When the authorities in Washington wish to cause a republican postmaster to resign they order him to accomplish impossibilities. When he refuses to accept such nonsense he is charged with disobeying orders and "fired." The Boston postmaster was ordered to run four elevators with three men, and many other postmasters have been instructed to make half a dozen letter-carriers do ten men's work. Republican postmasters who cannot do this are an incompetent and disobedient set of scoundrels.

STATE TOPICS.

The Advantages of Croquet.

Croquet is said to be coming into fashion again. This is good news for lovers of that old-fashioned game. Croquet is a game that requires any but not violent [illegible], and one in which a steady hand and a [illegible] head are of great benefit to all participants. Besides it affords a much better opportunity for innocent flirtations than does lawn tennis.—[Meriden Journal.

Not all Anti-Chamberlain.

The opinion over in Waterbury is that Governor Morris didn't ask the new state prison directors, before appointing them, where they stood on the warden question, [illegible] if he took Major Fred Spencer of that city to be an anti-Chamberlain man because he is a democrat the governor is liable to be disappointed. There is said to be one other democrat on the new board who is a Chamberlain man, and these two, with the two republicans would constitute a majority, and could vote to retain Chamberlain as warden if they so agreed.—[Meriden Journal.

"It is no Foot Ball, Gentlemen!"

The senate voted Thursday to concur with the house in continuing the Hamersley corrupt practices bill to the next session. For six weeks the measure has been kicked back and forth between the two branches of the legislature and the treatment which it has received is a most significant commentary on the collective character of the present general assembly. Machine politics opposed the measure; and when machine politics presses the button the lawmakers of '93 have exhibited a disposition to do the rest with indecent promptness and prompt indecency. No better and no more important piece of legislation has been proposed at Hartford, and none whose enactment was more urgently demanded by the conditions of the situation.—[Waterbury Republican.

Money is tight. It needs a course of the gold treatment.—[Springfield Union.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!
SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

As a blood-purifier, the most eminent physicians prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the public. As a spring and family medicine, it may be freely used by old and young alike.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

You toilers in works of necessity and mercy, who to the number of four thousand use the Electric cars on Sunday, (see Evening Record of May 15) which, by the way, are cheerfully run every fifteen minutes in order to aid you in your good work. To you my sympathy goes out, for there is in our city one in authority who imposes needless hardship on you. Heretofore I have made your labors comparatively easy by keeping your skins cool and tongues moist through the sultry summer Sundays. But, now, our City Attorney can by no manner of means allow me to refresh you with my innocuous and delicious beverages "On Sundays between Sunrise and Sunset."
So I sit on my little stool of repentance now Sundays and wonder why in the world I was allowed to be so wicked all these [illegible] years; and also why the people of every race and walk of life in town helped me break this law, for you know I could not break it alone.

THE HAPPY ISLES.

Forever [illegible]
Flashed on the vision of the race,
And happy islands ever gleam
With purple hills and glinting streams,
In some unknown and wondrous place.

So once behold the Grecian sage
The great "republic" of his thought,
And, handed down from age to age,
His story gilds the classic page
In modern school and college taught.

The fancy of Sir Thomas More
Again explored Utopian realms,
Where even scales stern justice bore,
Where mankind shared a common store,
And freedom manned the civic helm.

Yet sails the world in ancient line,
Though dreamer dream and poet sing,
Though prophets tell in words divine
The glories of the coming time,
When Right shall rule and Love be king.

The happy islands that we seek
Are only lodged in hearts of men
Whose chivalry befriends the weak;
Who know the truth and dare to speak
By earnest word or candid pen.

[illegible] PALACE.

To be Built of Steel, Glass, Bronze and Silver.

NOT A FOOT OF WOOD OR LUMBER.

Peculiar Whim of a San Francisco Millionaire.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—Ralph [illegible] Nonesuch, who is reputed to have made a fortune of [illegible] in South African [illegible] mines, has purchased a 800-acre tract in the [illegible] district, near San Francisco, where he will erect a novel residence, a palace, in fact, upon which $1,500,000 will be expended aside from the furnishing. This is to be a structure built almost entirely of steel and glass.

The building is to be about 300 feet long by about 100 feet wide. At one end it will be surmounted by a tower 115 feet high, at the other end by a similar tower but of less size and height.

A striking feature will be the [illegible] below the cornice, which slopes to the ground with a curve at an angle of [illegible] degrees. In the sloping sides are to be set huge oval windows 15 feet long and made to conform to the lines of the [illegible] of the wall.

The Roof Will Be a Huge Gable extending the entire length of the building and terminating in another gable at right angles in which are placed [illegible] stained glass windows, one of which will be 30 feet long and 8 feet wide.

Not a foot of lumber or wood of any shape is to be used in the building. The materials will be steel, glass, aluminum, brass, bronze, platinum, silver, concrete, cement and stone. And the only stone used will be sculptured marble in the stairway and in the [illegible] frieze, and onyx and decorative marble in the bathrooms, the stairs and a few other places.

Then the foundations will be of steel and concrete. The floors will be of concrete, brass and aluminum, the walls of steel and the roof of steel, brass and copper.

The inside walls will be some of oxidized sheet iron, some [illegible], covered with a preparation that protects the burnish of the metal, some copper, some nickel, and so on to correspond with the decorations of the room.

The ceilings will be arched and relieved here and there with [illegible] medallions. The partition walls will be composed of metal grilles extending from floor to ceiling, arranged in various designs, forming a vast network through which the visitor can see from the grand stairway at one end to the grand ballroom at the opposite end.

Rich draperies will ordinarily cover the metal grilles and divide the interior into 14 apartments, eight of which will be [illegible] and [illegible] each of a suite of four rooms—a sleeping room, dressing room, bathroom and study. [illegible] ing, lighting, ventilation and Cooking Will Be Done by Electricity.

The servants' quarters, the kitchen, the machinery and laundry will be in the basement. The water wheel and dynamos will be located at the foot of the hill a considerable distance from the building. The sole entrance to the basement from without will be at the foot of the hill through a tunnel, so that no one from within or about the house will see the approach or entrance of servant, grocer, butcher or the livery wagon of any kind.

The structure itself will be surrounded by a broad moat, and outside of the moat will be an artificial lake surrounding the building and [illegible] over a movable drawbridge, thus placing the house practically upon an island. This lake will be fed by water from artesian wells already in operation and pumped up by [illegible]. The [illegible] of the lake will also serve to run the dynamos that furnish light, heat and power for use in the building.

The floors of the building will be of brass and aluminum grille work of ornamental design, the interstices filled with a new Hungarian cement which is said to become as hard as granite when set and to admit of a high and [illegible] polish. The cement will be of various colors and so laid with the metal grille as to surpass in effect any Mosaic flooring in existence. Everything about the building is to be fireproof, [illegible] the furniture, [illegible] the draperies and tapestries will be dipped in a solution of glycerine and ammonium borate, which renders them permanently uninflammable.

LEADERS UNITED.

[illegible] Land [illegible] Agreed Upon in Parliament.

LONDON, June 30.—John Morley, chief secretary of Ireland, and Mr. Balfour, leader of the opposition, introduced jointly in the house of commons yesterday a bill enabling the congested districts board in Ireland to acquire land to be occupied by migrating tenants.

This is the first instance in modern parliamentary history of the government's introducing a bill supported by the leader of the opposition.

It is calculated in the government circles of the house that the session will be adjourned in the first week of September, and that the autumn session will be called to begin about the last of October.

BOSTON'S POSTMASTER.

Colonel J. T. Coveney Succeeds Mr. Hart Tomorrow.

BOSTON, June 30.—This evening Postmaster Hart takes final leave of his office and men at the postoffice building after having served as postmaster in a faithful capacity for the past two years. Tomorrow the new postmaster, Colonel Coveney, takes possession of the office and the new administration, having received his commission from Washington yesterday.

Mr. Hart's reign at the postoffice has been one of success and prosperity, having advanced the receipts of the office and the efficiency of the service, to the entire satisfaction of the Washington authorities and the public in general.

This afternoon the superintendents of stations and departments reported with their accounts. Chief Inspector Evans who has charge of the New England offices will superintend the transfer of the office from Mr. Hart to Colonel Coveney, when everything is satisfactory to both gentlemen.

This morning Colonel Coveney announced that Mr. John T. Burnett would be the assistant postmaster.

Mr. Burnett was born in Southboro, Mass., and was educated at St. Mark's school and at Harvard college. He has been connected with the Old Colony Trust company of this city, but will sever his connection with the company this evening. Mr. Burnett is an enthusiastic Democrat in politics and one of the best known young men of the party.

DANGER OF CIVIL WAR.

Bloody Feud Between Cattlemen and Sheepherders Begun.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A special from Denver says: There is danger of a civil war between the Mormon sheepherders of Utah and the Wyoming and Colorado cattlemen. Bloodshed is already reported from Pigeon county.

The cattlemen have always held the great ranges in this part of the state without invasion, but recently the immense sheepherds of Utah have been driven this way by Mormon herders. The sheep "slobber" over grass on which they graze, and the cattle will not touch it after that.

For this reason the cattle herders find their immense herds in danger of being widely scattered and lost. They have attacked the invading sheepherders by throwing dynamite bombs among the sheep, killing nearly 2000 head.

The sheepherders retaliated by burning out the house and ranch of Emanuel Brack, one of the best known cattlemen, and destroying very valuable cattle imported for breeding purposes. All of the mining towns have been visited in the past two or three days by the cattle ranchmen and sheepherders, who have bought enough ammunition and firearms for a civil war.

It is the general opinion that loss of life and property is inevitable.

ITS TROUBLES OVER.

Abandoned Child Brought Into Court Dies In the Nurse's Arms.

NEW YORK, June 30.—During the trial of Joseph Farel and his wife, Mary, before Recorder Smyth in part II, general sessions, yesterday afternoon, upon the charge of abandoning a male child 1 month old, the little one, who had been brought by a nurse from Randall's Island to be put in evidence at the trial, went into convulsions and died in the nurse's arms.

Just as the defense had commenced to [illegible] their witnesses the little fellow, who had been very quiet all the morning, [illegible] in the nurse's arms. Then he commenced to cough violently. Convulsions followed soon after, and before the little one could be removed from the room he was dead. His body was [illegible] down stairs and the nurse [illegible] it to the coroner's office. Recorder Smyth ordered the trial postponed until tomorrow morning.

MINERS' CONVENTION.

Call for a Meeting Issued to Perfect an Organization.

HELENA, Mont., June 30.—A call was issued yesterday signed by 25 of the most prominent men in the state, for a convention of silver-mine operators, to be held here July 6 to perfect an organization to take an active part in the silver campaign.

A dispatch from Neihart, the chief mining town of the Belt Mountain range, states that orders have been given for closing down the Moulton, Galt and Nevada mines. It is thought that unless silver advances no mines will be in operation at the end of the week.

LONDON ANARCHISTS.

Arrested For Posting Placards Denunciatory of Royal Family.

LONDON, June 30.—The anarchists Cantwell and Young were arrested last evening for posting placards virulently denunciatory of the royal family.

[illegible] the expensive preparations for the wedding of the Duke of York and Princess May, while "thousands of families are starving in London," the placards call upon the working people to assemble in Hyde Park next Sunday to "protest against the [illegible] waste of wealth on royal [illegible]."

THE SIAMESE MUDDLE.

[illegible] Was Ready to [illegible] the French Fleet.

LONDON, June 30.—In reply to a question as to the situation in Siam, Sir Edward Grey, parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, stated in the commons that [illegible] already at [illegible] of Siam another [illegible] was ready to proceed there if her presence is required.

France, he added, had warned the Siamese government that a French fleet going to Saigon may be sent to Bangkok if the situation demanded their dispatch to the capital.

The French government had given assurances that the British government would have notice before a fleet was ordered to Bangkok.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, June 30.—In the outside market call money is quoted at [illegible] per cent and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

The stock market opened this morning at [illegible] about the point it closed last evening. There were no new developments either as regards the money market or the general business situation. London was a shade firmer.

The unsettled position of the silver market is telling severely on certain special securities. [illegible] while its earnings, or the bulk of them, have to be made in gold. That means that the silver which the company receives has to be sold for what it will bring as bullion.

Another road hard hit is Denver and Rio Grande. The stock in this is largely held in London, and on account of [illegible] the silver [illegible] sold [illegible].

The same is true also of the Atchison, which was pounded by the bears because of the ills which must befall its Colorado Midland line [illegible] this paralysis of the silver industry.

Despite this, however, Atchison [illegible] The [illegible] opened [illegible] down at [illegible], while the [illegible] were [illegible] stronger at [illegible]. Mexican Central started [illegible] below yesterday's final sale at [illegible], and [illegible]. The [illegible] however advanced from [illegible] to [illegible], indicating that the [illegible] as to them had been greater than the situation warranted. In other [illegible] Chicago, Burlington and Quincy was [illegible] stronger at [illegible], sugar [illegible] at [illegible] and General Electric [illegible] to [illegible]. The last subsequently declined to [illegible]. Boston and [illegible] opened at [illegible], but [illegible].

[illegible] CROWDS

Greet the Survivors of the Victoria Disaster.

WARSHIPS BRING THEM TO MALTA

Business is Everywhere Suspended While People Greet the Vessels.

VALETTA, Malta, June 30.—The British cruisers Edgar and Phaeton, belonging to the British Mediterranean squadron, arrived here today, having on board the surviving officers and crew of the battleship Victoria, which was sunk off Tripoli, Syria, June 22, in collision with the battleship Camperdown.

It was believed that the vessels would arrive here to day, and large crowds gathered everywhere along the water front awaiting their coming into port.

Everybody was excited, and eager to learn the full particulars of the catastrophe that had resulted in the loss of one of England's best warships, the death of one of her most able and popular naval officers, Vice Admiral Sir George Tryon, and hundreds of the vessel's officers and crew.

As soon as the two cruisers were reported off the port hundreds of small boats conveying relatives and friends of the survivors, and a number of relatives of those who had lost their lives, put outside the harbor

To Meet the Warships.

The latter came into port slowly, thus allowing the small boats to keep up with them without much difficulty.

The survivors crowded along the bulwarks of the cruisers calling to their friends in the small boats and answering as fully as possible the hundreds of questions put to them by everybody within hailing distance.

Every available craft in the harbor was crowded, and the bastions of the fortifications were black with people.

As the warships slowly steamed to their anchorage cheer upon cheer broke from crowds on the shore, and they were taken up and repeated by those on the cruiser.

Business was partially suspended in the city, everybody being intensely anxious to see the men who had escaped, and to learn, if possible, everything concerning the frightful disaster.

Quite a number of natives of Malta were among the crew of the Victoria, and it is known now that 20 Maltese went down with the ship.

REGARDING NEWFOUNDLAND.

France Willing to Extend Operation of Act Expiring This Year.

LONDON, June 30.—In the house of lords yesterday, Lord Dunraven asked what the government had done to secure the execution of the treaty obligations with France regarding Newfoundland.

He also desired information as to whether the arbitration of the questions at issue would proceed, and the modus vivendi between France and Great Britain be renewed.

The Marquis of Ripon, secretary of state for the colonies, declined to make any pledge as to the government's future action. France, he said was willing to extend the operation of the act that expired this year. Much must depend upon the action of the government of Newfoundland.

Opposed to Repeal.

TOPEKA, June 30.—A movement was started here yesterday for a state convention of silver Republicans opposed to the repeal of the Sherman silver law. Judge James Scott, a life-long Republican, says the convention will be called within 10 days. At this convention resolutions will be adopted against the repeal of the Sherman law.

Tilden's Doctor Settles.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Dr. Charles E. Simmons, who attended Samuel J. Tilden for eight years immediately preceding his death, and who sued the statesman's executors for $142,500 for his services, has accepted $40,000 in settlement of the suit. Dr. Simmons agreed to accept $5000 a year for eight years, with interest.

Resignation Accepted.

NASHUA, N. H., June 30.—The resignation of Rev. William H. Moreland as rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, to take effect July 8, has been accepted by the vestry. He has accepted the rectorship of St. Luke's church, San Francisco, to begin in September.

The Government Geological Survey.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Professor J. W. Powell, the director of the geological survey, has submitted to Secretary Smith a plan of operations for the fiscal year 1893-94. The appropriations for the survey aggregate $416,100, and $65,000 for printing and binding its publications.

More Stock Listed.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The New York stock exchange has listed additional securities amounting in value to $80,380,000 in stocks and $96,952,000 in bonds. All are railroad securities with the exception of $3,000,000 leather bonds and $750,000 Edison stocks.

DON'TS FOR WOMEN.

Do not wear a red veil on a hot afternoon.

Do not wear a veil just below the nose if the face is long.

Do not wear the illusion veil if the mesh is so fine as to blur the vision.

Do not wear a veil with a lace edge. Bearded ladies the only exception.

Do not allow your hat or bonnet to have an open space at the back. Arrange the back with care, and the front will take care of itself.—New York Mercury.

A Bureau of Information For Saturday Shoppers.

It is the last Saturday before the Fourth. This means a busy day. Trade early in the day if you would do so with comfort and convenience.

Auction! Auction!

We were big buyers in the recent auction sale of Rugs by Alexander Smith Sons & Co., the great carpet manufacturers.

Beginning Saturday, July 1, we will for the next ten days sell Rugs at prices which are actually less than the regular auction prices. Like this:

[illegible] Moquette Rugs, [illegible] each, regular price [illegible].

[illegible] Moquette Rugs, [illegible] each, regular price [illegible].

[illegible] Moquette Rugs, [illegible] each, regular price [illegible].

In addition to the Rug sale we offer all our best Ingrain Carpets at 59c a yard.

All our Cotton-and-wool Ingrain Carpets at 35c a yard, worth 45c and 50c.

Hosiery.

We have just received two cases of the Men's "World's Fair" Half-Hose. Well made—seamless—all sizes—put up six pairs in a box—65c a box—well worth 15c a pair.

See small east window.

Summer Underwear.

One case Ladies' Ribbed Vests—low neck and sleeveless—14c each, 3 for 40c.

Parasols in White.

An exposition in White Parasols. Today we will make a specialty of White Coaching Parasols in Satin Stripe, Surah and India Silk. Some plain, some ruffled and some trimmed with lace.

Prices—$1.29, $2.29, [illegible], $3.49, $4.29, [illegible] $1.50 to $6.

A Traveler's Outfit.

For ladies who anticipate a journey this summer a Storm Serge Suit, Shirt Waist and Cravenette garment makes a desirable outfit.

Nearly everybody has seen the Suits and Waists. All have not seen the Cravenettes.

It is a long garment absolutely showerproof and serves the two fold purpose of Waterproof and Traveling Garment.

On sale in Cloak Room.

Men's Furnishings.

[illegible]

A Men's Unlaundered Shirt with Colored Bosom for 49c each. It is convenient because white collars and cuffs can be worn with it. It is cheap because we know that the same shirt laundered is being sold for $1.00.

Men's Silk Stripe Outing Shirts—fine [illegible] made, 59c, well worth $1.

[illegible]—Men's White Unlaundered [illegible]—made by G. D. [illegible]—[illegible] made, regular price 75c.

All three styles can be seen in our large display window.

NORWICH AND VICINITY

CITY NEWS.

Water rates are payable today.

No session of the city court has been held for two days.

The Methodist lawn party held Wednesday evening netted fully $100.

Miss Bertha Metzger of Greeneville is making a short visit to the metropolis.

The graduating exercises of the Town street district school were held Friday.

The steamer Ella will make an excursion to Watch Hill at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Frank Webster and son of Keene, N. H., are visiting Mrs. Jacob Metzger of Greeneville.

First open-air mass meeting for men on the steamboat wharf, Sunday afternoon, at four o'clock.

Zimmerman, Windle and other fast riders are expected at the Rockville Wheel Club races this afternoon.

Senator Alexander C. Robertson of Montville, will assume the position of railroad commissioner today.

The members of Council No. 24, O. U. A. M., will attend service at the Central M. E. church tomorrow evening.

A party of nineteen Norwich women were entertained Thursday at the home of Mrs. G. A. Haskell at Jewett City.

Dr. J. F. Gardner of Groton, has been appointed medical examiner for the town of Ledyard by Coroner A. F. Park.

The Rev. J. D. Herr, D. D., will deliver a special address to men at the meeting on the wharf Sunday.

F. G. Luffy, formerly manager of the Lyle's Beach hotel, Fishers Island, will conduct the business at Bush Point, this season.

Charles and Henry Haskell of Church street, both Yale graduates, put a blue Yale flag to float upon their residence, in honor of the victory of their college.

The Clippers meet the Mossup ball nine on the Greeneville grounds this afternoon. Driscoll and Counihan and Stevenson and Smith will be the opposing batteries.

Gurdon Cady will prompt and a first-class orchestra will furnish music at the Fourth of July picnic to be given in the grove at the south end of Gardner's Lake.

It is now made public that Commander Samuel Belden will succeed Commodore Pyth at the New London Naval station, July 13. Commander Belden was previously attached to this station.

Temperance Evangelist Murphy is expected to be heard at Roseland park, July Fourth. He is to go from Woodstock directly to Montreal where he is to address the Christian Endeavor convention.

Superintendent Palmer severed his connection with the Berlin Bridge company Friday and leaves for other parts today. He has been in the employ of the concern for several years, and has won a name for faithful efficiency.

Harry Jennings and Frank Harwood of the Laurel Hill Acmes, ran seventy-five yards on the Frost street course Friday afternoon, Jennings conceding his opponent three yards handicap. Harwood won by five feet.

The ample decks of the steamer City of Richmond were proffered to a number of invited guests for the boat race Friday, and at its conclusion a sumptuous repast was served by the owners and officers. Norwich guests speak highly of their entertainment.

A special train will leave New London for Montreal to carry representatives of the Christian Endeavor unions to the convention to be held there, at 5.45 a. m. on Wednesday, July 5th. The train will leave Norwich at 6.15. It will reach its destination at 7.15 in the evening.

About thirty of the pupils of Miss Mary Desmond's room at the Falls school, had a picnic in Wheeler's woods yesterday afternoon. The picnic was given to the children by their teacher in honor of her little cousin, Louise M. Hurley of Malden, Mass., and all the children present had a enjoyable time.

Yesterday afternoon the men began asphalting the roadway of the new Laurel Hill bridge. The entrance arches on both sides are now finished by an ornamental iron border, the apex of each arch being capped by an iron plate, in which are cast the names of the builders, the local selectmen and the bridge engineer.

A special train will leave at 12 m. today for New London and there connect with the steamer City of Richmond for New York. This excursion gives a daylight sail through Long Island sound, arriving in New York early Saturday night. On the return trip the boat will leave New York at 5.30 Monday night. A few good staterooms can be secured at Noyes & Davis'.

A correspondent from a neighboring town says: "The continued dry weather in June will cause the crop of hay to be lighter even than last year. Corn and potatoes are backward, many fields not having been hoed the first time. Many highways have not been repaired this season and public travel suffers much inconvenience in traveling over rough roads that ought to have been put in order long ago."

Two Linemen Injured.

The horse driven by three Southern New England Telephone company linemen who were making connections for the Yale-Harvard race on the Groton side Friday, became imbued with the hilarious spirit of the hour, and started off on a speed contest on his own account. The three occupants of the vehicle were powerless to stop him. James T. Woods of this city jumped and fell on his back, injuring it painfully. H. S. Larkins of New London fell out and was run over, cutting his head and hand deeply and bruising him badly. The animal's headway was finally stopped by the remaining lineman.

The Corner Stone Will be Laid on Monday.

The corner stone of the new Masonic temple on Broadway will be laid on Monday afternoon by Joseph K. Wheeler of Hartford, grand secretary of the grand lodge of Connecticut, who has been delegated by M. W. G. M. Samuel Bassett to perform that duty. An emergent communication of the grand lodge will be held in Somerset lodge room at 3 p. m. on Monday. The fraternity generally will participate in the exercises.

VETERANS AT GETTYSBURG

New York Survivors Dedicate a Monument on the Field.

7,500 G. A. R. MEN IN LINE.

The Exercises Witnessed by Fully Ten Thousand People.

GETTYSBURG, July 2.—New York state's handsome monument to the heroes who fell in the battle of Gettysburg was dedicated today with impressive ceremonies. It was the great day of the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the three days' fight. Seven thousand New York veterans, governors of two states, the surviving generals of the battle and thousands of veterans and visitors from other states were present.

The first feature of the day was the reception of Major-General George S. Green by his brigade on Culp's hill. A platform had been erected among the trees where the men held the most important point on the right of the battle of the second day's fight. Within view of a score of monuments, erected to mark the place where their comrades fell, the survivors and their guests gathered and saluted their brigade commander, who is in his ninety-third year, and is the oldest living participant in the battle of Gettysburg.

General Robert Avery presided. On the platform were Governor Flower of New York and staff, Major General Daniel E. Sickles, Major General Slocum, Colonel [illegible], who was wounded not fifty yards away, and the representatives of the 60th, 78th, 102d, 137th and 149th New York regiments. Standing about under the trees or seated in carriages were nearly a thousand New York regiments and their friends.

The Rev. O. W. Severson of the 137th New York volunteers offered prayer. The veterans then sang "America," after which General Slocum made an address which was heartily applauded.

General Green then stood up and was cheered and cheered again. He also spoke.

Governor Flower was then introduced. He said that as time rolls on, it will be still more clearly established that the men he addressed fought in the best army and for the best cause that have ever existed. He said: This was the turning point, just here, and you all may consider yourself lucky to have been in it. No prouder epitaph could be placed on a man's tomb than "He was a Union soldier."

General Sickles was given a hearty cheer, as he stood with the aid of his crutches and congratulated the veterans on getting together on the old battle ground. After all had joined in singing "Marching Through Georgia" and the Rev. Mr. Foley had pronounced the benediction, the veterans formed in line and shook hands with Generals Green, Sickles, Slocum and Avery, while Battery C of the Third artillery fired a salute. Many of the veterans walked on with tears on their cheeks after the hearty handclasps of their old commander.

At 1 o'clock the veterans went to the places assigned to them for the parade. The generals and the guests of honor [illegible] at 1.30 p. m. and took their positions on the square. The Soldier's Home band from Bath, N. Y., led the procession. First came the honorary marshal, General George S. Green and staff, in a carriage. He was escorted by 25 men of his old brigade, who walked at the side of his carriage. Following them were veterans bearing 25 flags of honor out of respect to the memory of commanders of brigades or higher command, who were killed during the battle of Gettysburg or are since deceased. The grand marshal of the day, Major General Daniel Butterfield came first. Next came the regulars under Captain Lancaster, U. S. A., acting as escort of honor to the generals, the governors, the commissioners and invited guests.

With the escort were carriages containing General Sickles, General Slocum, General Joseph B. Carr and Major Charles A. Richardson of the board of Gettysburg commissioners of New York state, Governor Flower of New York and staff, Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania and staff, Bishop Henry C. Potter of New York, and the Rev. T. P. Eye of Gettysburg, the Rev. Dr. W. B. Derrick and Dewitt C. Sprague. Next came carriages containing the invited guests. General Ira Hedges acted as special marshal. The column started at 1.45 and passing up Baltimore street between the lines of veterans proceeded to the national cemetery. Crowds of people along the sidewalks cheered the different generals.

The veterans fell in behind the carriages and marched in four grand divisions, led respectively by Brevet Brigadier General Oliver, Brevet Brigadier General [illegible], Major General Shaler and Brigadier General Reynolds. There were [illegible] thousand five hundred Grand Army men in the column. The green knoll at the head of which the monument stands, was reached when the head of the line arrived. The space in front of the speaker's stand was reserved for the veterans. The [illegible] flags of honor were placed in the first line. Back of them, four where each regiment stood, were the bullet-riddled regimental flags that were in the battle of Gettysburg.

At 2.30 the last of the veterans arrived. The space surrounding the monument was completely filled with people, fully 10,000 being present. General Sickles called the gathering to order.

The Rev. Dr. W. B. Derrick, the colored veteran preacher, then offered prayer. General Sickles then, as president of the board of Gettysburg monument commissioners, delivered the introductory address. Bishop Potter then followed in the dedication address.

Governor Pattison made a speech of welcome and then Governor Flower delivered an address.

DeWitt Sprague of Washington, D. C., then read a poem for the occasion. The quartette sang "America" and the concourse joined in.

General Green made a brief speech and then the guns of Battery C thundered a salute, and the crowd dispersed.

One of the incidents of the day was the presentation of a gold banner to C. A. Phelps of the Fifth New York battery, who was known as Gen. Grant's scout.

STATE PRISON DIRECTORS.

Charles F. Bollman of New Haven Elected President.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 2.—The new state prison board of directors met at the prison Saturday forenoon. Mr. Charles F. Bollman of New Haven was elected president, and Mr. Edward M. Chapin of New Hartford, secretary. General Haven is continued in charge of the prison for the present.

The position of warden will not be acted on until Friday, July 7, to which date the board was adjourned.

MRS. BABCOCK IN DANGER.

Barber Lantry Threatened to Shoot a New Britain Milliner.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., July 2.—Mrs. Frank C. Babcock's timely appeal for police protection Saturday morning and Chief Johnson's wise precaution prevented a probable tragedy in this city.

Mrs. Babcock is a well-known milliner here, and she keeps a boarding house in the Commercial block. One of her boarders is Thomas E. Lantry, the barber, who has been separated from his wife for years.

Lantry's conduct for some time has been offensive to Mrs. Babcock, and her husband, who was formerly a special policeman, had ordered him out of the house.

Lantry has frequently threatened to shoot Mrs. Babcock and her husband. Saturday morning he was unusually cranky and annoying.

In the presence of Mrs. Babcock he placed a loaded revolver to his forehead and threatened to take his life. He swore at Mrs. Babcock and said he would kill her first.

Mrs. Babcock applied to Chief Johnson for protection. The chief went with her to the Park hotel, where he advised her to remain. Mrs. Babcock telegraphed to her husband, who is in Tariffville, to come home.

Until Mr. Babcock arrives in New Britain nothing will be done in regard to the arrest of Lantry.

As all the persons concerned are well known, the affair has caused a sensation in the city. Lantry denies Mrs. Babcock's statement.

CONNECTICUT FIRES.

Barns on the Starr Estate at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., July 2.—Fire destroyed the large barn on the Starr estate, opposite the city hall, late Friday afternoon. The four horses in the building were saved. The barn was wholly destroyed. The flames communicated to two other buildings adjoining. A barn, owned by the Starr estate, was partly burned and will have to be rebuilt. The loss will be about $3,000; partly insured. It is supposed that the fire was started by boys who had been playing in the vicinity with firecrackers and had been driven away several times.

Nickle Plating Factory at Plainville.

PLAINVILLE, Conn., July 2. — The frame building, owned by Clark & Cowles, situated north of the depot in Plainville, was totally consumed by fire Saturday morning at 3 o'clock. The building was about 100 feet long, 40 feet wide, one story high and was occupied by C. H. Oaks, representative from Plainville, nickle-plating, and by Charles Johnson, bone-turning.

There is no theory as to the origin of the fire, but it is supposed to have been purely accidental. The building in question was nearly new, an old building on the same [illegible] having been burned about three weeks since.

HYDROPHOBIA.

Two Persons and a Dozen Cows Bitten by a Mad Dog.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 2.—Great excitement prevails among the farmers in Easton. About two weeks ago a mad dog passed through the village and no less than a dozen cows were bitten, [illegible] Case were attacked. Within a day or two seven of the cows have died of hydrophobia, and in each instance it has appeared in its most violent form. The animals have become mad and run about the fields, dashing against fences and buildings until they died in great agony. Powell, who was bitten, is living in great fear and is nearly crazy, but as yet no symptoms have appeared in his case or in that of the boy Case. Both will be taken to the Pasteur institute, New York, tomorrow for treatment.

Ex-Gov. Wetmore Undergoes a Painful Surgical Operation.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Ex. Gov. George Peabody Wetmore, who has undergone a painful surgical operation, was reported this evening to be resting quietly. His medical attendants said that he had rallied well from the strain and shock and that his condition was not discouraging. On June 17, at Newport, his right arm was fractured and his shoulder dislocated by the running away of his horse. This dislocation had to be reduced and the arm broken and reset.

They Saw the Sea Serpent.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 2.—Capt. Murphy of the schooner Ella B. and Captain Rhynard of the schooner Lady Speedwell report that on Thursday they and the crews of several other vessels saw the sea serpent off Judique. They estimate it to have been from 120 to 150 feet long. They were close enough to see the flippers on its side. The monster was heading for Pasquit island.

Yale's Foot Ball Eleven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 2.—It is announced tonight that the Yale foot ball eleven will meet this year about three weeks before the opening of college. Manager E. O. Holter has decided to bring the candidates for positions behind the line to Travis island about September 1 and to use the grounds and houses of the New York Athletic club at that place. The members of the rush line will be brought together at the same place shortly afterwards and remain till the beginning of the college year.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Bulletin assumes no responsibility for communications printed under the above heading. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters.

Does Not Like the T Rails.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad to see that members of the council are alive to the evils of the "T" rail. It was foisted on us at the time of the Taftville extension on the plea that no other rails were obtainable just then, the iron mills being behind in orders, and the extension would have to go over another year. Just when, and how, they got permission to lay them through the city, is a trifle obscure. That the trolley system can not be used safely and successfully except on the T rail, may be classed with a previous statement that we should have dimension poles within the city limits, where iron ones were not used.

There is no difficulty in operating cars on open rails on the State street hill in Albany, where the grade is so steep that the old horse cars had to have double brakes to hold them.

In Utica open rails are used, and those two cities average twice the snow and ice that we do. A corporation which has hills cut down, bridges built, streets widened and corners cut off for its convenience, should have the public spirit to give the city a rail which is not an outrage on other carriage travel and extensions genuinely adapted to the public need. The council represent the people; let them be true to the trust reposed in them.

"PUBLIC SPIRIT."

YALE DEFEATED SATURDAY.

Thousands Witness the Magnificent Game at the Polo Grounds.

HARVARD 5, YALE 4.

Scores in the League Games Saturday—Sunday Games.

NEW YORK, July 2.—About 15 000 people saw the Harvard nine defeat the Yales in a magnificent contest at the Polo grounds Saturday, thus winning the third game and the intercollegiate championship. Following is the score:

Harvard..........[illegible]—5
Yale..........[illegible]—4

Earned runs, Harvard 2, Yale 1; first base by errors, Harvard 2, Yale [illegible]; left on bases, Harvard 4, Yale 2; first base on balls, off Highlands 1, off Carter [illegible]; struck out, by Highlands 6, by Carter [illegible]; home run, Mason; three base hit, [illegible]; two base hit, Sullivan; sacrifice hits, Hallowell, [illegible]; stolen bases, Mason, Hallowell, Upton, Murphy, [illegible], Case, Speer; passed ball, Mason 1; umpires Bond and Currie; time of game [illegible].

Cincinnati 5, Washington 4.

CINCINNATI, July 2.—Cincinnati beat Washington Saturday in one of the closest games of the season. Canavan's two sensational catches in the ninth saved the day for the home team. The day was dark and rainy, and the attendance was the smallest of the season, 1,076. The score:

Cincinnati..........[illegible]—5
Washington..........[illegible]—4

St. Louis 6, Boston 12.

ST. LOUIS, July 2.—The Browns played a good game up to the sixth inning Saturday, when they went to pieces and Boston won with ease. Gleason was batted hard and received poor support. Benson's work at short was wretched, but otherwise he did well. Attendance, 3,200. The score:

St. Louis..........[illegible]—6
Boston..........[illegible]—12

Cleveland 12, Philadelphia 4.

CLEVELAND, July 2.—After a long, hard uphill chase, Cleveland opened up on Carsey in the tenth inning with a fusilade of hits that knocked out Philadelphia's chances. Attendance 2,000. The score:

Cleveland..........[illegible]—12
Philadelphia..........[illegible]—4

Pittsburg 12, Brooklyn 2.

PITTSBURG, July 2.—Pittsburg played a better all-round game Saturday than for some time, and had no trouble in defeating Brooklyn. Ehret pitched a magnificent game. Foutz relieved Stein at the end of the sixth inning and was effective, Stovey's muff being responsible for two of the runs made off Foutz. Attendance 3,000. The score:

Pittsburg..........[illegible]—12
Brooklyn..........[illegible]—2

Louisville 5, Baltimore 7.

LOUISVILLE, July 2.—Louisville was beaten by the Baltimores Saturday in a [illegible] game. The grounds were in such condition after the rain this morning that brilliant plays were impossible. Louisville batted Mullane in the ninth inning, earning four runs. The score:

Louisville..........[illegible]
Baltimore..........[illegible]

Chicago 0, New York 1.

CHICAGO, July 2.—In Saturday's game, [illegible] with a triple, yet could not score. Duryea sent a grounder to Fuller and Doyle promptly gave Anson his base, pitching the ball out of the box. Decker was nervous and with three balls called struck out. The best Wilmot could do was to pop a fly to Davis. Schriver, the only other "colt" to reach third, was caught napping through poor coaching. The giants scored their run on Tiernan's force out and Davis' hit, which Dungan threw to third to catch Tiernan. The ball struck "Mike" and he scored. The score:

Chicago..........[illegible]—0
New York..........[illegible]—1

SUNDAY GAMES.

Cincinnati 7, Washington 6.

CINCINNATI, July 2.—After two innings and a half had been played the score stood 1 to 0 in favor of Washington, it began to rain and the game was called. It rained for forty minutes and the game was declared off. The base path and pitcher's and catcher's positions were "doctored" with sawdust and another game started at half-past four. This was stubbornly contested. The reds won by a slight margin in the eighth inning. Attendance 4,783. Score:

Cincinnati..........[illegible]—7
Washington..........[illegible]—6

Hits, Cincinnati 14, Washington 11; errors, Cincinnati 2, Washington 5; batteries, Dwyer, King and Vaughn, Maul and Farrell.

Chinamen Have the Right of Appeal.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 2.—Judge Ross, in the United States court, has delivered a decision in the Wong Dip Ken case, in which he decided that the right to appeal from the decision of the commissioner, judge or justice deporting Chinamen under the Geary law could not be denied, that this is vouchsafed to all persons convicted under the constitution. Judge Ross further intimated that imprisonment and deportation of the Chinamen under the Geary law without trial by jury is unconstitutional.

Trouble With the Chippewas at an End.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—General Schofield has received reports from Leech Lake, Minn., indicating that the recent troubles with the Chippewas are at an end; that the Indians are satisfied that the shooting of one of their number by Dr. Walker was purely accidental and that the injured man is now recovering. The troops will not be withdrawn for the present.

Resignation of Superintendent of the Census.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Robert P. Porter, superintendent of the census, has resigned, to take effect immediately.

TRANSCONTINENTAL CUT RATES.

Great Reductions in First-class Rates from Pacific to Atlantic Points.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—The Great Northern railway some time ago attempted to shut out the Canadian Pacific at St. Paul by closing its line against the Canadian Pacific road. The Canadian Pacific has now started a war in transcontinental rates by quoting the following first-class rates which went into effect today: San Francisco to New York and Philadelphia, $52.65, to Boston, Concord, Fitchburg, Mass., and Springfield, Mass., $54.60; Toronto, Detroit and all points on the direct line to Detroit, $44.90; Buffalo, $46.85; Chicago, $45.90 first-class, and $41.40 second class; St. Paul, first-class $40, and second class $32. These rates include meals from San Francisco to Victoria, B. C., on the Canadian Pacific, the trip being all rail from Vancouver eastward.

A Famous Pacer Killed by Lightning.

FREEPORT, Ill., July 2.—A fearful rainstorm, accompanied by lightning, prevailed in this section Friday night. The large stock barn of M. F. McHenry, at Taylor's driving park, was struck by lightning and Wilkes Russell, the famous pacer, who has gone a trial mile in 2.09 and has a record of 2.15, was killed. He was eight years old and valued at $50,000.

John Lick's Nephew to Get $500,000.

SHAMOKIN, Penn., July 2.—William Bushore of Shamokin has received word that he has fallen heir to $500,000 by the recent death of John Lick, of observatory fame. The latter was an uncle of Bushore.

The Long-distance Bicycle Race.

BERLIN, July 2.—Thirty-seven out of the 117 contestants in the long-distance bicycle race from Floridsdorf, Austria, to this city succeeded in covering the distance within the prescribed fifty hours. Thirty-four of the riders did not change their bicycles during the entire trip of 370 miles.

$6,000 Fire Loss at South Norwalk.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., July 2.—Fire this morning caused a loss of $6,000 in the Hallock Bros.' box factory on Raymond street. Cause unknown. This is the fifth or sixth time that the fire has begun under mysterious circumstances.

Drowned While Bathing.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 2.—Roderick Sprick, aged 20, was drowned while bathing near the mouth of the Westfield river opposite this city, this afternoon.

A PATRIOTIC SERMON.

The Rev. A. W. Kingsley Speaks to Councils No. 20 and No. 22, O. U. A. M., at the Central M. E. Church Sunday Evening.

Quite a large audience gathered at the Central M. E. church Sunday evening. Councils No. 20 and No. 22, Order of United American Mechanics being present in a body, by special invitation of the pastor.

Across the back of the pulpit platform was draped a picture of George Washington, while upon either side was a pyramid of flowers. The pulpit desk was draped with the national colors and six flags [illegible] from each [illegible] the front of the platform. The altar rail and the choir stand were also covered with the stars and stripes.

The hymns "America," "Come, Thou Almighty King," and Coronation were sung heartily by the choir and congregation. The anthem "Saviour, breathe an evening blessing" was rendered by the choir.

Rev. A. W. Kingsley, announced for his text Romans 14, 7: "For no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself," and explained it to mean not that selfishness had been banished from the heart of every man in the world, but simply that it is utterly impossible for any man to live to himself.

This principle, he said, would apply also to lodges, societies and even to churches, each of which, he said, did not create righteousness, but were simply instruments in extending it.

Mr. Kingsley commended the general work of the O. U. A. M., as he understood it, and spoke especially to them of their liberties as American citizens. He said that the maintenance of the public school-system was the safeguard of American liberty. The blessings which we share alike in this free country were pictured in a very eloquent manner by a few very pleasing illustrations taken from both ancient and modern history. In closing, Mr. Kingsley presented the religion of Jesus Christ as the best and greatest ally of all good in the world and expressed very tenderly his wish to all members of this order that they might be true Christian men and each live lives bearing close imitation to the meek and lowly Jesus. It was an eloquent and scholarly discourse and commanded close attention.

Graduation Exercises—Personal.

Miss Bessie N. Leonard has arrived home for the summer from the Kindergarten school at New Britain. When she returns next fall, it will be as a teacher.

The graduation exercises of the class of '93 took place in the Congregational church Friday afternoon. All the exercises were interesting and instructive. The large audience were well and pleasantly entertained. The presenting of the diplomas by William L. Bliven and the last words of final charge, by the principal, Charles Chapman, were very impressive. The class motto, "Perseverance brings success," was prettily framed in front.

The graduating class are: Annie Florence Chapman, May Agnes Blake, Ivah May Payne, Mary Frances Parkhurst, Grace Eva Duce, Samuel George Blake, Anna Laura Chapman.

Each participant in the exercises was heartily applauded and given a pretty basket of flowers.

DEATH FOLLOWS ITS COURSE.

Terror and Destruction in the Wake of Rushing Waters.

TEN LIVES LOST.

Deplorable Condition of People in the Path of the Bonnet Crevasse.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 2.—Suddenly and almost without warning, the waters pouring through the Bonnet crevasse, now 800 feet wide, swept down the New river basin last Tuesday night, carrying destruction and terror in their path, imprisoning unfortunate people in their houses and cabins and driving them into the garrets and in many cases to the roofs. There many of them are yet, huddled together, enduring the pangs of hunger where they have no means of cooking food, and it will be fortunate if all are succored before starvation and exposure find victims among them. So far as reported ten lives have been lost.

Marvellous Speed of A New Steam Yacht.

PHILADELPHIA, July 2. — The new steam yacht Yankee Doodle, McBride Brothers of this city owners and builders, had a satisfactory trial trip Friday afternoon. The new boat is 70 feet long and 7 feet beam. The boiler supplied two 5x8 engines, running 500 revolutions a minute, with all the steam required, and was blowing off at the safety valve nearly all the time, with the throttle valve wide open, supplying steam to the engine with a three-inch steam pipe. The hull is of very light construction, but strong and substantial. One who has designed a number of boats, in speaking of the new craft, said her performance was simply marvellous, and that under the watch and running against time, one need not be surprised to see her log 25 miles an hour or more.

Trial of Speed Between Sound Steamboats.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 2.—The big sound steamers Richard Peck of the New Haven line and the Puritan of the Fall River line, had another trial of speed on the sound this afternoon and the officers of the Peck claim to have shown the Puritan a clean pair of heels long before the end of the course was reached. The story is told in certain quarters tonight that on Thursday last the officials of the New Haven line sent a formal challenge to the commander of the Fall River steamer which met with a prompt acceptance.

This is probably the largest sale of lumber in Norwich in one day in the last fifteen years. This does not include their city trade, which they report as double last season's business.

Low Foreign Rates.

James Duggan, the druggist, is agent for North German Lloyd and Liverpool Steamship Companies, and can give the lowest rates to persons going to London or Liverpool. He also issues foreign drafts. Call and see him for all the particulars.

Norwich Business College.

The summer term of the Norwich Business college closed on the 30th of June. The school celebrated the event with their friends at the rooms of the college by a well rendered programme consisting of readings, music, etc. The class supper was pronounced a success. New plans are being made for the coming fall term. As it is now the custom with many business schools, a scholarship will be offered to the students taking a full commercial or short-hand course, thereby reducing largely the cost of tuition.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

The Nominations All In.

The nominations for the four new majors for the four regiments in the C. N. G. are now complete, the last one having been received Saturday by General Haven from the Fourth regiment, whose officers nominated Captain Hendric of Company C, Stamford. The nominations from the other regiments are: First, Captain Schultz; Second, Captain Dickenson of Waterbury; Third, Captain Thayer of Putnam.

These nominations must lie with the governor for ten days before he appoints them to give time for any possible objections which may be raised against these nominations as was the case when Tom Waller was governor and Colonel Watson of the Fourth was nominated for the colonelcy. Some objection was raised but was overcome during the ten days and he was appointed. General Haven says that no better selections could be made.

The Work of the Legislature.

The public and special acts passed by the present legislature will reach about 1,300, if the estimate of the acts that reach Clerk of Bills Buchanan is correct.

The record is a good one. It is four years since the legislature did business. One might reasonably expect therefore that double the number of bills passed at the session of 1889 would have been passed at the session of 1893. The figures show that in 1889, 268 public and 591 special acts were passed, a total of 751 or about 63 per cent. of the total of bills this year, actual and estimated. Over 2,100 bills, resolutions and petitions were presented this session.

By special act the laws will not take effect, unless otherwise specified, July 1; but thirty days later, so that people may in theory have a chance to read them. This makes effective the reason for the old law that generally avails, by which this length of time, or more, for study is supposed to be given to the public. Usually the legislature finishes considerably before July 1.

Watch Hill Notes.

Watch Hill hotels and private cottages are being filled slowly. Several of the former have undergone repairs recently and the Plimpton, Watch Hill and Larkin houses have added fire escapes to their list of conveniences. A new asphalt tennis court has been laid out at the Watch Hill house.

A new plank walk leads from the landing to the life saving station and the fields between the station and the lighthouse have been fenced in. The lighthouse itself has been repainted, and keeper Fowler has laid out several attractive flower beds.

On the ocean beach is the wreck of a schooner which went ashore there last winter while a part of the hull of another but smaller vessel lies upon the rocks beyond the lighthouse.

The Episcopal chapel is also receiving an improvement in the form of a newly painted spire. A tablet on the door states the hour of Sunday morning service.

The merry-go-round is ready to entertain the children, and the shore dinner house has opened its doors.

A Handsome Landscape.

Mr. J. D. Crocker has just finished and has on exhibition in his studio on Shetucket street a landscape entitled "Forge Brook." It is one of the many scenes which the artistic taste of A. P. Hitchcock brought to the notice of lovers of beautiful landscapes in his album entitled "Views In and Around Norwich;" and is situated near Forge brook, Preston, and includes a well balanced view of water, pasture, woods and hills. Although it is an Eastern Connecticut scene it is more beautiful than scenes painted on the Doon or on the Loire, and is a work of art is superior to many paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars.

In the right foreground is an alder-fringed and wood-bordered cove with strong shadows in the water. The left is a piece of sloping pasture land with a clump of finely painted elms casting a noon-day shadow, and the play of strong light across the path affords opportunity for a pretty play of color. A man and dog approaching by a well-worn path add life to the foreground. The middle distance is carefully worked up and the distant woods and hills are characteristic of views in this vicinity.

It is Mr. Crocker's best work, and all appreciators of fine landscapes should call at his studio and see this picture, the beauty of which cannot be expressed in a short notice.

CITY COURT APPOINTMENTS.

S. A. Crandall Succeeds A. A. Browning as City Attorney.

At the regular session of the city court Saturday morning Judge Kellogg administered the city attorney's oath to Senator S. Ashbel Crandall and of the court clerk to George E. Parsons. The retiring officers are Amos A. Browning and Wm. H. Jennings, Jr., the latter having filled the position of clerk for about six years.

The only case to be disposed of was that of Wm. Kilroy, continued. As Kilroy desired counsel, the case was again continued until Monday. Bonds were fixed at $100.

JOHNSON ELECTED CAPTAIN.

A Norwich Boy Will Captain the Yale 'Varsity in '94.

Immediately after Friday's Yale-Harvard race the Yale crew held a meeting at the quarters in Gale's Ferry, and elected Fred. Allen Johnson of Norwich as captain of next year's 'varsity crew.

Mr. Johnson graduated from the scientific department of the Norwich Free Academy in 1891, and entered the scientific department at Yale university in September of that year. While a high school boy he had won prizes at the annual field day in running, walking, jumping and putting the shot, and was also a prominent member of the Chelsea Boat club. When he began his college course he turned entirely to rowing, and was in training for the freshmen crew when in the spring of 1892, Bob Cook called him to the position of bow in the 'varsity eight. Although disabled by sickness just before the race, he recovered in time to row a good oar in the victorious crew on July 1.

This year he again rowed at bow, and gained the reputation of being the best man in that place that Yale has presented for five years.

Next year, if he can increase his weight enough, he will row nearer the stroke. It had been expected that R. D. Paine would succeed to the captaincy next year as he has rowed a strong oar for two years, but after he was removed owing to overweight a week ago it was settled that Johnson would get the coveted place.

APPOINTED BY THE GOVERNOR.

New London County Commissioners, Whom the Legislature Didn't Elect.

The discussion between the political parties did not prevent agreements as to the selection of county commissioners by the legislature for any of the counties excepting New London county. The democrats favored the appointment of Clark W. Reynolds of Griswold, Frank W. Tracy of Norwich (dem.) and John T. Batty (rep.) of Groton, and the senate passed a resolution appointing the gentlemen named. The republican house passed a resolution appointing Mr. Reynolds, Gilbert H. Hewitt of Norwich (rep.) and Silas Wheeler of Groton (dem.). The two houses could not agree, although several caucuses and many conferences were held, and the matter was finally left for the governor to decide, he having the power to fill vacancies. The two commissioners whose terms have expired were John T. Batty of Groton and George A. Haskell of Griswold (reps.), and Saturday the term of the other member of the board, State Senator Nathan G. Ayer of Preston, also ended.

Governor Morris was called upon, therefore, to appoint an entire new board and the appointments were made Saturday. He appointed Charles McChesney of Norwich (dem.), Clark W. Reynolds of Griswold (dem.) and reappointed John T. Batty of Groton (rep.). Their appointment is from July 1, 1893, until Wednesday of the third week of the next regular session of the general assembly, January, 1895.

The New London morning Telegraph pays the following high tribute to Mr. Ayer: He entered the board July 1, 1883. In that year the county was in debt to the amount of $15,000, and on the suggestion of Mr. Ayer a tax of half a mill was laid in 1884 to clear this debt. The tax was laid and the debt was wiped out. Since that time the finances have been in so satisfactory condition that it has not been found necessary to make another levy.

County Treasury J. S. Lathrop has now over $12,000 in the treasury, and the only bills left unpaid are the regular monthly June bills of the Norwich and New London jails and the New London county home.

There has been paid out, since Mr. Ayer entered the board, outside of the regular expenses, $5,000 for the property of the county children's home at Norwich, and $8,000 for new cells and brickwork for the jail in New London, and also the expense of a new system of heating for the jails in the two cities.

Mr. Ayer was clerk of the board for three years and chairman six, and leaves with a record of duty well accomplished. When George Haskell of Jewett City and John T. Batty of Mystic retired from the board, January 18 last, it left Mr. Ayer the only member of the board, and he has transacted all the business of the board since that time.

The county home for children being convenient to Mr. Ayer's home he was a daily visitor to that institution. There are now twenty-four children being cared for there.

TURF FRAUDS.

Attempts to Palm Off an Old Racer for a New Recruit.

I well remember, writes a contributor to The London Telegraph, attending Croxton Park races in 1844 and looking at a lot of horses which were being led about prior to a Farmers' Plate, which, in those days, was always a popular race at Croxton Park, and attracted large fields, giving occasion to heavy betting year after year. The race was open only to half-bred horses. As I looked at the animals preparing to take part in the Farmers' Plate my attention was caught by one with whose shape and make, and with [illegible] other characteristics which appeal only to the trainer's eye, I seemed to be perfectly familiar. Upon closer inspection I soon recognized an old friend. The horse in question went, when under my charge at Goodwood, by the name of Bracelet, and was as thoroughbred as Eclipse, being the son of that superb sire Sultan, and of a mare named Goldpin, who was bred by Lord Egremont. Bracelet was born in 1835, and was therefore 9 years old in 1844. One of his legs gave symptoms of not standing training, and Lord George Bentinck made me a present of him. So soon as I had satisfied myself about the identity of the horse I took stock of the rough looking fellow, clad in the garb of a farm laborer, who was leading him about, and proceeded to ask him what that horse might be. His reply came glibly from his mouth, without a moment's delay. "His name is Go-Ahead, four years old. He is by a thoroughbred horse out of a half-bred hunting mare belonging to my master." "Indeed," I rejoined, "then go back to your master and tell him that his horse's true name is Bracelet, by Sultan, that he is a pure thoroughbred, and 9 years old instead of 4, and that he formerly belonged, first to the Duke of Richmond and then to Lord George Bentinck." I suppose the man, who was as far from being a farm laborer as the horse that he led was from being half-bred, told his master what I said, for I saw nothing more of the supposed 4-year-old, who did not run for the Farmers' plate.

FAULT WAS TRYON'S.

Admitted Responsibility for Victoria Disaster.

NARROW ESCAPE OF WHOLE FLEET.

The Sight Was Most Appalling—Blame Placed Where It Belongs.

[illegible] her figurehead on the Victoria's main deck. All the ships in the fleet seeing the danger began to lower and send off boats to the aid of the Victoria's crew, but Vice Admiral Tryon, evidently believing that the Victoria would float, ordered the boats back to their ships.

The Camperdown nevertheless sent her boats to the rescue. Tryon's chief anxiety was for the safety of his ship. Captain Bourke, seeing that it was impossible to save the ship, ordered the men to save themselves as best they could. Vice Admiral Tryon Remained On the Vessel Until She Sank 13 minutes after the collision happened. Many who succeeded in scrambling upon the bottom of the ship as she turned over were killed by being struck by the blades of the propeller.

The Camperdown had a narrow escape from sinking. When she reached Tripoli after the accident she was five feet down by the bows. In consequence of the collision the other ships of the fleet incurred a great risk of colliding also.

All who witnessed the disaster describe the sight as most appalling.

A special dispatch received at Plymouth from Malta confirms the cause of the disaster. It is clear beyond controversy that if the order signaled from the Victoria had been fully executed every pair of the ships would have come into collision. The other vessels, however, observed what would happen in time to prevent the disaster to the whole squadron.

An eyewitness of the collision declares that the cause of the disaster was the impossibility of turning 16 points when the ships were only six cable lengths apart. This statement implies that Vice Admiral Tryon, in ordering the maneuver known as changing columns at the time he did,

Was Responsible for the Accident.

Important dispatches have been received at the admiralty office from Rear Admiral Albert H. Markham, in which, it is said, he places the blame for the disaster which befell the battleship Victoria where, in his opinion, it belongs.

The admiralty officials refuse to divulge the contents of the telegrams to the press until after the court martial shall have been held at Portsmouth to ascertain every fact connected with the loss of the battleship.

Every effort is being made at Malta to keep in seclusion the survivors of the disaster who arrived there yesterday and to prevent them from talking about the collision. The government will be questioned in the house of commons on Monday as to the reasons for this attempt to maintain secrecy.

COLLISION INEVITABLE.

Perfect Discipline Was Maintained—No Trace of a Panic.

VALETTA, Malta, July 2.—Notwithstanding the efforts that are being made by the naval authorities to prevent the survivors of the Victoria disaster from giving any information concerning the loss of the vessel, a reliable and full story of the accident has been obtained.

A subofficer who was attached to the Victoria says: "The fleet was maneuvering when Vice Admiral Tryon signaled to the first division to turn 16 points to port and to the second to turn 16 points in, starboard.

The object of this maneuver was to bring the ships in position for anchoring. Vice Admiral Tryon either forgot or mistook the distance between the two columns, which were six cable lengths, 3600 feet apart.

The leading ships having turned toward each other in a circle the diameter of which was three cable lengths, a collision was inevitable.

The Camperdown struck the Victoria on the starboard side, midway between the cathead and the turret. When Rear Admiral Markham saw that his ship was bound to strike the Victoria he signalled for the Camperdown's engines to be reversed.

It was too late, however, to much check the Camperdown's headway, and she struck the Victoria a terrible blow.

Not only did the ram of the Camperdown penetrate the flagship, but her fore castle was shoved 10 feet under the fore castle of the Victoria.

A bugle call was sounded on the flagship calling all hands to their stations and the order given to close the water-tight doors in the bulkheads a minute before the collision occurred.

The Camperdown was swinging rapidly

LONDON, July 2.—The Times correspondent at Malta says that he learns that Vice Admiral Tryon admitted that the accident to the Victoria was all his fault. Rear Admiral Markham, realizing the impossibility of executing the order to deviate 16 points while the columns were so close, did not respond promptly, but the Victoria again signaled "What are you doing?" Thereupon the Camperdown obeyed the order. It is asserted that Staff Commander Smith of the Victoria remarked to Vice Admiral Tryon: "There is no room for the ships to turn in," but Tryon replied: "Let her go." Then it became a question which ship would strike the other.

The Camperdown struck the Victoria just in front of the turret, cutting over six feet into the doomed vessel and leaving toward the Victoria, and those on the Victoria barely had time to reach the compartments before the vessels came together.

Then the water rushing into the ship through several of the forward doors prevented access to those compartments. The officers who were in the wardroom felt the shock, which was tremendous, and heard the sound of tearing iron and the rushing of the water inboard.

A bugler sounded the collisional arm, but though everybody aboard the ship knew she was in imminent danger, there was not the slightest trace of a panic. Perfect discipline was maintained and every order was obeyed as soon as given.

EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON

Confident That Country Will Emerge From Troubles Strong and Reliant.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Ex-President Harrison, who stopped over in this city for a day's visit on his way to Cape May, in an interview on the situation of public affairs said to the reporter: "It is singular that a reporter should take the trouble to see me," said the ex-president, smilingly. "I am not in office, but am a practicing lawyer. I also occupy a very peculiar position of being one of the two ex-presidents of the United States. Mr. Cleveland is the other.

This is probably the nearest approach General Harrison ever made to jocularity, but he made the remark in such a kindly way that it was plain that he felt no regret that the peculiar conditions of the last presidential campaign had retired him to private life.

About national affairs the ex-president was willing to express himself in a general way, but he did not care to commit himself to any absolute opinion. On tariff, the financial question, the Behring sea arbitration, the pardon of the anarchists by Governor Altgeld of Illinois and the canvass of Governor McKinley for re-election he had something to say. For 30 years General Harrison has been in public life, and good citizens of this country can understand that his views are well matured and that they are not likely to be hasty. In regard to the tariff, he said he had faith that the American people would not desert the principle and idea of protection, even if the incoming congress did pass a bill tending toward free trade. Of the financial situation he delivered the opinion that all the disturbances was not due to the Sherman law, but could be [illegible] further back.

Governor Altgeld's action he did not care to discuss, saying that everyone could understand his position in the matter. The court of arbitration in Paris, he thought, must be convinced that the attitude of the American counsel was right, and that finally it would be decided that the seal was a domestic and, not a wild animal.

"As for William McKinley, governor of Ohio," said the ex-president earnestly, "every true Republican and good American should hope and work for his success. For nearly half a century the Republican party has been engaged in a constant struggle and the contest is not ended. I have not the least doubt that Ohio is a sure Republican state and that he will be returned."

"What do you think of the free trade propaganda?"

"No man can tell 50 years from now what may be right. The people who have supported and still support the principles of protection believe they have been good Americans and true patriots. It is easy to be deluded by the sophistry of theoretical free trade, but the history of this country shows that we must look after ourselves, and not hope to be aided by outsiders.

"Do not misunderstand me, however," continued General Harrison. "The men and the women of this country are always right in the end, and there are Democratic homes as deeply interested in our prosperity as Republican ones. Our bitter political struggles are the only safety valves for our emotions, and we should respect each other for the intensity of our respective beliefs.

"When trouble comes as we have it now, there is no real question of Republicanism or Democracy. Every man becomes an American and tries to do his best for the common good. I have not the slightest doubt of the issue. We will emerge from all the difficulty strong, reliant and confident of the future of the Republic."

CAPTAIN FRANK JONES.

Leader of Texas Rangers Murdered by Mexican Outlaws.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 2.—Great excitement was created throughout Texas Friday by the killing of Captain Frank Jones of the Texas Rangers by Mexican outlaws.

A dispatch was received here yesterday from Ysleta, stating that Captain Jones and a detachment of Rangers were in pursuit of a band of desperate Mexican horse thieves, and Friday morning were so close upon their trail that he followed them across the Rio Grande river into Mexico. When the thieves reached their native country they made a stand against the rangers, and a fight ensued, in which Captain Jones was shot and killed.

Detachments of rangers and posses of citizens have left Alpine Ysleta and other points to avenge their captain's death. They will cross into Mexico if necessary, and a bloody encounter is imminent.

Captain Jones was one of the best known and bravest and most capable ranger officer in Texas.

Bad Burglar Arrested.

BOSTON, July 2.—The arrest of an exceedingly bad burglar, who is wanted by the United States authorities for breaking and entering the postoffice at Webster, was accomplished at the North end this morning. His name is Frank Loving, alias Frank Smith. He is 30 years old, and claims to hail from Canada. Last night, by his own admission, he broke into the postoffice at Webster, where he stole several hundred dollars' worth of postage stamps. He also broke into several other places in the town.

New Park Commission.

BOSTON, July 2.—Governor Russell on Saturday nominated the park commission, to consist of five members. The present board of three were renominated. It consists of Charles Francis Adams of Quincy, William B. De Las Casas of Malden and Philip A. Chase of Lynn. The new names which the governor sent in as the additional members called for by the act are James Jeffrey Roche of Boston and Abraham L. Richards of Watertown.

Shaw Gets Ten Years.

PORTLAND, Me., July 2.—Judge Webb Saturday morning sentenced William E. Shaw, ex-cashier of the Lincoln National bank at Bath, to 10 years in the state prison. The amount taken by Shaw, $22,000, was made good to the bank by his family.

Among the White Hills.

BOSTON, July 2.—After an interval of three years the Appalachian club returned to the White Mountain region Saturday, leaving in two special cars from the Boston and Lowell depot. The party consisted of about 80 members from all parts of the state. The club will rendezvous at the Waumbeck House, Jefferson.

Probably Incendiary.

BRISTOL, N. H., July 2.—A set of farm buildings in Bridgewater, owned and occupied by James Aiken, were destroyed by fire Saturday morning, together with five cows, a horse, carriages and farming tools. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin. Loss, $3000; insurance, $1500.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Nervous Prostration

And Dyspepsia in its worst form pulled me down until I could not eat nor sleep and felt if I did not soon get relief, I should surely die. As a drowning man catches at a straw, I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had used three bottles I had increased from 125 to 152 pounds, was able to work again and felt a thousand times better. My friends are surprised to see such a change. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine, and its claims are fully justified in my experience."

When the World Falls to Pieces.

The leading English scientists, Jones, Hilton, et al., are figuring on the probabilities of the earth finally collapsing as a result of the modern craze for tapping nature's great gas retorts. They argue that the earth is a huge balloon held up, in part at least, by heat and internal gases, and that when nature's great gas main is eventually exhausted the earth's crust may break in and fall into millions of fragments! Ugh! The very thought of such a calamity is startling. They argue that the steady belching forth of millions of feet of gas every hour of the day and night is surely causing a great vacuum somewhere not far beneath the surface, and that sooner or later the thin archway of earth crust will give way. Then will occur the grand climax of all earthly calamities.—St. Louis Republic.

Would Abolish the Ten Commandments.

Once, when being heckled during an election, a man suddenly shouted from the gallery, "What is Mr. Marry's opinion of the decalogue?" The candidate, turning to his agent, whom he always kept handy at such times, asked, "What on earth does the fellow mean by the decalogue?" The agent explained that the man probably meant something about Sunday trains and Sunday traveling, upon which the candidate replied to his questioner as follows: "I beg to inform my friend in the gallery that so far as I am concerned I would abolish the decalogue altogether."—Leeds (England) Mercury.

A GENERAL'S LEGACY.

Jacques Desmoulins was once a soldier in the French army, but having allied himself with the republican forces he was spotted by the secret police and thrust into La Conciergerie, one of the oldest prisons in the empire.

He had been in cell No. 13 for so many years that he had almost forgotten why he was there, and it was only now and then that the cruel injustice which had been done him presented itself with any feelings which gave rise to rebellion.

He had never once stepped from the damp cell into which he had been thrust, how long ago he knew not, for in that place there was no means for counting the passage of time. Day and night were nearly the same to him, excepting that when he heard the evening bell at 8 o'clock he generally rolled himself in the one old blanket and stretched his limbs upon a rough cot in the corner of the cell. The faint streak of sunlight, which barely found an entrance through the little barred window which looked out over a desolate plain in the rear of the prison, told him that without it was daylight, and accordingly he would arise and sit with his face between his hands and arms upon his knees until his attendant brought his morning meal.

After this had been eaten he passed the time until noon drawing pictures with a stick upon the graveled floor of the cell, working out problems and now and then composing a few words of song. A nap in the afternoon, with a view of the guards as they were called out for parade at 4 o'clock, which could be seen from his window, comprised the monotonous features of each day, and with a few exceptions they occurred regularly with nothing to break the sameness.

Jacques Desmoulins was at times filled with a strong desire to escape from the prison, but when he looked at the heavy stone walls, the huge iron door and remembered that a guard was always kept over the place the idea of such a thing appeared so improbable that he was obliged to give it up. However, he passed many hours trying to solve this question, but as one plan after another presented itself it was discarded. There was still a faint glimmer of hope in the breast of Jacques Desmoulins, and often he said to himself, "Some day I will leave these cruel walls and be a free man again." That day was destined to come, but the circumstances leading to it were of a nature of which the poor prisoner never dreamed.

As Jacques Desmoulins sat in his cell one forenoon looking at the walls and low ceiling he wondered what the story would be could these cold stones speak of what had passed within their sight. He had allowed his thoughts to run in this channel for awhile, and the pictures which his imagination drew would have offered more than one subject to the story writers of today. A strong desire came over him to learn something of the former occupant of cell No. 13, and he was planning a way by which to approach the attendant when he heard the key grating in the iron door, and a moment later it swung open and Jean Cabotier entered with a tray on which was some water, bread and meat. After he had placed his burden on the table he turned toward the prisoner, as though awaiting some remarks from him, for having brought food to No. 13 for so many years he felt as though he was entitled to a certain familiarity with the occupant which no one had a right to dispute.

"Monsieur," he said, noticing the thoughtful face before him, "you appear troubled. Are you unwell? If so, Marie will cook you something different from this," pointing to the tray at his right.

"No, Cabotier, I am not unwell, and Marie need not trouble herself, although you are very kind. Can you stop a few moments and talk with me?"

"I see no harm, monsieur. Yours is the last cell I visit, and all the others have received their rations. And what is 't you would talk with me about?"

"How long, Cabotier, have you been at La Conciergerie?"

"How long, monsieur? Why, ever since I can remember. When I first looked beyond my mother's arms, it was at these walls, and they have ever since been my home."

"Then you must remember those who have occupied this cell before I was brought here."

Jean Cabotier remained in thought for a few moments. He was trying to recall some faint memory of the past, but there seemed a broken link in the connection. At last he turned to the prisoner.

"Monsieur, I do not remember of any one in cell No. 13 before you came. I never visited it, yet I believe some great general was once here when Marie's father was warden. Perhaps she can tell who it was. There can be no harm, monsieur, and if she knows I will bring you the story tonight."

After Jean Cabotier had gone the prisoner remained seated on the little stool plunged in deep thought. He had forgotten the tray of food on the table, so engrossed was he in the subject introduced by the few words of his attendant.

"A great general," he said to himself, "and once he looked upon these cruel walls with feelings the same as mine. Yes, I might have been a great general today were it not for La Conciergerie, but, alas, there is no hope for me now! They say that the revolution is at an end and we have failed. France kneels again to monarchical rule. Her brave sons will drench the soil with blood. Would that I were among them today, for this arm would wield the sword as it did in former days."

Jacques Desmoulins sat there during the long hours of the afternoon, and it was not until he heard the key grating in the iron door that he roused himself from the reverie into which he had fallen.

It was Jean Cabotier who entered. In one hand he carried some food and in the other was a pair of old cavalry boots. When he saw the untasted meal on the table and the sad look of the prisoner, he stopped. Upon his face was an expression of sympathy, and he thus accosted the lonely occupant of the cell:

"Monsieur, you are ill today. Let me bring you something from Marie's own little kitchen—some broth or fresh eggs."

The prisoner raised his head. Upon seeing the cavalry boots his face lightened up, and he forgot the inquiry made by Jean Cabotier.

"Have you learned something," he asked, "about the general who was once in this cell?"

"Yes, monsieur, Marie remembered the story as told by her father, and here are the boots which General Louispierre Dumourier left when he was called before the tribunal of the convention."

"What, General Louispierre Dumourier?" asked the prisoner in excited tones. "Was it at La Conciergerie, in cell No. 13, that he was imprisoned?"

"Yes, monsieur, in this same place, and Marie thought there'd be no harm in bringing these to you," he said, placing the boots on the floor before Jacques Desmoulins. "I did not ask the warden, for surely there can be no harm, and you may care for them, as their imprints were long ago left on this floor. And, monsieur, you need a new pair, for you have had none since you came here."

Jacques Desmoulins took the boots and looked at them with a feeling of deep interest.

"Yes," he said, "I can wear a general's boots, but a general I shall never be. What did Marie say about General Louispierre Dumourier?"

"You remember the general, monsieur? It was at the beginning of the revolution, when Danton, Robespierre and Marat were at the head of the convention. General Dumourier was thought to be working to place the dethroned Louis XVI in power again, and with what evidence they had they thrust him into prison. Marie says her father spoke of him often, for it was he who took General Dumourier's meals to him each day in this cell where he was confined. You know, monsieur, that after awhile he was brought before the tribunal and defended himself so well that he was acquitted."

"Yes, Cabotier, I remember well, and after that he joined the Prussian forces. Would that I had been with him and could have followed where he led!"

The prisoner was pacing back and forth in his narrow cell, and his excited manner and flashing dark eyes made the attendant shrink back. He feared that the thirst for revenge born within the soldier's breast would incite him to make a victim of the first man within his reach, but Jacques Desmoulins noticing the frightened manner of the man ceased his warlike gestures. For nearly half an hour they talked together of the life of General Louispierre Dumourier and then the attendant left.

When Jacques Desmoulins had put on the cavalry boots, he walked about the cell with a certain feeling of pride. This was the first instance since he had been brought to La Conciergerie which served to divert his mind from the monotonous life he led. He examined the footwear carefully, straightened out the wrinkled leggings, and with the moisture from his hands softened the leather by a long rubbing process.

Several days passed. The prisoner had not become tired of drawing imaginative pictures of General Louispierre Dumourier, and often he sat on the little stool, looking at the long cavalry boots and almost believing that their owner was present. He would ask question after question and then answer them himself as his mind produced the scenes, the feelings and utter loneliness of this former occupant of his cell.

One noon when Jean Cabotier entered cell No. 13 he gave the prisoner some news which afforded him a new subject for thought during the lonesome hours.

"Yes, monsieur," said the attendant, "four new prisoners were brought here this morning, and one is charged with conspiracy against the emperor. Marie says they are men who hold great influence, for the warden has ordered the night guard to be doubled."

"And do you know the names of any of these prisoners?" asked Jacques Desmoulins.

"No, monsieur, I have not as yet heard. They are all very surly and will not talk. When I do find out, I shall tell you."

That night as the prisoner in cell No. 13 lay awake he heard the measured tread of the sentry beneath his window. By standing on the little stool he was able to look out between the bars, and for some time watched the soldier as he paced back and forth on his beat. He was tempted to call out or drop some article on his head as he stood for a moment under the window at the end of his trip. He thought the fellow looked as though he might easily become frightened, but finally abandoned these ideas.

Night after night he watched the sentry. There was something in this pastime which served to divert his mind from gloomy thoughts and to a certain extent interested him. Often his imagination drew for him the picture of the life of the sentry. He wondered how a man could countenance such a thing as acting as guard over a few poor fellows confined in damp cells when they had done nothing to bring them there but invoke the wrath of an unjust and tyrannical power.

As Jacques Desmoulins stood at his window one night he was surprised to see the sentry lean his musket against the wall of the prison and sit down directly under him. Ere long the fellow fell asleep. Plan after plan flashed through the mind of Jacques Desmoulins as he observed the fellow, wholly unmindful that a pair of eyes were watching him, but none of them offered effective means for his escape. He would if possible gain possession of that musket, and with that in his power he would patiently bide his time, when it could utilize effectually to gain his release.

Without waiting to allow the time to slip by unimproved, he took off one of the cavalry boots, and with an old knife commenced to cut the leg into a long string. His plan for proceeding was to drop a slip noose over the muzzle of the gun and then draw it up to his window, where it could easily be taken between the iron bars. He would a great deal rather have dropped the noose about the neck of the sleeping sentry, but he knew this would only result in his being placed in stricter confinement, with less opportunity there for effecting an escape.

As the leather was cut inch by inch the prisoner all at once came upon a place that was split, and a moment later the opening revealed a piece of brown paper. The look of surprise on the face of Jacques Desmoulins would have made a fortune for a photographer could he have produced it. All thoughts of the sleeping sentinel had faded from his mind, and unfolding the piece of paper he anxiously looked at the drawing on it.

By the faint light of the moon which made its way into his cell he was able to see quite distinctly. Below the little chart indicating the points of the compass were deciphered the following words:

LA CONCIERGERIE, CELL NO. 13.

Having discovered an opening to an underground passage leading from this cell, I leave a diagram secreted in my legging showing where the opening may be found. Being summoned before the tribunal to answer charges brought against me as a traitor, I prefer to appear there rather than effect an escape, as my own words will prove my innocence. This I bequeath to La Conciergerie, trusting it may fall into the hands of some unfortunate prisoner and be the means of effecting his escape.

GENERAL LOUISPIERRE DUMOURIER.

It was not long before Jacques Desmoulins had solved the little diagram. With the blade of his knife he loosened the earth in the crevices between two large stones which formed a part of the wall to the cell. Placing his weight against one of them, the beads of perspiration pouring out upon his forehead and his hands trembling with excitement, the stone turned and disclosed a cavity beyond. He lost little time in entering it, and groping his way through the passage at length came out on the slope below the prison wall.

As he looked back he saw the sleeping form of the sentry. A moment he stopped to consider the bold idea which had come to him, then softly crept to where the soldier lay. He took the musket lying against the wall of the prison and brought the butt down upon the head of his victim, stunning him with the first blow. A moment later and he had donned the clothes of the sentry and was making his way as rapidly as possible from La Conciergerie.

The stone walls of the prison never saw Jacques Desmoulins again, for gaining the coast in safety he shipped on board an outward vessel for America. It was years afterward, when he had become a citizen of the United States, that he related to the father of the writer the events recorded in this story.—Exchange.

Conservative Methods of Travel.

To leave the world of today and float back into a past era, an era undisturbed by the telegraph or the telephone, a hotel elevator or a clanging electric car, is an experience that many tired people would rejoice in—for a week. But it is doubtful if they would be willing to give up the conveniences of modern life for a longer period. In a steamboat ride from St. Louis to New Orleans I slept like a child all night and mentioned the fact at the breakfast table. Every one smiled when I said that the boat's noise did not disturb me.

"Why, we tied up to a tree all night," said the clerk, "and did not move a yard until an hour ago."

I had not been long enough in the atmosphere of Mississippi travel to avoid worrying about the loss of a whole night while we were tied up to the shore. There had been a fog, I was told, and to proceed would have been dangerous. Yet I was bound for New Orleans Mardi Gras and had only time to make it according to the boat's schedule. But I had not fathomed a tithe of the mysteries of river travel.

"It's too bad we're so late," I said to the steward.

"We ain't late," said he.

"I thought we laid up over night," I said.

"So we did," said he, "but that ain't goin to make any difference. We don't run so close to time as all that."

Nothing made any difference or gave any cause for trouble—not even hitching up to the river bank now and then for a night or two.—Harper's.

A Faithful Attendant.

There is no more regular attendant at the sittings of the house of lords than the archbishop of Canterbury, who makes it a rule to be in his place punctually at 4 o'clock. His grace considers it a duty as head of the church to be always prepared to answer questions which may be put to him as primate. There is an unwritten rule that information on any matter relating to the church should be asked direct of the archbishop, but private notice is always given in advance whenever it is possible.—London Tit-Bits.

As to Interviewing.

A contemporary speaks of a "new kind of interviewing," where the interviewer in the course of pumping his victim has the opportunity of airing his own opinions. We had supposed that this was the basic principle of the interview. We had been given to understand that the opinions of the victim were the last things to enter the mind of the interviewer.—Boston Transcript.

Their Favorite Amusement.

A favorite amusement with the United States army officers on the Rio Grande is the Mexican cock fight. Every Mexican village has its cock pit, and officers on a few hours' leave cross the river to see the fun. There are no better cockfighters in the world than the Mexicans, and as public opinion sanctions the sport the enjoyment of everybody is altogether frank. The acme of the sport is reached when the apparently vanquished bird, after having been completely buried in the dust of the arena to stanch his blood, suddenly rises as if from the grave, and with one blow from the spur slays his astonished rival in the act of crowing over his supposed victory.—San Francisco Chronicle.

From Merchant and Customer

THE SAME GLAD CRY,
"IT MADE ME WELL."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., the talk of the Country.

Mr. W. F. Johnson, the leading merchant of Gainesville, N. Y., said today, that "I have sold over 60 doz. of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and have never had a bottle returned or a fault found with it. One of my customers paid his doctor $84 and was then no better, took a bottle of Favorite Remedy upon my recommendation, and it did him more good than the physician's long treatment. He then bought six bottles of me and was a well man long before they were used up."

Such words as these must impress the sick or ailing one.

THE NEW CITY ATTORNEY.

The appointment of S. Ashbell Crandall as city attorney of Norwich in place of an honorable and competent republican official, places that important office in the weakest hands that it yet has been entrusted to, and shows one good reason for the existence of the Law and Order league, the necessity for which some of the leading democratic papers of the state have questioned.

He, as a democratic partisan, has had no peer in Eastern Connecticut. In city affairs, while mayor, he refused to vote for a republican when it was a question involving the public good.

In the senate Mr. Crandall made a record. He refused to recognize the right of the republicans of the house to name Gilbert L. Hewitt as a republican member of the board of county commissioners and by his influence the appointment went to the governor. He refused to listen to the appeals of a delegation of democrats who then took a petition to Hartford asking him to give his influence and vote for J. J. Desmond for the Norwich city court judgeship, and then, to the surprise of those who knew him best, and contrary to his previous record, he commanded and voted for a republican, Judge Kellogg. It might have been thought Judge Kellogg's seventeen years of service and the public good led Senator Crandall to this, but he [illegible] direct from the senate on its adjournment and the next morning accepted the city attorneyship from Judge Kellogg as a slight testimonial of his regard.

When senatorial courtesy required that one democrat should act with the republicans of the senate to defer for four days the consideration of the democratic resolution providing for a constitutional convention, Senator Crandall was not the man of courtesy, but was among those who disregarded what Senator Pierce believed was not only a proper thing, but in view of the many courtesies extended by the republican minority to the democratic majority, a thing his party was obligated to do, and ought to be ashamed not to do!

The fact that Senator Crandall opposed Judge Hemmsley's bill against corrupt practices for fear it would tend to make politics in this state more corrupt, coupled with his latest appointment, places him before the people as quite a burlesque actor.

S. Ashbell Crandall is now city attorney for Norwich. One class of citizens in this community have reason to be glad; and we venture to say it is not the best class.

THE SILVER CRISIS.

The silver crisis have brought to a focus the financial issue and the unprecedented decline in the value of silver in the market has shown the necessity for a change of policy in this country as soon as possible. In three days last week the loss upon bar silver held [illegible] in the United States amounted to about one hundred millions of dollars. Talking for all time would not have proven to the people the liability of silver to sudden fluctuation as did the immediate effect of closing the Indian mints. Not only the effect upon the market, but the effect upon the silver states has been startling, and the issue for and against the present monetary policy of the government promises to be sharp and interesting when congress meets in August.

The rate at which gold and silver have been parting company in the past five years is shown by the following table of the estimated production of gold and silver in the world since 1873, and recently published in The Financial Chronicle:

Year.	Gold, oz.	Silver, oz.
1874	[illegible]	64,180,373
1875	[illegible]	[illegible]
1876	[illegible]	[illegible]
1877	[illegible]	[illegible]
1878	[illegible]	72,846,794
1879	[illegible]	75,356,710
1880	[illegible]	[illegible]
1881	[illegible]	[illegible]
1882	[illegible]	[illegible]
1883	[illegible]	[illegible]
1884	[illegible]	[illegible]
1885	[illegible]	[illegible]
1886	[illegible]	[illegible]
1887	[illegible]	[illegible]
1888	[illegible]	[illegible]
1889	[illegible]	[illegible]
1890	[illegible]	[illegible]
1891	[illegible]	[illegible]

It will be seen that the output of silver has increased so much more rapidly than the output of gold that the steady relative value has been destroyed. The substitution of a gold standard of value is absolutely necessary.

The War is Over.

A one-legged confederate in control of part of the land office at Washington has discharged two one-legged union veterans. The war is over.—[New York Press.

NO RETREAT.

Doctor Fridtjof Nansen of Norway in his polar exploit leaves no chance for retreat. His wonderful craft is named "Fram," or "Forward," and his course is to be wherever the currents of the polar basin may carry him. He is probably already on his way to the Arctic ocean by way of the North Cape and the Kara Sea, following the course of the Vega along the coast of Asia, to the Lena delta, where the ill-fated "Jeannette" was caught in the ice. There he will make into the ice pack for the purpose of learning how the drift of that deserted vessel reached the coast of Greenland. His vessel is built to stand ice-pressure, and its hull of oak is three feet thick. She is rigged like a three-masted schooner, and the crow's nest for the lookout on the mainmast is 105 feet above the water. Dr. Nansen is determined, if possible, to go with the tide, which he believes reaches the pole, and by a route north of the New Siberian Islands will take him in time to the south coast of Greenland. He knows the wreckage of the "Jeannette" drifted over this course in about two years; but he has taken provision for six years, and has given himself no chance for escape except by the fortune of the tide. This is one of the boldest attempts ever made to reach the pole, and the people of all countries will be interested in the welfare of the expedition and the ten brave men who form this party.

THE CONTRAST.

The condition of the country today makes the following summary of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, from the commercial agency of R. G. Dun & Co. of more than ordinary interest:

"A fiscal year never matched in the whole history of the country, in volume of industrial production, in magnitude of domestic exchanges or in foreign trade, has just closed. The imports for the year have been about $[illegible],000,000, the increase at New York in June over last year being about 18 per cent. Exports from New York in June gained 18 4 per cent., and the aggregate for the year has been about $1,0[illegible]7,000,000. Railroad earnings have been the largest in any year thus far, and clearings in June the largest ever known in that month, exceeding last year 8 per cent, and for the whole year the largest ever known outside New York. Failures for the half year have been 5,508 against 6,074 in 1891, and liabilities $[illegible],000,000 against $93,000,000, and, on the whole, about the smallest for five years. In spite of the low prices, additional works are going into operations even in the iron manufacture, and yet more in woolen and cotton. Money is abundant at all financial centers, with but moderate demand, and collections generally good. Rarely has the country begun a new fiscal year with more satisfactory commercial prospects, and there is less financial apprehension than is usual in a presidential year."

Never has the country reached, at the close of a presidential year such a crash and crisis as now threatens every interest of the people.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Saturday was a day for perfidy.

Judge Kellogg, by his appointments in the city court Saturday, showed that the democrats had not been "talking through their hats," but had been "talking by the book!" He also removed all the "ifs" from THE BULLETIN's editorial and made their application complete.

Since January 1 there has been exported from this country $65,000,000 of gold, which weighed 18 tons. If these obligations had been paid in silver it would have taken [illegible] tons to have settled the bills. That is the difference in bulk value of the yellow and the white metals.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

His Only Hope!

It is safe to say that there will be some lively manipulation of the patronage between now and August 7. That is Cleveland's only hope to converting his party to sound views, and the trouble is that the best bits of bait have already been disposed of.—[Boston Journal.

Fish are Biting.

The Evening Post insists that the financial affairs of the country are so threatening that Cleveland should call a midsummer extra session of congress. This ridiculous organ forgets that midsummer is just the time when fish bite in the neighborhood of Gray Gables. "Keep cool!"—[New York Press.

A Comfort to 'Em.

The Missouri democrats are not getting any offices, but it is a comfort to them to know that the supreme court holds that they can no longer be sold at auction under the vagrancy act.—[St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The Thing to Do.

The thing for the western miners to do now is to hunt for gold. The market will take every ounce they can find at the full market price.—[Springfield Union.

The Advantage of It.

The bank failures are favorable to the democrats in the respect that they compel the administration to appoint receivers.

A Reduction.

American tin plate is bright enough and there is plenty of it for Mr. Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle to see themselves in, but they don't enjoy looking at it, nevertheless.—[Cleveland Leader.

Wreaking Vengeance.

The manufacturing industries of the north are barely able to compete now with their southern rivals. Get rid of the protective tariff, and they will have to shut down or move their plants southward.—[Atlanta Constitution.

This is an admirable example of what [illegible] as "tariff reform" argument in the [illegible] states. The bourbons of that region when they vote for free trade not only have the happy consciousness of indorsing Calhoun's views that protection is unconstitutional, but they actually seem to believe that they are somehow wreaking vengeance on New England.—[Boston Journal.

According to the method which is now adopted for reckoning leap years in England, December, January and February will be the summer months about 720,000 years hence.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

Set Him Right.

Geo. Augustus Sala, the well known English writer, on his last Australian trip, wrote as follows to The London Daily Telegraph: "I especially have a pleasant remembrance of the ship's doctor—a very experienced maritime medico indeed, who tended me most kindly during a horrible spell of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, provoked by the sea fog which had swooped down on us just after we left San Francisco. But the doctor's prescriptions and the increasing warmth of the temperature as we neared the Tropics, and, in particular, a couple of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS clapped on—one on the chest and another between the shoulder blades—soon set me right."

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions, should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

You toilers in works of necessity and mercy, who to the number of four thousand use the Electric cars on Sunday, (see Evening Record of May 14,) which by the way, are cheerfully run every fifteen minutes in order to aid you in your good work. To you my sympathy goes out, for there is in our city one in authority who imposes needless hardship on you. Heretofore I have made your labors comparatively easy by keeping [illegible] cool and tongues moist through [illegible] summer Sundays. THE DEATH OF HAMLET.

He sleeps at last, and all the grief
That shook his soul in mankind's prime
Is wafted like some faded leaf
Across the horizon of time.
How shall we fitly say farewell
To him whose voice in other days
Thrilled human hearts as by a spell
And won the incense of their praise?

Like some tragedic blast that shakes
The fairest blossom from the tree
Is this grim mystery that takes
Life's perfume and life's flow'r from thee.
And can those lips indeed be dumb
From which such golden words did fall,
And is that princely figure numb
That yields the purple to the pall?

Alas, 'tis so! The prince is dead
Who showed us Denmark's woes anew.
May sweetest rest attend his bed
And peace the gentle heart and true!
The lights are out, the play is o'er,
His voice is hushed, in very truth,
The promise ne'er shall thrill us more,
And Hamlet dies in Edwin Booth!

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, July 1.—In the outside market call money is quoted at [illegible] per cent and time money is nominally 5 per cent.

The market this morning was started upon its upward course by the reported cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon. After the board it was reported that congress had been called a month earlier—Aug. 7. The effect was to open the market with an advance of [illegible] per cent.

The best prices were made at the opening, or in the first half hour; the balance of the market was very dull, hardly a quotation being made. The sharp rise was met with [illegible] stock, the demand coming from the shorts, but little stock appears to be taken for long account. Offices are barren of commission customers. Few are the new accounts opened. Aug. 7 is some distance off, and even then it will take at least a month longer before any decided action will be taken. The effect of [illegible] whatever it may be.

The movement of Gas that started yesterday was continued today without any great activity, and Chicago Junction, which closed at [illegible] opened at [illegible] bid and sales, and later was offered at [illegible]. New York and New England preferred closed yesterday at [illegible] opened at [illegible]. Sugar preferred opened at [illegible] ran up to [illegible] with reaction to [illegible], but soon regained this and sold at [illegible]. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy was also active, opening up [illegible] and selling at [illegible]. Atchison up [illegible] to [illegible] and sold as high as [illegible]. General Electric, which closed at [illegible], opened at [illegible], then fell to [illegible] but recovered. Butte and Montana opened up to [illegible], then to [illegible], and Centennial was also very strong, selling at 4.

Money rates are somewhat easier than yesterday, but still the situation is a strained one. The local brokers report a more cheerful tone and less pressure to sell.

The Happy Baby.

He was an extremely philosophical baby and believed in enjoying life as it came. Consequently when his parents, who have a small concession at the World's fair, went forth on errands of business he set about to amuse himself as opportunities offered. One of the appurtenances of his parents' concession is a bright, new cash register which records the sales of the day, so that at evening they who attend to the fair's finances may come and figure totals and deduct their 25 per cent.

In his travels through the shop late in the afternoon the baby discovered the cash register standing resplendent on its throne over the counter. It was a toy that invited playing with, and the baby ascended to investigate. Then he put a fat fist upon one of the keys and pushed. The results surpassed expectations; there was a click, a ring and a little ticket marked "5" bobbed merrily up over the keyboard. The experiment was repeated with results the most satisfactory. Then the baby moved farther down and pushed a key marked "25," following it up with the key marked "$1" and that marked "2." Then he grew more energetic and punched them all from end to end and back again as fast as he could touch them. A deep and sunny contentment broke forth upon his face as he reached out to play a whole sonata of scales and trills, with crescendos on the "5" and little embellishments among five and ten cent keys.

He was enjoying himself thoroughly and just working up to a fine climax in which the high notes were to predominate when his father entered in company with a World's fair official. Luckily for all concerned, the official took in the situation and the baby's entertainment will not cost his father a week's profit. But he [illegible]

PRESIDENT'S CALL.

Heartily Indorsed by New York Financiers.

DESIRE SHERMAN LAW REPEALED.

Tendency Will Be to Restore Confidence—Recuperation Will Follow.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The following interviews with prominent Wall street men on the president's proclamation show the feeling in that financial center upon the act of the executive and the grave situation:

Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank, said: "I suppose the president would not have called an extra session unless he had been absolutely sure his financial policy would be carried out. I look for a repeal of the Sherman silver bill."

At the Fourth National bank, Cashier J. W. Cannon said: "I hope the Sherman law will be repealed. We all hope that."

Henry Chapin, cashier of the Third National bank: "We certainly hope and expect that the Sherman law will be repealed."

John Clews of Henry Clews & Co. said: "Mr. Cleveland has done what the country has been appealing to him to do. He has at last determined to put the responsibility where it belongs."

Mr. Duvall, one of the officers of the National Bank of America, said: "The sooner the Sherman act is repealed the more we will be pleased."

George G. Williams of the Chemical bank said: "It is the best thing that could have happened.

The President Merits Commendation

for his action. The effect of it will without question be to restore confidence among business men the country over."

"How will President Cleveland's decision affect the issue of the clearing house banks?"

"The further issuance of clearing house certificates will depend upon circumstances. The president's decision could not, of course, directly affect this matter, but its general tendency will be [illegible] conditions."

Ebenezer K. Wright, president of the National Park bank, says: "The country has long demanded such a measure, and it seems to us an action should have been taken sooner, but perhaps the people were not prepared for it. I have no doubt the Sherman law will soon be a dead letter. The evil results of the Sherman act have been so far-reaching and have so impoverished the land, I am not certain that financial recuperation will follow at once.

is the first and only proper step to bring about good conditions."

James T. Woodward, president of the National Hanover bank, said: "I think the silver purchase law will be repealed beyond question. The feeling throughout the land is too strong to be resisted."

"What do you think will be the attitude of the south? Will it also favor such repeal?"

"Oh, yes. I think southerners have labored under a misapprehension and did not see the financial problem in its true light heretofore. But with cotton and sugar at such ridiculously low figures, they must realize that something is wrong, and, in my opinion, will not oppose silver legislation which will make the inferior dollar worth an honest one. We in New York are not the only ones who have suffered."

CONGRESSMEN TALK.

Opinions of Leading Men Upon President's Action.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Representative McMillin of Tennessee, speaking of the president's proclamation, said that the president had taken the wisest and promptest way out of the difficulty, and he expected good results to accrue from the extra session. Early action would restore confidence throughout the country and settle the present unrest abroad. Congress, would, he thought, meet the problem in an unbiased spirit, and doubtless frame some law that would meet the approval of the president and the people.

Representative R. G. Davey of Louisiana commended the action of the president, and thought he spoke for his own state and the Louisiana delegation, which will vote for the repeal of the Sherman law. "It is a law that has brought the country into a perilous position," said Mr. Davey, "and its repeal will be a good riddance of bad rubbish."

Senator Gray of Delaware thought the lesson of bad finance had not been thoroughly learned by the country, and the special meeting of congress would tend more to breed confidence in the silver men than anything else. The time between March 1 and the first Monday in December was none too long to enable the people to have the knowledge born in them that the country since the passage of the Sherman law had suffered from criminally faulty legislation of a financial character. He thought that if congress had met in regular session the members would have a clearer understanding of what was needed, and might do better work, so far as statutory regulation of the country's currency is concerned.

Representative O'Ferrall of Virginia said that any public action of President Cleveland should be indorsed. He commends the stand he has taken and thinks the Sherman law will be repealed.

Representative McGann of Illinois was for the repeal of the Sherman act, and with that out of the way the passage of a sensible and broad gauged statute. He would oppose free coinage because it would inevitably react upon the producing classes of the country.

Representative Baker of New Hampshire said: "I am very glad that the president has called an extra session of congress. I think the fact of one having been called will have a beneficial effect upon the country and help in a measure, at least, to restore confidence in financial circles. It is early now to predict what congress will do, but I am confident that the house will repeal the Sherman bill, and that the Republican members in that branch will vote practically solid for its repeal."

PUEBLO FEELS EFFECTS.

Merchants Cancel Orders For Fall Goods of Eastern Houses.

PUEBLO, Colo., July 2.—The depression in the price of silver is already beginning to make its effects felt in Pueblo. All the smelters of the city have advised their ore buyers in the various mining camps of this and adjoining mining states to make no more contracts for ore.

Friday, between 15 and 20 principal mercantile houses sent orders to the eastern trade cancelling orders for fall goods. They state that the reduced price for silver will close the mines and smelters, throwing many thousand men out of employment, crippling the railroads and dependent industries and mining trade.

OPERATIONS SUSPENDED

[illegible]

SILVER CITY, N. M., July 2.—[illegible] silver mines in New Mexico. The mines at Georgetown, Lone Mountain and Hanover were closed down yesterday. Less than half a dozen mines which produce silver alone can be operated in the territory with silver at its present price.

No more than half of the silver mines in the territory have been in operation this year, but the closing down of the remaining ones will be a serious blow to the mining interests of the territory.

Business Is Paralyzed.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Herald's Lima (Peru) special says: The fall in the price of silver has produced a financial and commercial crisis in Peru. Business is paralyzed. The rate of interest is 21 pence.

LONE HIGHWAYMAN

Was Only a Boy of 16 Acting Under "Bullet Orders."

WICHITA, Kan., July 2.—The lone highwayman, who attempted to rob the Santa Fe passenger train at Wharton, Thursday, and was captured by Conductor Gleason and put in jail here, is a boy only 16 years old.

He told the sheriff that he met a gang of four men at Ten Mile Flats, in the Chickasaw nation, one day and they told him of a scheme to rob the Santa Fe train, and said that he must help them, under penalty of death. They told him he must go on the Santa Fe train on June 30, and when it approached Black Bear creek he must cover the conductor and stop the train, and that they would do the rest.

All this work was imposed upon him under "bullet orders," as he calls it, and he was afraid to disobey. He said he made a mistake of one day in carrying out his orders. He thought Thursday was the 30th, and carried out his part of the program. He said the leader of the gang, under whose orders he was working, was Bill Dalton. Two of the others were Bill Anderson and Arthur Gage, while the fourth man was a resident of Fort Gibson, whose name he did not know.

RHODE ISLAND MUDDLE.

Both Political Parties Lay Case Before Supreme Court.

PROVIDENCE, July 2.—The Democratic house of representatives met the Republican senate in the supreme court Saturday, and laid before the full bench their respective claims and demands, the Democrats contending that the Republicans illegally induced Governor Brown to prorogue the legislature, and the Republicans asserting that the Democrats, by unseating Republican members of the house, violated the constitution, hence they were warranted in taking the step which they did in securing the prorogation.

This was the last pitched battle between the contending forces, and the result will not be made known until Aug. 12, if the attorneys and the judges insist upon their vacations not being interrupted.

Arthur I. Brown appeared for the Democrats and Benjamin Bosworth for the Republicans. Both came fully equipped for a contest which is to be written into the history of Rhode Island.

DISHONEST OFFICIALS.

President and Cashier of Texas Banks Under Arrest.

DALLAS, Tex., July 2.—John R. Williams, president, and W. S. Jones, cashier of the City national bank of Rockwell, were arrested on the charge of embezzling funds of the bank and making false entries.

S. J. Walling, Jr., cashier of the City national bank of Brownwood, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $75,000 of the funds of his bank. Other arrests will follow.

Mayor of [illegible] Slain.

PUEBLO, Mex., July 2.—Advices have reached here that the town of San Nicolas this state, was assaulted last Tuesday by a body of well-armed men. In the fierce fight that ensued the mayor and a justice of the peace were killed. Beside these two officials, a number of men on each side lost their lives. It is supposed here that the assault was in the nature of a local political riot. An investigation is being made.

Chelsea Man Missing.

BOSTON, July 2.—Sabine A. Parker, who has resided in Chelsea for the past 15 years and was employed by T. H. Buck & Co. as a wood turner, disappeared from his home a week ago and has not since been seen. He leaves behind him a wife, one daughter of 13 and a son of 12, in destitute circumstances. Parker is about 30 years of age.

Cannot Sign Wage Scale.

MILWAUKEE, July 2.—The Bay View mills of the Illinois Steel company in this city closed down Friday night shortly after 12 o'clock. The company has decided that it cannot sign the wage scale submitted by the Amalgamated association, and the mills will be closed for some time. About 2000 men are thrown out of employment.

Russians Ordered Home.

CHICAGO, July 2.—The Inter-Ocean says that the czar of Russia has ordered home all of his soldiers now at the World's fair. No specific cause is given in the order. It simply says that all Russian soldiers are needed at home. The contingent here, which numbers over 50 men, will start for Russia the early part of the week.

Universalists Summer Meeting.

LACONIA, N. H., July 2.—The 12th Universalist national summer meeting will begin at the Weirs on August 7, and continue one week. The meetings will be conducted by Rev. G. H. Shinn of Galesburg, Ill. He will be assisted by clergymen of national prominence.

Persecuted Armenians.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 2.—The Armenian residents of Marsovan have sent to the British, German and American legations here a request that they intervene with the sultan to protect them from Turkish persecution.

Treasurer Missing.

NEW YORK, July 2.—John Weiss, grand treasurer of the Order Germania, one of the largest German benevolent organizations in this state, is missing, and his accounts are said to be $2800 short.

FIGHTING GALORE.

With Results Generally Favorable to the Revolutionists.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Herald's correspondent in Rivera reports that General Saravia has gained an important victory for the cause of the revolutionists in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil.

A large body of Castilhistas, under the command of General Nepa, was entrenched in Uruguayana. General Saraiva marched against them and the battle was fought near Uruguayana.

The fighting lasted several hours, during which many were killed, the Castilhistas being forced to retire.

There has been a great deal of fighting during the last few days at various places in the southern part of Rio Grande do Sul, and the engagements have generally resulted favorably for the insurgents.

Manufacturers Said to Have Combined to Destroy Labor Organizations.

BOSTON, July 2.—Storm clouds are lowering over the clothing industry of this city, and the members of the united garment workers are preparing for war. General Secretary Reichers is here, having come on from New York at the solicitation of the leaders of the local unions, and is in consultation day and night with the members of the local executive board on the best methods to adopt to meet the impending trouble.

The threatened trouble, so the garment workers say, is a big lockout of all the clothing operatives in the city, numbering some 7000.

According to the statements of the garment workers, the clothing manufacturers of the city have effected a combine beside which the famous combine of New York is insignificant.

For some time the clothing manufacturers of Boston, so it is alleged, have the increased power and resources of the garment workers' organization, and only waited a fitting opportunity and reasonable excuse to make a sudden move which should stamp it out of existence.

To this end, so it is alleged, they have bound themselves each by a $5000 bond to stand by each other in the trouble which is expected.

In the big New York combine of clothing manufacturers which virtually comprises the representative houses of that city, over $50,000,000 worth of capital, according to their sworn statements in the court was represented, and yet they only required a bond of $1000 to keep their organization together.

After the big fight of four weeks' duration they were unsuccessful, and a complete victory was won by the garment workers. This increased bond the garment workers consider an evidence of a greater determination on the part of the Boston manufacturers to make a hard battle. What the outcome will be is as yet an open question.

The manufacturers who are said to be in the present combine affect to discredit the entire story or refuse to talk about it.

The sudden arrival of Mr. Reichers from New York and the evident knowledge possessed by the garment workers of their plans and movements has somewhat and many of the other clothing manufacturers who are not in the combine are expressing the opinion that the scheme of a general lockout has been frustrated.

The officials of the garment workers, however, believe in preparing for war, and to that end are mobilizing all their resources, financial and otherwise, to be in readiness for the attack when it does come.

One of the largest clothing houses in the city has had trouble with the garment workers' organization and a boycott has been placed on all their products.

Five men have been placed upon the road by the union to notify the customers of the firm in every section of the United States of the existing trouble and to request them to give their orders to houses employing union men under fair and healthy conditions.

It remains to be seen what the manufacturers' association, of which the firm is a member, will do under the circumstances. Either the manufacturers' association will take up the fight for this firm or the association will allow the firm to fight it out on their own hook. In the latter case the garment workers have no fears of the result.

DESTRUCTION IN ITS PATH.

Cyclone Sweeps Across the Eastern Part of Arkansas.

MEMPHIS, July 2.—A cyclone swept across the eastern portion of Arkansas Friday night, leaving destruction in its path. All telegraph wires west of Memphis are down and details are meagre, but it is known that the loss to property is enormous.

A bulletin was received by the signal service observer at Memphis from Little Rock by way of Galveston and New Orleans, saying that the wind was blowing at the rate of 70 miles an hour and that a large amount of property had been destroyed. No further particulars could be obtained.

STORMY PASSAGE.

The Chicago Reaches the Other Side Safe and Sound.

QUEENSTOWN, July 2.—U. S. S. Chicago from New York, June 18, has arrived here. The vessel had an extremely stormy passage. On June 24, she experienced a severe northwest gale, the vessel rolling at an angle of 45 degrees.

When the storm broke the ship's hatches were battened and the speed of the vessel was reduced to 10 knots per hour. No damage was sustained by the warship. All on board are well.

Dr. Herr's Illustrated Lecture.

Dr. Herr's fourth illustrated lecture upon the life of Christ, given in the Central Baptist church Sunday evening, traced the life of the Saviour from the transfiguration to the time immediately before the crucifixion. Notable among the illustrations were those of the passover, the institution of the Lord's supper, and of the judgment hall of Pilate. The portrait of Christ, first shown at the lecture two weeks ago, was by request presented for the second time. The three truths, that Christ is first the water, secondly the bread, and lastly, the light of life, were typified by portraitures preceding the views illustrative of the scenes forming the theme of the lecture.

Next Sunday evening the last lecture of the series will be given; subject, "The Crucifixion.

BASE BALL.

The Moosups Defeat the Clippers on the Greeneville Grounds.

About two hundred people saw the Clipper-Moosup ball game at the Greeneville grounds Saturday afternoon. The Moosups came here to win and brought a strong team with them, including two Jewett City players. The Clippers were equally confident of winning, and would have done so had they played their usual game. They had an off day, and, in addition to this, they felt the absence of their regular pitcher, Driscoll. The Moosups played the better game and won. New London papers should take note of the last sentence. It is a way Norwich men have of acknowledging defeat. A feature of the game was the satisfactory work of both umpires. Score:

Lester Wins the Windsor Locks Medal.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 2.—The seventh of the one-mile bicycle races given by the Windsor Locks Wheel club was run at Windsor Locks, Friday night. There were four entries—H. R. Coffin, Jr., Ned Montgomery, Clarence Lester and Clinton Pomeroy. The two last named were given 150 yards handicap. Lester won the race by only a few inches over Pomeroy. As Lester has now won the gold medal three times, it is his for good. The medal was offered by Postmaster Converse, and is valued at $10.

THE Y. M. C. A.'S INNOVATION.

Successful Sunday Open Air Meeting on the Steamboat Wharf.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting on the steamboat wharf on Sunday afternoon was a thorough success. It was the first of a series to be held every Sunday under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association. The association is to be commended for this practical method of suiting their work to the conditions and tastes of the men whom they seek to influence for good. Between two and three hundred men gathered on the dock from all parts of the city and enjoyed a live open-air meeting under the most favorable circumstances on a warm day with the benefit of shade, seating accommodations and breezes off the water.

The meeting was presided over by General Secretary Ross of the association, who spoke pleasantly for a few minutes of the plan outlined for the season and extended a hearty welcome to all men, both young and old, to avail themselves of these special gatherings. Much will be done to make the meetings highly interesting and attractive from week to week. The first part of the meeting was occupied by a song service in which the audience joined heartily. Mr. James L. Case conducted the music. Mr. Harry Trafton played the organ, and cornets were played by Messrs. Robert W. Otis, Fred. Cranston and C. W. Hunt.

After prayer by Mr. Wm. T. Lane, the chairman of the committee of arrangements, Mr. Ross introduced the Rev. Dr. Herr, who delivered a special address to men full of suggestive points and lessons for everyday life. The men listened very closely to all that was said, and the truths presented cannot fail in producing good results in the lives of the hearers.

The entire meeting created a feeling of great satisfaction, and there is promise that the series of services will be exceedingly popular during the hot summer months.

STUDENTS AND POLICE FIGHT.

Republican Guards Called Out—The Students Retreat.

CAUSE OF THE RIOTS.

Further Disorderly Demonstrations Expected from the Students.

PARIS, July 3.—On Saturday an affray occurred between the police and a number of students in the Latin quarter, and for a time matters were very lively. The affair caused the greatest kind of excitement among the students who lodged in that quarter, and they determined to lay the facts in the case before the government and to obtain satisfaction for what they deemed the arbitrary and overbearing conduct of the police.

When the chamber of deputies met today students to the number of 1,000 proceeded to the legislative building and sought to gain admission. The officials of the chamber fearing a riotous demonstration, gave orders to close the gates to prevent their ingress. After considerable parleying, during which the students expressed themselves very freely, ten of the number were admitted to the chamber. The spokesmen of the students were accorded a hearing by the chamber. They stated the facts in the case and declared that their only object in coming to the chamber was to urge the deputies to support a motion censuring the government, which was to be offered by M. Millerand. M. Millerand submitted his motion asking the house to censure the government for its connection with the affray.

PARIS, July 3.—At 9.30 o'clock this evening 3,000 students surrounded the prefecture of police, jeered the officials and threw stones through the windows. While the police were preparing to charge the mob upset all the booths in the neighborhood and smashed the street lamps. The police were resisted stubbornly. The students fought back with clubs and stones. In the first onset several students were wounded and two policemen were stretched unconscious.

After the third charge had been repulsed, the students marched, singing and shouting, to the Place St. Michael. The police retired and a call for cavalry was sent out from the prefecture. At 10.15 the students were on the Boulevard St. Michael.

The immediate cause of the riots today was the death of M. Nuger, a clerk who was injured mortally by the police in their encounter with the students on Saturday. A disorderly demonstration will be made, probably by the students at Nuger's funeral.

The republican guards were called out at midnight. The students retreated down the Boulevard St. Michael as the guards approached and dispersed shortly before 1 o'clock. The guards remained at the bridge to prevent the return of any rioters to the palace de justice or the prefecture of police. M. Lize denied last evening that he had resigned.

Intense excitement prevailed in the Latin quarter until 2.15 this morning. Students and police fought repeatedly. Many police and students were injured seriously. The students set fire to the street booths.

SUNDAY OPENING A FIZZLE.

Its Opponents Eager to Renew the Battle.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The World's fair national commission met today the opponents of the Sunday opening committee who were eager to renew the battle. Commissioner Hundley of Alabama, presented a resolution declaring that the committee had been placed on record only opposed to the opening of the gates on Sunday.

Commissioner Tousley of Minnesota, in support of the resolution, said: Sunday opening is a downright fizzle, so far. Now the directors want a 25 cent admission. This thing will result in a conference and the addition of another rule for Sunday closing. Why don't you act like men? If the committee could have enforced the Sunday closing rule in a lucid interval the fair would have had an average daily attendance of 200,000. You will find that Sunday opening will be a failure. The poor man will not pay 25 cents for a four-fifths show or a one-fifth show.

A Manitoba Bank Insolvent.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 3.—The Commercial bank of Manitoba has been declared insolvent and liquidators have been appointed. The bank's bills are to be paid under the Dominion [illegible].

INSURANCE MAN SUICIDES.

Could Not Endure the Violent Temper of His Wife.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Sunday afternoon, F. G. Grubb of Bridgeport was found dead in a passenger car in the car sheds of the Danbury division of the Consolidated road at Danbury. By his side was a package of Paris green, part of the contents of which had been used. Near by was a note addressed as follows:

"Dear daughters, Annie and Ada:—My last thoughts were of you. Had your mother's wicked temper been kept more under control things might have been very different. Good-bye and God bless you all."

He had been acting queerly recently, had been drinking and his business did not pay. He was a native of England, about 45 years of age, and came to this country about eight years ago. He had been employed by the Metropolitan Insurance company as superintendent at Norwalk.

Mrs. Mary S. Grubb, his wife, said last evening: "It is true I reproached my husband at times, but only when he had been drinking. He drank brandy and whiskey and it made him crazy. I think it was a cowardly thing for him to do this and leave his two children, who are 14 and 10 years of age. My husband had an insurance of $100 on his life. It made him angry when I asked him to increase it. He did not believe in insurance and he would not join any secret societies."

WAGES REDUCED.

Because Workmen Were Paid More Than at Other Shops.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., July 3.—Beginning with the first of July a reduction of wages went into effect at the factory of Berlin Bridge company at East Berlin. Men who were earning $2.50 a day were cut to $2; those who were earning $1.75 were cut to $1.50, and those who were earning $1.60 were cut to $1.40. A great deal of dissatisfaction exists among the men at the shop. It was only recently that the contract system went into effect and it has engendered ill feeling. The explanation of the cut down is that the company has been paying higher wages than other shops in the same business.

WILL NOT RING TODAY.

Liberty Bell Imperfectly Cast and Will Have to be Remelted.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The new Columbia liberty bell, recently cast at Troy, N. Y., will not be rung at the World's fair tomorrow, nor will it be rung until it has been melted and recast.

When the bell was removed from the mold a serious flaw was discovered.

It was imperfectly cast.

A Denial.

TROY, N. Y., July 3.—The Columbian Liberty bell will be rung for the first time at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in this city, the ringing to be controlled by electrical communication with Chicago. The statement from Chicago that the bell will be remelted and recast because of a flaw is denied. The casting was a perfect success, and the bell is one of the finest ever made.

To Investigate the Condition of American Meats in Europe.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Morton has addressed a letter to Special Agent Mattes, who will shortly leave the United States for Germany and other European countries, requesting him, in addition to investigating the possibility of extending the consumption in Germany, of maize and maize products, to further investigate the condition of American meats, the benefits, if any, derived from our system of government inspection and the prospects of an extension of our trade in these products. Further, he is to ascertain the character of the laws regulating the trade in tobacco, with a view to determining whether such regulations are better than enforced in America.

Report Denied.

BOSTON, July 3.—With regard to the statement published this morning from Cheyenne, Wyo., that the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York had been defrauded of $44,078 in a land swindle in Wyoming, Mr. Chas. A. Hopkins, the general agent of the company at Boston, received the following dispatch today from Second Vice President Lloyd of the company:

"The report you call attention to does not apply to this company. The Mutual Life has never purchased nor owned real estate in Wyoming."

New York's Holiday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Fourth of July holiday evidently was begun by many business men Saturday, and no business was transacted down town today except that which could not be avoided. Those brokers who were not short of stocks and who had renewed their loans on Friday over until Wednesday, evidently remained away today, content to let the silver question and other matters of that character in which they were interested take care of themselves.

Royal Northern Yacht Club.

LONDON, July 3.—The regatta of the Royal Northern Yacht club took place today. The course was off Rothesay, Scotland. The wind was light and the regatta proved little better than a drifting match. At the end of the first round the commodore of the club stopped the race and awarded the first prize to the Calluna, the Scotch cutter. The Valkyrie, the challenger for the America's cup, was given the second prize and the Satanita third prize. The Britannia was fourth.

Banker Drexel's Remains.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 3.—Drexel & Co. were today notified that J. H. Harjes, Sr., of Drexel, Harjes & Co. of Paris, and his son, will leave Carlsbad on Wednesday with the body of Anthony J. Drexel. The remains will be shipped to New York from Bremen on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II., next Saturday.

Picture of the Borden Jury for Lizzie.

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 3.—The Borden sisters have received a large photograph of the jury before whom Miss Lizzie was tried and acquitted, and it has been placed in their parlor. It is understood the foreman of the jury presented the picture, in compliance with a request by the other members.

Russian Warship Lost.

LONDON, July 3.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states that news has arrived there that the Russian cruiser Vladivostock, belonging to the Siberian fleet, has been wrecked on the rocks near Port Lazaref, on the east coast of Corea. The fate of the crew is not stated.

Georgie Drew Barrymore Dead.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 3.—Mrs. Georgie Drew Barrymore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Drew, wife of Maurice Barrymore, and herself an actress of fame and ability, died here suddenly yesterday morning. Consumption was the cause of her death.

SENATOR SHERMAN TALKS.

Says He Is With the President for a Sound Currency.

CONGRESS MAY GO TOO FAR.

When Confidence is Restored Gold Will Flow Back from Europe.

CHICAGO, July 3.—"There has never been a time since the law of 1890, known as 'the Sherman act,' was passed, that I would not have voted for the repeal," said Senator Sherman here today: The Sherman act was a compromise measure and it was passed to save the country from a free coinage bill that had been passed by the senate by an overwhelming majority. The democrats helped pass the Sherman bill and now they blame it for all the financial woes of the nation. I have told President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle that I will stand with them for a sound safe currency.

Mr. Cleveland in opposing silver is fighting three-fourths of his party. Of course I have my own ideas about what should be done, and when the matter comes up in congress I will have my say. I think the Sherman law will be repealed but the danger is that congress may go too far. If the clause providing for the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly be stricken out, it will be well. But if congress should repeal the clause providing that the United States shall maintain the parity between gold and silver coins, it would cause widespread distrust. There is in the treasury 350,000,000 of coined silver dollars and $145,000,000 in uncoined bullion. The legal tender of these coins must be preserved and their parity to gold maintained. It is well enough to stop the further coinage of silver, but that in circulation must be sustained. To stop making silver dollars would not impair the usefulness of those already made, so long as the government guaranty is back of them.

The present stringency is caused by the apprehension of the mercantile and financial world that we will not meet our obligations in gold, but will pay in cheap money. I believe we should have a sound, safe currency, on a gold basis. I do not think the condition of silver coinage will bring gold more into circulation. It will be utilized as the reserve and basis on which the circulating medium will rest for security. The action of India with regard to silver is not conclusive. It is in the nature of an experiment. The law that the silver rupee shall be worth sixteen pence is of the nature of fiat money, and has no effect here. Neither do I think the India council acted to aid Great Britain to force the United States to a gold basis. All the great commercial nations have tried silver and have failed at it. The United States is the last of them to realize that silver cannot be made the basis and standard of the world's money. If the coinage of silver dollars were stopped and the metal relegated to the position of subsidiary coinage, as among the nations of the Latin union the world would know that we proposed to pay our debts in the world's money—gold—and confidence would be restored.

"The exportation of gold to Europe has been brought about by the balance of trade being against us. When confidence is restored the gold will come back. If congress acts conservatively and does not go too far in radical legislation, all will be well. I think the national bank system will lapse when our national indebtedness shall have been paid off."

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.

Dr. Masters of San Francisco Claims the Honor for a Chinaman.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., July 3.—The Rev. Dr. F. J. Masters of San Francisco, Cal., superintendent of the Presbyterian Chinese mission work on the Pacific coast, has been in this vicinity the past two weeks, and during his stay delivered a lecture in St. Johnsbury upon the subject, "Did a Chinaman Discover America?"

Dr. Masters claims that about 499, or one thousand years before Columbus discovered America, five Buddhist priests came from China to Mexico, being driven across the Pacific by the Japanese current. One of these priests, Hweishan, returned to China, and his trip to Mexico, called Fusong in his diary, is recorded in the 250th volume of the imperial archives of the Chinese empire.

The priest describes Fusong very fully, and it applies remarkably closely to the knowledge of Mexico given by Prescott and other historians of the Toltec and Aztec period.

To corroborate this many of the customs of the ancient Peruvians and Mexicans are similar to the customs of the Chinese and Japanese, and there are striking phonetic resemblances in their languages.

Ethnologists on the Pacific coast have also noted marked resemblances between the Chinese and the Indian tribes of British Columbia, and Chinese coins hundreds of years old have recently been unearthed in British Columbia.

Dr. Masters goes to the World's fair as the representative of the California Geographical society. During a nine years' residence in China he made an exhaustive study of the interesting subject, and has many strong arguments to support his theory, which is as novel as it is interesting.

Ed. McCarthy Jumps from Brooklyn Bridge and is Fatally Injured.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward McCarthy jumped from the Brooklyn bridge this evening and sustained probably fatal injuries. It is supposed he was anxious to emulate the example of Steve Brodie and share in the bridge-jumper's notoriety. When taken from the river his side was black from foot to shoulder where he struck the water, and he suffered terribly from hemorrhages of the mouth for an hour. This is the fourth case of jumping the bridge and the third in two weeks. McCarthy jumped through a greater space than any of his predecessors.

The Sailors Were Amazed at Tryon's Orders.

LONDON, July 3.—A sailor who was on one of the smaller vessels when the Victoria was sunk, writes in reference to Admiral Tryon's signal: "We all stood amazed at such a signal, knowing very well that there was not room for the ships to turn, but the orders had to be obeyed. Although the vessel was sinking under him, Tryon signalled refusing boats. May I never see such a case of wholesale murder again. The whole fleet could see the poor fellows standing in perfect order, quietly drowning in their ranks."

A CENTURY AND A YEAR.

Death of Mrs. Fagan, Who Was Born in 1792.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Mrs. Mary Fagan, the widow of Lawrence Fagan and the grandmother of Alderman P. H. Fagan, died Sunday morning at the age of 101 years. Mrs. Fagan was probably the oldest resident of this city. She was born in Ireland in May, 1792. She came to this country early in life and had lived in this city sixty years. Her husband, a teamster, was killed in a runaway several years ago.

Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fagan, four of whom are now living in this city. Mrs. Fagan was never sick and died finally of old age.

Attempted Burglary at the Windsor Depot.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Burglars made an attempt to rob the passenger depot in Windsor at 2 o'clock this morning. The night operator started to go out of his office to learn the cause of the noises outside and was confronted by two men with drawn revolvers and was driven back into his office. He rushed to his instrument and telegraphed to Superintendent Davidson's office and the express was stopped. The burglars were not to be found, but later they were seen around the freight house. By that time Mr. Alben, the operator, had called out several citizens, who made a search until daylight came, when further attempts to find the fellows were abandoned.

Prof. Harrington Exonerated.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Morton has exonerated Prof. Harrington from the charges preferred against him, in his administration of the weather bureau, and he retired the officer preferring the charge. Secretary Morton has [illegible] a number of other changes in the personnel of the bureau.

Could Not Realize on Its Paper.

PHILLIPSBURG, Mont., July 3.—The First National bank closed its doors Saturday on account of the stringency in the money market, continued demand of depositors and inability to realize on its paper. There is no doubt of the bank's solvency. The extensive mercantile firm of Freyschlag, Hoffman & Co., was compelled to assign Saturday.

Monthly Treasury Statement.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The monthly statement issued by the treasury department shows a net decrease in circulation June 1 of $9,425,480, and since July 1, 1892, of $9,346,977, making the amount of money in circulation July 1, 1893, $1,593,733,411. The amount of circulation per capita is placed at $23.86.

Killed on the N. Y. & N. E. at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., July 3.—John, the 12 years old son of William Miller of 19 Chapelle street, was struck by the 3.15 passenger train on the New York & New England road, near White street crossing this afternoon, and instantly killed. The lad was run down while trying to save his dog.

Caused a Compound Fracture.

While unloading a heavy granite monument in Yantic cemetery Monday morning, the workmen lost control of the stone and the [illegible] Michael Riley, a workman for A. D. Lathrop, in the ankle, breaking the bones and causing a compound fracture. Drs. Harris and Tingley dressed the injured member.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

A Trusted Employe Arrested for Robbing Mail Pouches.

STOLEN LETTERS FOUND.

For Two Years the Thief Has Done Successful Work.

CHICAGO, July 3.—For two years the loss of mail upon the Grand Trunk, including the American pouches consigned to Canada and the mail from Montreal and Toronto consigned to all western states, has been a source of great annoyance to Canada and the United States. At last the matter became unbearable to the Canadian government and Postmaster General [illegible] was asked to assign post office Inspector James E. Stuart to the case. He worked on the case several days and was convinced that the thefts were being done in the mail car in daylight.

Finally he saw Charles Ford, superintendent of repairs for the Grand Trunk at Port Huron, ex-president of the town council and for years one of the most trusted employes of the Grand Trunk, enter the car, remove the valuable letters from the pouches and reseal the pouches. Ford then withdrew, locked the car and walked toward his private office. He had proceeded but two hundred yards when Stuart arrested him. A crowd gathered, but Stuart took his prisoner to a quiet place and discovered on Ford's person 389 letters. The thanks of the Canadian government have been tendered to the inspector.

HE ASKED FOR A SHIP.

Representative of Liberia Failed in His Washington Errand.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—An unexpected and unusual demand has been made upon the navy department by a representative of the republic of Liberia.

It was that the United States should present to Liberia a vessel of war.

It appears that in 1886 a law was passed by congress authorizing the secretary of the navy in his discretion to turn over to the republic of Liberia a vessel of the navy, free of all expense to that republic. The law does not specify the class of the vessel or the time or the manner of its presentation.

The representative of Liberia who made the demand pointed out the law and stated that his country was now prepared to receive the vessel.

The only satisfactory solution of the question seems to be that there were at the time of the passage of the act a much larger number of ships in the navy than would be necessary in time of peace.

It happens that the representative who called at the navy department did not possess any special authority to make an express demand upon the government.

Corner-Stone of the Masonic Temple Laid—Grand Master Wheeler at the Head—An Historical Address.

The corner-stone of the Masonic Temple was laid with the impressive and appropriate ceremonies of the order Monday afternoon, in the presence of a distinguished and representative Masonic assembly. A procession of all the bodies in the city, led by Tubbs' Military band, formed on Water street at 4 o'clock and proceeded to the site of the fine new building on lower Broadway. The following gentlemen acted as officers of the grand lodge: Joseph R. Wheeler, grand master; Charles W. Carter, deputy grand master; S. Alpheus Gilbert, grand senior warden; Daniel M. Lester, grand junior warden; Albert S. Comstock, grand treasurer; John T. Crary, grand secretary; Howard L. Stanton, grand senior deacon; George A. Kies, grand junior deacon; A. D. Smith, grand marshal; Rev. J. D. Herr, D. D., grand chaplain; N. Douglas Sevin, grand senior steward; Charles Huntington, grand junior steward; Increase W. Carpenter, grand architect; Daniel F. McNeil, grand Tyler.

The exercises, which took place on the temporary first floor of the structure, were opened by President Arthur H. Brewer, of the Masonic Temple corporation. He sketched briefly the formation of the company, "which after mature deliberation and with the principles of masonry deep at heart, had set out to erect a building, which from turret to foundation stone should be dedicated to the purposes of the order."

"We have been singularly fortunate in the location of our lot," said Mr. Brewer. "We are confronted by the law, which no good Mason has cause to fear—supported on one side by the Gospel, the foundation, corner stone and capstone of Free Masonry, and on the other by that powerful engine of modern civilization, the public press. In the near distance is a new building dedicated to the supreme master, and in close proximity are the refining influences of the public school and library and the dramatic stage. Our regret at the enforced absence of Grand Master Bassett, is greatly modified by his selection of yourself, Brother Wheeler, as substitute. You are allied to Norwich Masons by stronger bonds than to any other body outside of Hartford, for you are a member of the body having headquarters in this city, the Connecticut Sovereign Consistory." President Brewer then introduced Mr. Charles E. Dyer, who read a valuable paper on the history of Masonry in Norwich.

For more than a century Free Masonry has been recognized in an organized form in the town of Norwich.

History informs us, and to history alone are we indebted for the materials herein [illegible] that the records of the first lodge of Masons organized and instituted in this goodly township show that it was chartered by St. John's Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in the year 1767, a little more than 125 years ago and eight years anterior to the declaration of the independence of these United States. These records are now, it appears, in the custody of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

The early meetings of Masons in Norwich, we are informed by history, were held at Brennan's tavern (now Companion Dr. Howe's residence) and which was once known as the Teel house. In 1798 at the house of Dr. Joshua Lathrop at Norwich Town (the house now owned and occupied by Mrs. Gardner Thurston); then in the chamber of the brick store of Captain Nathaniel Peabody, which was afterward known as the Mansfield building on Main street and now over the store occupied by John G Standish. The next lodge room was the apartments now occupied by the Knights of Pythias in the upper chambers of Uncas hall building. In the year 1865 (May 19 it was dedicated) the lodge, together with all the other Masonic bodies, leased Uncas hall proper. Since which time all the orders of Masonry, from the Blue Lodge to and including Columbian Commandery, have made it their continuing city and abiding place. In the year 1884 (deed is dated October 26, 1884) the A. A. Scottish Rite Masons purchased a lot on Park street and erected the Academy of the Rite thereon, which they still occupy and possess.

From 1845 to the present time, a period of thirty-eight years, there have been thirty-two masters of the lodge, commencing with Chauncey Burgess and closing with Currie Gilmour.

Saint James lodge, No. 23, was originally chartered May 18, 1795, and the communications thereof were held in the adjoining town of Preston until the year 1848, when the charter and all implements thereof were lodged with the secretary of the grand lodge. In the year 1872 it was reorganized by dispensation. And on the [illegible] day of June, 1872, the original charter was [illegible], and the lodge meetings were held in Union hall, together with the other bodies, until 1878, when the lodge [illegible] to their new and commodious quarters in the bank building on Shetucket street. Her existence as a revived lodge has been comparatively short, but her character and history are one of honor and credit. In the 21 years of her recent existence there have been 13 masters of the lodge, commencing with Rufus M. Ladd and closing with George E. Parsons.

From 1795 to the present time all of the various orders of Free Masonry [illegible] at Norwich, with the exception of that known as the Scottish Rite, have been [illegible] and, in a certain sense, homeless. Today, our brethren of every order are [illegible] purpose, the object of which [illegible] very near the heart of every true Mason, viz: to commence the erection of a home. It is eminently appropriate that we meet today as members of one family, with the proper working tools of our profession, to lay the corner stone of a building which is to be devoted to our own use, to be owned conjointly by us all, and to be occupied by all as our Masonic home.

Mr. Dyer's address was given a hearty round of applause. Grand Master Wheeler then took charge of the ceremonies. After thanking President Brewer for his pleasant words, and assuring the assemblage of Masons of the pleasure it gave him to assist in laying the corner stone of the building, and of the kindly feeling he had always cherished towards Norwich brethren, he called upon Grand Chaplain Herr, who fervently implored divine blessing on the work inaugurated there that day.

After a short congratulatory address by the grand master, Grand Secretary Crary read the following list of contents of memorials:

Grand Treasurer Comstock deposited the box in the cavity of the corner stone, a block of sandstone at the northeast corner of the building. The stone was lowered in position, tested by the implements of the order, the plumb, level and square, and the elements of consecration, corn, wine and oil were spread about. Grand Master Wheeler extended an invocation, public grand honors were performed and the services ended with the benediction by the grand chaplain shortly after 5 o'clock.

Meritorious Pupils.

The following are names of pupils who have not been absent, during the term ending June 30, in the West Town street school.

RECEIVER ASKED.

Northern Investment Company Hopelessly Involved.

LARGEST HOLDERS TAKE ACTION.

Expenses of Company Heavy—Property in Hands of Creditors.

BOSTON, July 3.—A bill was filed in the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts this afternoon to put the Northern Investment company in the hands of a receiver.

The bill alleges that the company is hopelessly involved, and that its present management has paid dividends and even an extra dividend with borrowed money, or by the sale of new stock.

The expenses of the company have been very large, it is stated, and its property is said to be now in the hands of its chief mortgage creditors, the Boston Investment company, whose agent is collecting the rents.

There are between 800 and 1000 stockholders scattered all over New England, many, perhaps half, of whom are women. The gentleman petitioning for the bill are among the very largest stockholders and are well known men.

The attention of the commissioner of foreign corporations is to be called to the affairs of the company.

Sioux City, Ia., is where the company has its basis of operations. The par value of the stock is $100, and it was quoted recently at $108.50. The company advertises the paying of 6 1-2 per cent. dividends per annum.

The Officers of the Company Are:

Treasurer, Alden A. Howe, formerly cashier of the First National bank of Grafton, also of the Quinsigamond National bank of Worcester; directors, W. A. Faulkner, president of the Traders' National bank of Boston; Charles W. Perkins, cashier of the Massachusetts National bank of Boston; George L. Joy, president of Union Loan and Trust company of Sioux City, Ia.; Frank Baldwin of North Grafton, a retired capitalist; A. L. Stetson, president of the American National bank of Sioux City.

The auditors are Lafayette Burr of Boston, treasurer of the National Dock and Warehouse company; John F. Howell, auditor of the city of Worcester.

The corporation counsel are: Hon. Arthur M. Alger, attorney, who has been corporation counsel and mayor of the city of Taunton; W. L. Joy, one of the most prominent lawyers of the state of Iowa, and president of large financial corporations. E. A. Burgess of Sioux City, educated with one of the best law firms of that city, has charge of the deeds, leases and contracts of the company.

The Company's Possessions.

The company has set down among its possessions Gordon block, on Fourth street in Sioux City, a large stone and brick building, three stories high, leased for a term of years; Plymouth block, on Fourth street, which contains 11 large stores, the upper story being rented for a mercantile college.

The Bay State building, a solid granite building four stories high, rented, so it is claimed, on the basis of about 8 per cent. net on the entire cost.

Brown estate, 50 by 150 feet, situated on Nebraska street, covered with one-story structures. School house lot, corner Fifth and Jackson streets. Corn place lot, on corner of Pierce and Sixth streets, 150 by 150 feet.

Other possessions set down to the company are as follows: Club house estate on Fifth street, is rented to a club composed of some of the richest men in Sioux City; Stetson block on Pearl street, rented to the Tollerton-Stetson company; Baker & Bissell block at the corner of Pearl and Second streets, occupied by the wholesale hardware firm whose name it bears; Iowa savings bank building, owned by a corporation, of which the Northern Investment company holds the controlling stock interest.

BOSTON STATISTICS.

Report Showing Births, Marriages and Deaths of the Hub.

BOSTON, July 3.—William H. Whitmore, city registrar, Saturday, submitted to the mayor his first annual report, in which it appears that during 1892 there were recorded 13,154 births, including 104 children of parents usually living out of the city; 8516 intentions of marriage, 5670 marriages in the city, 816 marriages of citizens elsewhere married in the state, 75 of citizens married out of the state, 11,341 deaths and 644 stillborn children.

As returns of marriages performed will continue to be made for months the figures given above are probably within 95 per cent of the whole.

BOLTING PRESBYTERIANS

Hold Secret Conclave In New York on Dr. Briggs' Suspension.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Recorder says: An important secret conclave of "bolting Presbyterians" was held in this city on June 29, to protest against the action of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church on the suspension of Dr. Briggs. The meeting was large and was composed entirely of supporters and sympathizers with Dr. Briggs, and advocates of his policy and tenets.

All information of the meeting and its purposes was carefully kept from the outside public, both before and since the meeting, until yesterday, when a reporter learned that such a conference had been held. Many clergymen from other cities in this city, and some from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Rhode Island, were present. Dr. Francis Brown and Dr. Thomas S. Hastings, both of the Union theological seminary in this city, were present at the meeting, and took an active interest in the proceedings, as did also Dr. James H. Ecob of Albany.

The attendance at the conclave were enjoined to strict secrecy regarding the meeting and its objects, but the reporter learned that some very vigorous protests were entered against the action of the general assembly, which may result in a complete split in that body, and a secession of no mean proportion from its ranks. It was resolved to take immediate steps to circulate a protest against the general assembly's action on the Briggs matter, the protest to be signed by Presbyterians of the more advanced school all over the country.

The reporter called upon a number of clergymen who are known to have been present at the meeting, but all feigned ignorance of it, or refused absolutely to talk on the subject.

GHASTLY SCENE.

Torpedo Station at Newport Borne—Men Killed and Wounded.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 3.—The hospital at Torpedo station presents a ghastly scene. The floors are sprinkled with blood and men are bespattered with it. Frank McLaughlin and Jeremiah Harrington [illegible]. It [illegible] is dying. [illegible] fully [illegible] by [illegible] chance, may live [illegible] is so badly hurt that he still lies on the stretcher under the hands of the surgeon.

The station was discovered to be on fire at 1:30 o'clock, but before assistance could be given from the city, the buildings were a mass of flames.

Nothing remains of the gun cotton factory but the chimney. The loss on machinery and stores will amount to thousands. The fire is now under control. Four men have died and a large number are wounded.

STUDYING TAXATION.

United States Legations in Europe Seeking Information.

BERLIN, July 3.—It is understood here that the United States legations in Europe have been instructed to study and report on existing systems of taxation, in order that the Washington government may select the least oppressive and offensive to cover the deficit which will result from the reform of the tariff.

The member of the Berlin legation, who is examining the Prussian system, is inclined to favor the adoption in the United States of a tax similar to the direct property tax, recently approved by the Landtag.

The wealthier classes in Prussia, he says, do not complain bitterly of the new tax, and the poorer people consider it equitable.

The rich men in America, however, he thinks, would resist stubbornly the introduction of the tax.

Germany on Silver.

BERLIN, July 3.—The governor of the reichsbank, in an interview yesterday, discussed the critical condition of the silver market. The countries with large commercial interests, he said might convene a conference with a view to encouraging the subsidiary use of silver and thus preventing a scarcity of gold. They might agree to retain silver as an exchange token similar to notes for the retail home trade, while reserving gold for the wholesale and international trade.

Huntington Selling Atchison.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The recent selling of Atchison securities is credited to C. P. Huntington. He is said to have parted with at least 10,000 shares of the stock. Mr. Huntington said to a reporter last week, in answer to an inquiry, that he had sold some odds and ends of bonds recently, probably $300,000 in all, but nothing at all like the amount rumor had it. The street story was that he had sold about $10,000,000 worth of securities.

Regimental Scandals Ended.

SALEM, Mass., July 3.—This being the home of the Eighth regiment, Massachusetts volunteer militia, the withdrawal of Mayor Dushenay from the colonelship row, is held here to be the "burying of the hatchet." It leaves Lieutenant Colonel Dodge, Captain Little and Captain Kesler the only candidates. The line officers say this ends the scandals of the regiment.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

New York state monument was dedicated at Gettysburg.

George B. Case, left fielder of the Yale nine, was chosen as captain.

Samuel W. Mason, the old Boston schoolmaster, passed away at his home in Chelsea, Mass.

Reynolds, one of the prisoners escaped from Machias (Me.) jail, has been retaken. Christie is still at large.

George H. True, one of the best known citizens of Manchester, N. H., died of heart trouble, aged 55 years.

The Mutual Life Insurance company of New York was defrauded out of $44,000 by its Cheyenne agent on a deal in land.

Peter F. Henry, aged 48, was killed by falling from the first story of the Forest House, Worcester, Mass., while in a fit.

The Baptist church society of North Adams, Mass., received word from Rev. R. D. Penney of Auburn, N. Y., accepting the call given him.

Louis N. Lindburg, 8 years of age, while crossing the Providence division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, near Worcester, Mass., was struck by a train and instantly killed.

McSweeney Takes the Oath.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., July 3.—Today's mail brought to Edward F. McSweeney of Marlboro his commission as assistant United States commissioner of immigration, and this forenoon Hon. William N. Davenport of that city administered the oath of office. The new assistant commissioner leaves Marlboro today for Ellis island, N. Y., where he expects to report for duty Tuesday. The salary of his office is $4000 a year.

Cruelty to a Horse.

LYNN, July 3.—Charles Glidden, a livery man, let a horse to Fred Leighton and Gorham G. Curtis yesterday afternoon. The team arrived home early this morning and the horse was completely covered with cuts. The animal did not have the strength to stand up and fell over in the harness. Leighton and Curtis were arrested for cruelty and their case will be heard in court Wednesday.

One Burglar Caught.

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 3.—A night watchman, in passing the storerooms of Bell's express last evening, heard noises within. He espied an open window, and daringly entered alone. Frank Grant, one of the burglars, was arrested, but the other, who was recognized as a dangerous criminal, having served time before, escaped. Grant was escorted to the lockup.

Latin Union Conference.

BRUSSELS, July 3.—The Belgian government is reported to be about to convene a special conference of the Latin union states for the purpose of considering what action they shall take in view of the recent fall of silver. This special conference will precede the reassembling of the international monetary conference.

DISTRESSED SCHOONERS.

Mattie Collins' Total Wreck and Edgar Foster Looking Badly.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 3.—The schooner Mattie Collins of Ragged Island was lost last night on Harbor Oderin. A boat was lowered after the vessel struck, but was dashed to pieces. The crew managed to get on the rock and lashed themselves to it. The waves washed over them. Their position was discovered later and their rescue effected with great difficulty.

The schooner Edgar Foster of Beverly, Mass., is here, looking badly, having been strained on the Grand banks in a heavy sea. She has been out since April 1, and has 180,000 pounds of fish aboard.

Toasts Were Drunk.

PARIS, July 3.—The American and English delegates to the Behring sea court of arbitration gave a banquet on Saturday in honor of M. Decrais, the French foreign minister. Toasts were drunk to the health of President Carnot, Queen Victoria and President Cleveland. [illegible]

A [illegible] WEDDING.

Mason—Allyn.

A quiet home wedding took place June 28, at Riverview, at the residence of Mr. Calvin Allyn. The contracting parties were Miss Lois Anna Allyn, eldest daughter of Mr. Allyn and Mr. Dwight Leslie Mason of Winchendon, Mass. Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in a white figured silk gown and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and maiden-hair ferns.

Miss Annie Billings of Ledyard, acted as maid of honor and wore a white silk gown. The ushers were Mr. Zadoc L. White, James R. Allyn, brother of the bride and Orland W. Mason.

After the ceremony a reception was held. Some of the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Zadoc Long White, Miss Mabel Mason and Miss Helen Weston of Winchendon, Mass.; Miss Nellie J. White of Honolulu, Sandwich Islands; Mr. Charles White of Uncasville, Conn.; Mrs. Evan J. Henry of Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. James Allyn of New London, Conn. Besides these there were a large number present from Norwich and the adjoining towns. Miss Lucy Blackman, a teacher in the Free Academy, during the bride's course, was also present.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents.

A large number of regrets were received from various parts of the country.

The bridal couple left on an evening train for a short trip, after which they will receive their friends Thursdays in August at their home in Winchendon, Mass.

The fat women residents of Harper county, Kan., held a picnic the other day.

A kite string 1,000 feet long blew and lodged against the rigging of the Baltimore schooner Souther when it was in the Atlantic, thirty-five miles from land.

The Bulletin.

Fourth of July.

JULY FOURTH.

Let the bugle and trumpet resound;
Let clamor fill all the vast round
Of a land that is happy and free.
Let the sharp rat-ta-tap of the drum
Preach the gospel of freedom to come
To the nations beyond the blue sea.

Ring the bells! Shout the story abroad
Of a cause that was helped by the Lord
And of heroic deeds that were done.
Let the scabbard that hangs on your wall,
With the sword rusted in, tell us all
How a thrice blessed Union was won.

Fling our flag to the vibrating air,
That banner so precious and fair,
And [illegible] how it was made.
Its red, dyed in blood of the brave
Who perished their country to save—
[illegible]

Its blue from the heavens on that day
When the chains of the slave fell away,
And he stood on the broad earth a man,
While the stars of the states crowded in,
Each his place in a nation to win,
Whose boundaries were set by God's hand.

Oh, white may her stripes long remain,
Untouched by oppression's dark stain,
On history's page shining bright!
Beat drums! Ring out, all ye bells!
While the chorus of Liberty swells
And a nation rejoices in might.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

HOW TOM WAS FOUND.

The Fourth of July comes in midwinter south of the equator, which explains why the passengers on the deck of the big ship Petrel, from San Francisco to Melbourne, drew their wraps closely about them on the evening of the day they would have at home celebrated with firecrackers and feasting.

Among these passengers was the Thurston family, late of New York—father, mother and four children. A girl baby was the youngest of them; then came 5-year-old Tom, and after him a sister and brother almost grown up. Mr. Thurston owned real estate at Melbourne, and he had decided to live there in the future.

Just after the brilliant stars came out Tom saw several muffled up men with big bundles under their arms hurry stealthily to the bow of the vessel. This mystery was almost instantly explained by a hissing roar and the upward rush of a skyrocket's streak of light. Then 20 sturdy sailors' voices started that song dearest to every American patriot's heart, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." By the time they had finished the first grand verse every American on board was at the bow of the ship singing with them. Though home was 12,000 miles behind, it was still the glorious Fourth.

After this first song the captain mounted to the bridge with a rolled paper in his hands. All sounds were hushed. The burly boatswain held the lantern for his commander, the paper was raised aloft, and every one knew that it was the great charter of freedom.

"I am about to read to you the Declaration of Independence," said the captain in a voice husky with emotion. "There are many of us here tonight who may never hear these dear words again."

The cheers that came after he had finished had not begun to die away when high and clear above them rose a pure soprano. The cheers stopped, and all listened as Mrs. Thurston sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Tom stood at her side, and her soft hand passed caressingly over his hair as she sang. When she ended the first verse, she looked down at him and said:

"Sing with me, Tom."

After that his sweet, childish, piping joined her magnificent notes.

But the last words of the song were scarcely finished when tears that glistened in loving memory of home and country were frozen on pallid cheeks by the hoarse and awful cry of "Fire!" "The ship's on fire!"

Brave men worked with the energy of despair, but the carelessness of a sailor had done its work too well. Before dawn eight boats were pulling away from the blazing hulk of the Petrel.

In vain Tom called for his mother. With the first alarm she had told him to stay [illegible] where he was while she ran below to get his little sister, and he had tried to obey her injunctions, but despite his protests he was taken away before she returned and put in the first boat to leave the ship.

When morning came, but three of the boats were in sight, and in none of these could any member of the Thurston family but Tom be found. A few days later rough weather parted these consorts, and the boat in which Tom was as tenderly cared for as possible was alone on the Pacific.

The horrors of thirst and starvation that followed quickly found victims, but Tom, wan, pale and most of the time quietly weeping, lived on, though in his sorrowful little heart he really wanted to die. All the boat's crew loved him, and as long as there was any to divide divided the food and water with him. Worse and worse waxed the hours for the little company. Every day some one died. At the end of these periods only Tom and two others were left.

When morning broke on the twenty-second day after the desertion of the burning ship, land was sighted. As they neared the shore long canoes manned by brown skinned natives came out to meet them. The savages lifted Tom's comrades from the bottom of the boat. He never saw them again. One great, strapping fellow threw Tom over his shoulder, and overcome with thirst and exposure the little fellow fainted. When he revived, a kindly black face was bending over him as he lay on the grass beneath a spreading tree. The words the native woman spoke Tom had never heard before, but he eagerly seized the gourd of milk she held to his lips and understood the language of her tender actions.

He was soon dressed in the rude skins worn by his savage rescuers and before many weeks had passed began to comprehend much of their talk. The woman who had been so kind still watched over him with jealous care. She had lost her own little black son the day Tom had been brought into camp, and in spite of angry protests and fierce looks she had claimed this white boy for herself, declaring that their god had sent him to her in answer to her prayer. As she was the wife of one of the big chiefs the child was given to her.

Months passed, and Tom became almost as one of the tribe. Then came a famine such as the oldest chiefs had never known before. Many were the envious glances cast at Tom's plump, sturdy little figure, and his foster mother became more watchful than ever.

One night as he lay asleep she touched him on the shoulder. "Come," she whispered, and as Tom sprang lightly up she placed a finger to his lips. Then taking him by the hand she led the way through the bush.

Finally, when they were almost exhausted by hunger and fatigue, the slender wire of one of the telegraph lines that stretch across the Australian wilderness was seen on strong poles reaching high above the stunted [illegible].

The woman gave a cry of delight. In an indistinct way she knew what the wire was. She had seen one once before and had been told by her superstitious chief that through it the white man talked with their God.

She determined to try to talk with the white man's God herself—to try to get him to send after this little one whom she loved so well and for whose safety from her hungry tribe she had worked so hard.

She prostrated herself before the pole and prayed for the boy's deliverance all that day and most of the night. Then it occurred to her that if she placed her lips close to the wire itself the white man's God would surely hear and answer.

Before she began the climb up the pole she fashioned a rude sling out of her skirt to hold her at the top while she talked to God. With this in her teeth she started. Higher and higher up the bare pole she crawled, clutching it desperately with arms and legs, stopping every foot to rest, praying all the time. Great splinters tore her skin, and a little stream of blood from her wounds ran down the pole. She did not mind. Her only thought was of the boy who had absorbed all her wealth of mother love. At last, almost fainting, she reached the top. With one trembling hand she put the sling over it so that the bar holding the wire would keep it from slipping. Then, with head drooping and relaxed muscles, she hung there for awhile, too weak even to pray. When her strength had partly returned, she began, and no prayer from the finest carved pulpit ever was more fervent.

Noon came without any sign of rescue from heaven or earth. Still she clung there. The shadows began to lengthen. Her limbs had stiffened from her cramped position, and her mind was crazed by exhaustion and disappointment. Her prayers changed to curses. The white man's God scorned her and scorned her boy. She grew frantic with wrath and pounded the pole and wire with her fists as she hurled anathemas at them and their God. Hanging by a string about her neck was a boomerang of hardened wood. With it she struck and shattered the glass insulator. Then she pounded the swaying wire. She twisted it and bent it in her fingers. She bit it with her teeth. Finally she broke it. Then she slid to the ground and groveled on the grass in an ecstasy of grief and anger at God and man.

She was recalled to her senses by a piercing cry from Tom. His weariness had changed to the delirium of hunger fever. She gathered him, struggling and screaming, in her arms and held him until the paroxysm passed. Then she made a soft bed of leaves for him and searched for food. She only found a few berries until noon the next day, when greatly to her delight she discovered the nest of some wild fowl with eggs in it. These she forced Tom to suck. She ate nothing herself. What Tom rejected was untouched. She thought only of him.

For three days this went on. She was getting constantly weaker. When the morning of the fourth day broke, she could only crawl on hands and knees in her search for berries. That day linemen sent from the nearest telegraph station, many miles away, to find and repair the break in the wire found them—black woman and white child—lying at the foot of the pole.

They gave them food and heard the woman's story. Touched by it, they offered to take them both back with them, but the woman would not go.

"Take him," she said, pointing to Tom, "take him to his people. He will be better there without me. Give me a little food to keep breath in my body, and I will go back to my tribe. I have saved him. My life is full of joy."

As they bore the boy away she gazed after them wistfully until the bush hid them. Then turning and parting the thick undergrowth she plunged into the wilderness.

For a long time Tom tended sheep for the lineman who had rescued him. The old life was almost forgotten. He ceased to think it strange that he should tend sheep and swelter beneath the shade of a tree on Christmas when in his old home there had been cold and snow and ice. Then another change came. His master died, the sheep were sold, and he was turned away from the station by the newcomers.

A month later, ragged, worn and hungry, he was wandering about the streets of Melbourne. For weeks he kept body and soul together by begging and doing what work he could find. Winter was coming, June merged into July, and the southern cold set in. Barefooted and clothed in rags, Tom was trying to sell papers. As night approached the air grew sharp and biting.

The stars came out clear and beautiful. Suddenly through the cold, crisp air a rocket shot upward. Tom rubbed his eyes. A flood of recollections overpowered him. He sprang forward in the direction of the great trail of light, but soon he stopped. "I guess it must have been a dream," he said to himself as the jumbled memories of the past confused him.

Again the sky was lightened, and some passerby remarked to a friend:

"Those crazy Americans celebrating the Fourth of July."

"The Fourth of July," murmured Tom and started eagerly up again.

Swiftly now his bare feet bore him toward the light of the fireworks. By and by he stood before a great brown building with marble steps and heard the sound of music. A woman's voice floated out on the night air, a voice that thrilled Tom to his soul—he could not tell why. It seemed to the little wanderer as if an angel were singing. With trembling steps he crawled up the great stairway and sat on the doorstep listening.

Again the voice broke the stillness, this time with the glorious notes of "The Star Spangled Banner." Tom drew his hand over his eyes. It all came back to him—that Fourth of July night on the ship so long ago.

The verse ended, but the piano played on as though some one were to go on with the second verse. Then a strange thing happened. A sweet, piercing boyish voice swelled on the night air, and floating through an open window reached the ears of the happy gathering within. Never, they thought in their astonishment, had they heard so sweet a boyish tenor. The butler, after the unexpected voice had stopped, opened the door to ask the silver voiced chorister in, and almost stumbled over a bundle of rags crouched up in the corner, sobbing. It was Tom.

"Come in, little chap," said he. "P'raps you'd like to 'ave somethin to eat."

Bashfully Tom walked into the great lighted hall and into the great dining room, where a table was laden down with good things, but his gaze roved over these and rested on the face of a beautiful woman, who with others of the party was crowding eagerly forward to see the boy who had sung so wonderfully. For a moment Tom looked into her eyes, but there was no sign of recognition in them—only interest. He said again:

"I guess I must 'a' dreamed it all," and turned wearily away.

"Dreamed what, little boy?" asked the beautiful woman, leaning over him.

"I don't know—nuthin—but when I heard the music a-comin through the winder," Tom's voice was low and thoughtful, "it seemed to me that some time I'd been on a big ship off on the ocean; that while they was a-sendin up fireworks I had stood long side of a beautiful lady and"——

The stooping woman dropped to her knees and grasped Tom by the shoulders. Her eyes were fastened eagerly on his face; her bosom was heaving. The others stood around in wonder.

"You stood by a beautiful lady," said the woman, "and—and [illegible]. Go on!" There were tears in her eyes.

Tom was frightened. "That's nothin, ma'am—I didn't mean nuthin—I guess I must 'a' dreamed it. I didn't mean to make you feel bad."

"Go on! Go on! You haven't made me feel bad. Go on!"

"Well, I stood by a beautiful lady, and she looked like you, only her hair wasn't gray, and—and I sang"—Tom's voice trembled now, and his eyes shifted from the woman's face and looked off over her into memory—"and I sang that song with her. I can see it all so plain! She had 'er hand on my head. I think she was my mother—I—I think so."

In an instant the woman's arms were about the ragged little boy. The woman's sweet lips were covering his dirty face with kisses.

Tom's Fourth of July had ended very gloriously.—New York Press.

Fourth of July Dance In the Panhandle.

When the set was slow in filling, the master called out persuasively:

"Two more couple, an we'll have a little dance. Hurry up, now, an throw yourself around on this stretch like a quarter horse. Let's have a race."

But it was not often the [illegible] arrangement to fill. More frequently the master was obliged to argue:

"Stan back and give us a little room, people. We've got a wild cat spring here."

The crowd, in the eagerness to see the dancing, gave the dancers scant room for the measures.

"Hoe down on her!" said the master. The violin started, and so did the shuffling:

Circle to the left and gents trail home.
Let the ladies [illegible].

So he called, and dropping his voice an octave he sang:

Everybody dance; corners swing
Good style; pretty little partner;
That's the thing.

Shuffle, shuffle go the feet, and the figure is finished. Off starts the caller again:

First couple, right; ladies swing out;
Gents swing in; swing out and promenade.
Do, do, gents, slow;
Do, ce, ladies, don't you know?

Then comes more intricate work. The cowboys can't begin to get in all their fancy steps. The pace is hot. The skirts of the graingrowers' daughters swish through the air as the master calls:

Balance the next; three hands round;
Ladies swing out; gents swing in;
Three hands out and go it ag'in;
Gents swing out and go it ag'in;
Seven hands up, and ladies swing out;
Four and balance; now, partners, promenade all.

The master permits 30 seconds' breathing spell, during which the cowboys try to get rid of some of their surplus perspiration, while the girls ply their fans and look moist and happy. The caller gathers himself for a prolonged effort. "Second couple to right," he calls, and then he goes it without break for five minutes, like this:

Ladies swing until [illegible];
Three hands up and go it ag'in;
Balance again, ladies to center;
Fall in the corners; promenade home.
[illegible] two and two come down;
Ladies in center and seven hands round.
Fall in the corners. Now, partners all.
Go south. Wheat's all dead,
And you've got more bread, I guess.

"Not in the Wichita valley, the wheat ain't dead by a [illegible]," one of the dancers shouts, but without minding the interruption the caller goes right along with his fun making:

Fall and balance; swing and run;
Four to two and two come down;
Lady in center and five hands round;
Ladies swing out and [illegible];
Five up and go it ag'in;
Swing out; run away [illegible];
Hold and balance; all balance;
Now partners run away [illegible];
Everybody dance; [illegible]
with;
Final promenade; the cowboys' huddle.

And the next time it is something different, with variations on this kind of a figure:

Four hands up; half round the world;
Gents turn a "[illegible]" ladies [illegible];
Ladies round the gents; gents don't go;
Round up forms; everybody swing;
Swing them corners like swinging on a gate;
Swing, ladies, [illegible];
Pretty little [illegible] round up forms.

And thus it went on with endless variety in the language and measures, but the same shuffling, the same [illegible] girls and the same frolicsome cowboys, until the sun went down behind the [illegible].—Exchange.

Progress the Fourth Has Witnessed.

Since the 4th of July became recognized as the natal day of our nation our population has grown from 4,000,000 to 65,000,000. Its center moving westward 1,000 miles since 1790 is eloquent with the founding of cities and the birth of states. New settlements, clearing the forests and subduing the prairies and adding 4,000,000 to the few thousand farms which were the support of the early republic create one of the greatest granaries of the world and open exhaustless reservoirs of national wealth. The industries which the first act of our first administration sought to encourage now give remunerative employment to more people than inhabited the republic when first established. The grand total of their annual output of $7,000,000,000 in value places the United States first among the manufacturing countries of the earth.

One-half the total mileage of all the railroads and one-quarter of all the telegraph lines of the world within our borders testify to the volume, variety and value of an internal commerce which makes these states, if need be and if widely used, independent and self supporting. The hundred years of development under favorable and unfavorable political conditions have brought the sum of our national wealth to a figure which has passed the results of a thousand years for the motherland herself, otherwise the richest of all modern empires.—Chicago Ledger.

Give the Youngsters a Chance.

All the big, full grown patriotic Americans who have at home one or more little Americans who are anxious to celebrate the Fourth in a fitting manner had better hustle around and get them something to celebrate with if they are unsupplied. All the little Americans ought to have a fair, square chance to make some kind of a noise on Independence day, and they will be heard from if you give them half a chance.—New York Sun.

The Toy Cannon.

Little Johnnie, he has left us,
And his loss we deeply feel—
Blew into the touch hole, and he Slipped up on the cannon peel.
—Exchange.

Battles Fought Over Again.

The city way of celebrating the Fourth is flippant and thoughtless compared with the methods employed in many country districts where they are still raising troops to fight against King George. There the American flag is triumphantly raised, and the orator of the day offers his life in the defense amid a great salvo of cheers. He is looked upon as a great hero by the assembled citizens, whose imaginations are so aroused that they look furtively around to see if there are any double dyed Hessians in [illegible].

This spirit is enjoyed also by the children, who, having only recently learned how this country became free, feel all the enthusiasm of converts. They would like to get up a movement to go out into the highways and byways and slaughter any sinister looking Englishmen whom they might find lurking around.—New York Herald.

How to Celebrate the Fourth.

To celebrate the Fourth properly you must rise at 4, creep to the window and try to find out whether it looks like rain. Go to bed again and dream dreams of infinite [illegible] until the small boy of the house fires a cracker at your door and wakes you to the realization that you are in [illegible] America. [illegible] this cordiality which [illegible] thrust upon him. Take a bath and breakfast if you can afford them, then count your shekels and hug them tenderly, for by the setting of the sun you'll be as poor as a post.—Texas Siftings.

THE SPIRIT OF UNCLE SAM.

It Pervades the Small Boy and Fills Him With Enthusiasm.

Uncle Sam is 117 years old today. He is a very jolly old chap. Every one knows just how he looks, the same as every one knows about Santa Claus. He and old Santa are the patron saints of our land. Once a year each comes into the busy life of the world and bids it cease work and celebrate, and the world obeys.

So on this day the spirit of Uncle Sam is abroad. He has made his presence felt for days, and he has encouraged the small boy to squander pennies for sizzling pinwheels and penny flowerpots to be fired surreptitiously on the roof when no one was near. This morning the same old gentleman peered into the nursery and tickled the nose of the same small boy with the breath of a fragrant firecracker and bade him be up and doing. You wonder who it is that wakens the small boy on the Fourth of July, do you not?

This matutinal disturber of juvenile slumber, who prompts the offender to rise and fire off his loudest artillery to disturb your morning nap, is Uncle Sam himself. He stands around and dives his hands down deep in his trousers pockets and then gives that nether garment a hitch that threatens the straps that confine it, and then he chuckles with glee. He seems to say:

"This is my birthday, children, and I depend upon you to celebrate it."

Uncle Sam never says anything about politics. It is neither north, south, east nor west that he favors, but he stretches the stars and stripes over the length and breadth of the United States to glorify the land of the free and the home of the brave.

This is the day to teach the children patriotism. There is no sectionalism to be taught as a side issue with the lesson. The firecracker is the A B C of patriotism. This is the day to teach the children what it means. They will like it all the better when they know how important the meaning is.

The grown up world loves the Fourth of July because of its associations. Every man can recall the feeling of one small boy in his memory who was blown up with gunpowder. Every woman can remember one little girl who burned her fingers and a hole in her gown. Every father and mother have a little story, a reminiscence, to relate. The children listen, and Uncle Sam listens, too, and chuckles at the recollection. He [illegible] himself.

So we all love the Fourth of July. Even the baby, whose first Fourth it is today, shouts in glee at the disturbance and grasps the beautiful, bright flag you put into the chubby hand and sucks the paint off with infantile relish.

The little chap whom you meet and [illegible] whom you buy some firecrackers because you see he has none will remember you as long as he lives and bless you.

And as for the rest of us, let us all grasp hands and circle around north, south, east, west, Uncle Sam, Columbia and everybody to celebrate the genial old gentleman's one hundred and seventeenth birthday.—New York Recorder.

A Cannon Cracker In the Salad.

The [illegible] of last Fourth of July are of course stale, flat and unprofitable by this time, but one which decorated that event seems to me original enough to warrant the telling. At one of the innumerable Newtons—"the ten [illegible] Newtons," as a Bostonian [illegible] them—there was on the Fourth a Sunday school picnic. Now, in this unregenerate part of the world there are wicked boys, even at Sunday school picnics, and one of these conceived the brilliant idea of sticking a huge cannon cracker into the dish of salad which stood at the head of the festive board—or rather cloth, for there are never boards at Sunday school picnics, but only tablecloths spread upon the ground. How the small boy managed to get his cracker into the salad unperceived, or to light it after it was there, is one of those mysteries which must remain unsolved until the time when the small boy begins to be understood, as he is not at present. The fact is both these things were accomplished, the latter under the very nose of the pastor, who stood at the head of the feast to say a lengthy grace directly over the smoking bowl. The effect of the volcano of salad, which showered the pastor with an oleaginous lava of mingled lobster, oil, eggs and lettuce, is one of those things of which the fancy may dream, but which words cannot paint. The grace was concluded without an amen, and general consternation ensued. The women shrieked, and the graceless youths of the crowd chuckled in unholy joy, and over that picnic descended the gloom of a general conviction that there was present one small boy for whom eternal perdition was not only sure, but on the whole rather too good.—Chicago Tribune.

Fourth of July, 1864.

Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Hunter, were the words of the day on July 4, 1864. Sherman was then on his successful march to the sea, carrying everything before him in his victorious progress. Martinsburg had just been evacuated by the enemy. Although no one was certain of it, the long war was nearly over, and the next Fourth of July was to see the white wings of peace where then waved the bloody banners of war. Lincoln had called for 500,000 more men for the front. Secretary of the Treasury Chase had sent in his resignation, and Fessenden had been selected for his place. The Kearsarge and the Alabama had met in conflict, and the Alabama had been sunk. Grant was before Petersburg demanding its unconditional surrender. Martinsburg was evacuated, and Hunter had marched in at the head of his victorious troops.

So ended the last Fourth of July of the great civil war. When the next Independence day rolled around, the country was in peace, and the warm hearts of northerners were devising ways and means to assist their impoverished brethren in the south, who had lost everything in the war.—Exchange.

Why Some People Like the Fourth.

Because it's one holiday more a year anyhow.

Because one may get dizzy and be forgiven.

Because it's so much nearer to the next public holiday.

Because it gives them a chance to go fishing and lie about it.

Because the dear girls at home put extras on the dinner table.

Because their love of noise is second only to their love of peanuts.

Because the troublesome small boys have a chance to kill themselves.

Because they may show off the latest thing in tennis blazers and yachting suits.

Because it gives them a whole day for lovemaking and love's ineffable ineffableness.

Because roasting potatoes in a bonfire is a pleasure not experienced every day in the year.

Because they may make the same patriotic speeches they made last year and the year before.

Because one may go out into an open lot.—Judge.

KING OF HOLIDAYS.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH IS THE BEST OF THE WHOLE LOT.

New Year's and Thanksgiving Are Well Enough In Their Way, but They're Not In It With Independence Day—Reminiscences of Celebrations In Days of Yore.

The Fourth of July is the biggest, most riotous day of all holidays. New Year's amounts to nothing. People make resolutions, stuff themselves with turkey and look out of windows. That is New Year's day. Washington's birthday is simply a reminder that we are patriotic. Some people hoist flags, others have masquerade dances, and banks close their doors. That is Washington's birthday. Decoration day is pretty in its way. Flowers are strewn over graves, an opportunity is given everybody to parade in the rain, and the death list is boosted the next week as a result of early spring exercise. Thanksgiving day, like New Year's day, is simply an excuse for people to stifle the cry of their appetite by dumping upon it a load of turkey, "stuffin" and mince pie. Christmas is more of a day than any of those mentioned, but even that day breaks people and leaves them to sit around in a silly way and grin at the evidences of their generosity.

But the Fourth of July! That is the day! It is wild. It is western. The bursting of a firecracker is worth more than the turkey dinner of New Year's day. The explosion of a torpedo gives more inspiration than the bellow of a bass viol at a Washington birthday masquerade. The swoosh of a skyrocket accentuates the patriotism displayed on Decoration day. The hiss and whizz of a pinwheel arouses a keener enthusiasm than the carving of a big, common turkey, and the roar of a cannon startles more children than the pretty but silly legend of Santa Claus. The Fourth of July is the big day of the year. It's the preacher at a marriage; it's the water that turns the wheel; it's the "g" string in the harp of holidays.

Big towns hear the boom and see the flash of the Fourth of July. There is a wild fusillade of explosions and the rolling and banging of fire engines. Ambulances tear through the smoking streets, and the nurses in gray dresses and white aprons at the hospitals bend over patriots whose bodies have been pierced and burned by shot and powder. War excites enthusiasm. It develops warriors and heroes. Its roar and crash make pretty women drop their fans and trip into their lawns to cheer. The Fourth of July in a big town is a reminder of war. There are the dead and wounded, the streets are ablaze, and the sky at night is seamed and slashed with fire. No wonder, then, that the day is the daddy of all holidays. Plum puddings, overgrown turkeys, good resolutions, wreaths of immortelle, cherry tree masquerades and a legend of a pink nosed man shinning down the chimney—compare all these with the bang and flash of Independence day.

Who wouldn't lose a leg or an arm on the Fourth of July?

But did you ever stop to think over the way you used to pass that day in the village where everybody knew you by a nickname? There were the old crates back of the crockeryman's store. The groceryman had some use for the oil and tar barrels, but he always left them out of doors. You were a boy then, but for weeks and weeks you stole behind the buildings and dragged those crates and barrels to a place where nobody in the village could find them. The 4th of July was always a momentous day in town. The good crockery dealer knew what would be done with his crates. The groceryman knew what disposition was to be made with his missing barrels. They were to be burned. And so they were. Just as the clocks in the other houses were striking the midnight hour there was a blaze of fire near the town pump, and in an instant the [illegible] covered housetops and the stores with their purple shades and queer weather cocks reflected the glow of the patriotic fire. The crockery dealer's crates and the groceryman's barrels were in that blaze. But these merchants didn't mind that.

It was the Fourth of July.

Slowly the great bonfire fell away to ashes and snapping embers. Then day broke. With the first palestines of light in the east came the middle aged villager with the village brass cannon. It was always dragged to the common by the hotel bus driver or the snare drummer in the town band. These men knew how to fire a cannon. For a day or more they had been making charges of powder in red flannel socks and stalking about the streets at night with the air of a man who thinks he holds the world by the tail and can break its back by one swing of the arm. The boys who had built the bonfire with the crates of the crockery dealer and the barrels of the groceryman (and you were one of them) trooped after the men with the cannon. But you had nothing to say. The real serious waking of the day had just begun. The only thing you had done was to [illegible] fire. The salute was always fired at [illegible]. The bills on the boards of a fence at the fair grounds had announced the hour weeks before. There was much ceremony in ramming the charge home and jerking the lanyard. The hostler of the hotel barn had always had something to say about the way the thing should be done.

Country people never got to town much before noon. They came in wagons with soft maple boughs fastened to the harness of the horses and a flag or two fluttering from the tail gate of the conveyance. Meantime a Cossack looking fellow had given a street entertainment with a performing bear in front of the postoffice. But the real celebration of the day never began until 2 o'clock. Then the assemblyman of the district (and a mighty man was he with his stringy hair and owlish eyes) would read the Declaration of Independence. Then would come the oration. Sometimes the assemblyman would deliver that, too, but as a rule the big village lawyer was given the job. His wife always sat on the platform with a proud look on her face. Then would come the greased pole, which the town lout would make a desperate effort to climb, but with the invariable result of falling ignominiously to the ground. The greased pig, a sack race, a procession of ragamuffins and an allegorical representation of the 13 original states in the flounces and basques and paniers of 13 young girls, with the hotel keeper's daughter as the Goddess of Liberty, always closed the afternoon's celebration. Then the good women of the Presbyterian church would give an ice cream festival, at which the assemblyman with his stringy hair and the big village lawyer who had made the oration of the day would fill their faces and slobber over the napkins thrust in their necks. Then would come the fireworks, the screeching and hissing of the skyrocket, the bursting of a colored ball of fire in the lace curtains of the hotel and the spattering of a pinwheel on the town pump.

Night always ceased with a fire in the bakery shop. This was Fourth of July in the country.—Chicago Herald.

[illegible] GLORIOUS FOURTH.

[illegible] to celebrate the Fourth has [illegible] of Americans for many [illegible] and the mass meetings, [illegible] and the blood have not been [illegible] the best or the noblest way in [illegible] such an anniversary. [illegible], in the July Forum, [illegible] question: "How the Fourth of [illegible] Celebrated" thus: "The [illegible] how to make the Fourth [illegible], a national solemn[illegible] the claims of the [illegible], as well as to be [illegible] the first place, I should think [illegible] one of reunion [illegible] and associations of [illegible]. Those whose [illegible] enough to understand [illegible] of human freedom [illegible] compare their studies and [illegible]. Very fitly, after such a [illegible] of them might [illegible], to whose members he might [illegible] statement of the phil[illegible]. Mothers, who should [illegible] guardians of peace, might [illegible] to study all [illegible] pro[illegible]. In gatherings of [illegible], prize essays might be [illegible]. I can imagine [illegible] serious and stately [illegible] which men and women [illegible] and pledge each other, [illegible] of friendship and good [illegible].

[illegible] imagine anything like the [illegible] celebration of the Fourth! A [illegible] of the American spirit and [illegible] of pure American ideas [illegible] in common that something else [illegible] on the Fourth of July [illegible]. It is not a day for preach[illegible] for fun. As a martial festival [illegible] always have a semi-military [illegible] be a carnival of explosions [illegible] enjoy powder and noise, a [illegible] for those who like to [illegible], and a day of culture [illegible] love to learn. It is a good [illegible] twenty-four day with room [illegible] for the quiet and the noisy [illegible] good time without disturbing [illegible].

[illegible] prison scandal is now in the [illegible] of the new board of prison directors [illegible] have the matter to settle. It is [illegible] that although the board is demo[illegible] majority of its members [illegible] to be favorable to General Cham[illegible]. They have met and organized, [illegible] Friday will meet and determine [illegible].

[illegible] Chamberlain and Dr. Fox are at [illegible] Wethersfield prison, and to a Courant [illegible] on Saturday, the warden said [illegible] that his leave-of-absence [illegible] expired, and that he was back [illegible] practice. He certainly was the [illegible] qualified as warden and was [illegible] warden now, but the prison [illegible] martial law and he should not [illegible]. Whenever the [illegible] and [illegible] authorities came in conflict, the civic [illegible] give way and he should in this [illegible].

It is not becoming in General Chamber[illegible] to intimate that there is any usurpa[illegible] of power over at Wethersfield, or [illegible] is being in any wise unfairly dealt [illegible]. He ought not to be satisfied with [illegible] such conclusion of an investigation as [illegible] state of Connecticut has witnessed, [illegible] of which the press generally has dis[illegible]. Innocent men like to be vin[illegible]dicated, not hung up and labelled in a po[illegible] museum both "guilty" and "not guilty."

Gen. Chamberlain is the suspended warden of state prison, and we shall be glad, and no doubt he will be, when he is well rid of the suspense. He is now in the hands of his political opponents, and if they find the case against him unproven and restore him to power his vindication will be complete. It is intimated that he has a fair chance of being reinstated, and should he be, that will end a controversy that has been warmly participated in by most of the papers in the state.

THE EFFECT.

The correct views of the press and the mistake of the administration is plainly shown by the result upon the business of the country since President Cleveland issued his proclamation for an extraordinary session of congress. A reaction has set in, there are signs of confidence and good [illegible], and goods have [illegible] a tendency chargeable to the halting policy of the administration when the one hundred million reserve in the treasury was broken into and Secretary Carlisle almost decided that the government's silver certificates were not payable in gold. Apprehending results, President Cleveland promptly assured the country that these certificates were payable in gold and his secretary has since forgotten to speak upon the subject.

For nearly six weeks appeals had been pouring in upon the president to call an extra session of congress, and by a prompt response he could have effected the happy result which we see today. Cleveland has a good deal to answer for, and in view of the immediate change which followed his proclamation, he must be convinced that his "object lesson" policy was too ruinous for any man or party to indulge in who has the welfare of his country at heart.

THE REICHSTAG MEETS TODAY.

The fourth of July in Germany witnesses the assembling of the new reichstag, which it is supposed will support the emperor's army bill. The large number of parties makes results uncertain, because the balance of power changes with each new election, and the party that gains the power to hold over or overthrow a policy or to pass or defeat a bill usually has an axe to grind; and is ready for a compromise. By the late elections the balance of power fell to the anti-semites, and it cannot be said now what they will do, although they are [illegible] in favor of the military bill. As the new reichstag stands there are supposed to be 204 votes for the army bill and 190 against it. The anti-semites gained 190 per cent. in the late elections, and their [illegible] is to deprive the Hebrew race of all social and civic rights in the German empire; and they are now where they can stipulate for concessions from the government. The anti-semites excite the jealousy of the socialists, but these wagers of war against the Hebrew capitalists of that country may be expected some day to join hands with the socialists in waging war against all capitalists. It will be interesting to see how the emperor will manage to hold these Jew-haters in support of his bill for the enlargement of the military forces.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Be careful with that cannon cracker. A finger or an eye lost on the Fourth has no consolation about it.

An exchange makes the pat inquiry: "If the extra congress may not be regarded as an August body?"

Down at Boston they claim the omens were right Friday for a Yale victory—an eagle flew over Mr. Ives' head before the race.

The Duke of Veragua sailed for Spain on Saturday. He was less courteous than the Infanta, and did not make as favorable an impression.

A. J. Drexel and Leland Stanford were millionaires whose contributions for the good of the people are a greater honor to them than the dollars which were counted to their credit.

A United States judge in California holds that a Chinaman arrested under the Geary act and convicted has the right to appeal, and that he cannot be imprisoned or deported without a trial by jury. The constitution secures to Chinamen every right that it secures to every other alien.

As Governor Flower was addressing the 47th New York regiment Sunday evening a "breezy" private exclaimed to him: "Governor, you are talking through your pajamas. Take it off and give the wind a chance!" Such insubordination cannot be commended, but the fellow apparently knew the governor.

The Boston Journal says: "'Pay up and smile' is what Harvard had to do last week. It is a good time to read the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table's definition of a gentleman." The Bulkeleys of New London have not learned how to do that yet! The reading advised might not prove pleasurable to them.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

We are What we Are!

The Fourth of July divides the old from the new. The world is on a higher level because of the self-sacrifice of our fathers. Their memory is our richest inheritance and their heroism lies at the foundation of our prosperity. We are what we are because they were what they were. Rejoicing mingles with responsibility and we face the future with a glorious past for a background. The republic has taught mankind that an educated people is its own king.—[New York Herald.

Something Dropped.

Have the congressmen heard something drop? It was silver. Stand from under.—[Springfield Union.

Ore!

"The trouble of our country is ore; when congress has met, let us hope it will be o'er."—[Boston Transcript.

He Can Wipe His Brow.

Mr. Quincy may now wipe his brow and take a brief interval of rest. He has got his man, McSweeney, into the office of assistant commissioner of immigration. This was one of the greatest efforts of his life.—[Boston Journal.

Poor Policy.

The instruction of the democracy by the "object lesson" method is the destruction of the property of the people.—[New York Press.

Apt.

Center college has dubbed our Adlai as LL. D. Lamentably Lonesome Democrat.—[The Chicago Inter Ocean.

"IF."

If the country could believe in the democratic party there would soon be plenty of confidence in the financial situation.—[The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Kicker.

Some folks is allus kickin'
And raisin' of a storm;
In summer time they mope and whine, and say
"It's Too
Blamed
Warm!" —[Cincinnati Times.

Dire Confusion.

The vast army of disciples of democracy who had gone to Washington ready and willing, even anxious, to serve their country [illegible] the way did them do so [illegible] confusion by the president's sudden departure from the city.—[Worcester Spy.

His Epitaph.

It was said of a public man some years ago after he had committed a monumental error: "He has blown out the gas and gone to bed." Governor Altgeld might cut out this epitaph and paste it in his hat.—[New York Tribune.

It Didn't Work.

A sentimental South Carolina girl wrote to her lover, "Drink to me only with thine eyes." He was a plain, matter-of-fact chap, and he wrote back that there was no provision for his doing so under the new law. It is understood that the engagement is off.—[New York Tribune.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

"Madam, here is an article—
Difference scarce a particle
'Twixt this tooth wash and famed SOZO-
"DONT care for it, thanks, sir,
None with that one ranks, sir,
Fact—and everybody knows so."

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation;
Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation;
Gives healthy sleep; also aids digestion,
Without narcotic stupefaction.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions, should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

Auction! Auction!

We were big buyers in the recent auction sale of Rugs by Alexander Smith Sons & Co., the great carpet manufacturers.

Beginning Saturday, July 1, we will for the next ten days sell Rugs at prices which are actually less than the regular agent's prices. Like this:

300 Moquette Rugs, 98c each, regular price $1.25.

100 Moquette Rugs, $2.49 each, regular price $3.

100 Moquette Rugs, $3.98 each, regular price $5.

In addition to the Rug sale we offer all our best Ingrain Carpets at 58c a yard.

All our Cotton-and-wool Ingrain Carpets at 29c a yard, worth 45c and 50c.

Hosiery.

We have just received two cases of the Men's "World's Fair" Half-Hose. Well made—seamless—all sizes—put up six pairs in a box—50c a box—well worth 12½c a pair.

See small east window.

Summer Underwear.

One case Ladies' Ribbed Vests—low neck and sleeveless—14c each, 3 for 40c.

Parasols in White.

An exposition in White Parasols. Today we will make a specialty of White Coaching Parasols in Satin Stripe, Surah and India Silk. Some plain, some ruffled and some trimmed with lace.

Prices—$1.39, $2.39, $2.90, $3.49, $4.39, Have been $1.50 to $5.

A Traveler's Outfit.

For ladies who anticipate a journey this summer a Storm Serge Suit, Shirt Waist and Cravenette garment makes a desirable outfit.

Nearly everybody has seen the Suits and Waists. All have not seen the Cravenettes.

It is a long garment absolutely shower-proof and serves the two-fold purpose of Waterproof and Traveling Garment.

On sale in Cloak Room.

Men's Furnishings.

Three Shirt Items:

A Man's Unlaundered Shirt with Colored Bosom for 49c each. It is convenient because white collars and cuffs can be worn with it. It is cheap because we know that the same shirt laundered is being sold for $1.00.

Men's Silk Stripe Outing Shirts—fine cloth—well made, 69c, well worth $1.

Bighme Shirts—Men's White Unlaundered Shirts—made by G. D. Bighme—59c each, regular price 75c.

All three styles can be seen in our large display window.

DUGGAN'S PHARMACY,

You toilers in works of necessity and mercy, who to the number of four thousand use the Electric cars on Sunday, (see Evening Record of May 15,) which, by the way, are cheerfully run every fifteen minutes in order to aid you in your good work. To you my sympathy goes out, for there is in our city one in authority who imposes needless hardship on you. Heretofore I have made your labors comparatively easy by keeping your skins cool and tongues moist through the sultry summer Sundays. But, now, our City Attorney can by no manner of means allow me to refresh you with my innocuous and delicious beverage "On Sundays between Sunrise and Sunset."

So I sit on my little stool of repentance now Sundays and wonder why in the world I was allowed to be so wicked all these [illegible] years and also why the people of every race and walk of life in town helped me break this law, for you know I could not break it alone.

The Bulletin.

THE DEATH OF HAMLET.

He sleeps at last, and all the grief
That shook his soul in manhood's prime
Is wafted like some faded leaf
Across the horizon of time.
How shall we fitly say farewell
To him whose voice in other days
Thrilled human hearts as by a spell
And won the tongues of their praise?

Like some tragedian blast that shakes
The fairest blossom from the tree
Is this grim mystery that takes
Life's perfume and life's flow'r from thee.
And can those lips indeed be dumb
From which such golden words did fall,
And is that princely figure numb
That yields the purple to the pall?

Alas, 'tis so! The prince is dead
Who showed us Denmark's woes anew;
[illegible] rest around his bed
And [illegible] the gentle heart and true.
The lights are out, the play is o'er,
His voice is hushed, in very truth,
His presence ne'er shall thrill us more,
And Hamlet dies in Edwin Booth!
—John E. Barrett in Scranton Truth.

THE STOCK MARKET.

[illegible] in Leading Securities in Boston and New York.

BOSTON, July 1.—In the outside market call money is quoted at [illegible] per cent and time money is nominally [illegible] per cent.

The market this morning was started upon its upward course by the reported cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon. After the board it was reported that congress had been called a month earlier—Aug. 7. The effect was to open the market with an advance of [illegible] to [illegible] per cent.

The best prices were made at the opening, or on the first half hour; the balance of the market was very dull, hardly a quotation being made. [illegible] stock, [illegible] from the [illegible] stock [illegible] be taken for long [illegible]. [illegible] commission [illegible]. Few are the new accounts opened. The movement of [illegible] that started yesterday was sustained today without any great activity, and Chicago [illegible] at 71, opened [illegible] and later was offered at [illegible]. New York and New England preferred closed [illegible] opened at [illegible]. Sugar preferred opened at [illegible], ran up to [illegible] with reaction to [illegible] and sold at [illegible]. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy was also active, opening up to [illegible] and selling at [illegible]. [illegible] up to [illegible], and sold up high as [illegible]. General Electric, which closed at [illegible], opened at [illegible], then fell to [illegible] but recovered. [illegible] and Montana opened up to [illegible], then [illegible] and Continental was also very strong, selling at [illegible].

Money rates are somewhat easier than yesterday, but still the situation is a strained one. The bond brokers report a [illegible] and less pressure to sell.

The Busy Baby.

He was an extremely [illegible] baby and believed in enjoying life as it came. Consequently when his parents, who have a small concession at the World's fair, went forth on errands of business he set about to amuse himself as opportunities offered. One of the appurtenances of his parents' concession is a bright, new, cash register which records the sales of the day, so that at evening they who attend to the fair's finances may come and figure totals and deduct their 25 per cent.

In his travels through the shop late in the afternoon the baby discovered the cash register standing resplendent on its throne over the counter. It was a toy that invited playing with, and the baby ascended to investigate. Then he put a fat fist upon one of the keys and pushed. The results surpassed expectations; there was a click, a ring and a little ticket marked "5" bobbed [illegible] over the keyboard. The experiment was repeated with results the [illegible]. Then the baby moved [illegible] and pushed a key marked "[illegible]," following it up with the key marked "$1" and that marked "3". Then he [illegible] energetic and punched [illegible] end to end and back again as fast as he could touch them. A deep and sunny contentment broke forth upon his face as he reached out to play a [illegible] of scales and trills, with tremolos on the "[illegible]" and little embellishments among five and [illegible].

He was enjoying [illegible] thoroughly and just working up to a fine climax in which the high [illegible] when his father entered in company with a World's fair official. Luckily for all concerned, the [illegible] took in the situation and the baby's [illegible] will not cost his father a week's gross. But he received instruction, nevertheless, which will cause him in the future to let cash registers severely alone.—[Chicago [illegible].

PRESIDENT'S CALL.

Heartily Indorsed by New York Financiers.

[illegible]

[illegible]

NEW YORK, July 2.—The following interviews with prominent Wall street men on the president's proclamation show the feeling in that financial center upon the act of the executive and the grave situation:

Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank, said: "I suppose the president would not have called an extra session unless he had been absolutely sure his financial policy would [illegible]. I look for a repeal of the Sherman silver bill."

At the Fourth National bank, Cashier J. W. Cannon said: "I hope the Sherman law will be repealed. We all hope that."

Henry Chapin, cashier of the Third National bank: "We certainly hope and expect that the Sherman law will be repealed."

John Clews of Henry Clews & Co. said: "Mr. Cleveland has done what [illegible] has been appealing to him to do. He has at last determined to put the responsibility where it belongs."

Mr. Duvall, one of the officers of the National Bank of America, said: "The sooner this Sherman act is repealed the more we will be pleased."

George G. Williams of the Chemical bank said: "It is the best thing that could have happened."

"The President [illegible] for the action. The effect of it will without question be to restore confidence among business men the country over."

"How will President Cleveland's decision affect the action of the clearing house banks?"

"The further issuance of clearing-house certificates will depend upon circumstances. The president's decision could not, of course, directly affect this matter, but the general tendency will be restored confidence."

Ebenezer K. Wright, president of the National Park bank, says: "The country has long demanded such a measure, and it seems to us action should have been taken sooner, but perhaps the people were not prepared for it. I have no doubt the Sherman law will soon be [illegible] [illegible] evil effects of the Sherman act have been so far-reaching and have so impoverished the land, I am not certain that financial resumption will follow at once.

is the first and [illegible] step to bring about that condition."

James T. Woodward, president of the National Hanover bank, said: "I think the silver purchase law will be repealed beyond question. The [illegible] throughout the [illegible]."

"What do you think will be the attitude of the south? Will it also favor such a repeal?"

"Oh, yes. I think southerners have [illegible] misapprehension and did not see the financial problem in its true light heretofore. But with cotton and sugar at such ridiculously low figures, they must realize that something is wrong, and, in my opinion, will not support silver legislation, which will make an inferior dollar worth an honest one. We in New York are [illegible] the only ones who have suffered."

CONGRESSIONAL TALK.

Opinions of Leading Men Upon President's Action.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Representative McMillin of Tennessee, speaking of the president's proclamation, said that the president had taken the surest and promptest way out of the difficulty, [illegible] [illegible] early [illegible] confidence throughout the country, and settle the present tariff elements. Congress, would, he thought, [illegible] [illegible] frame a new law that would meet the approval of the president and the people.

Representative R. G. Davey of Louisiana commended the action of the president, and thought he spoke for his own state and the Louisiana delegation, which will vote for the repeal of the Sherman law. "It is a law that has brought the country into a perilous position," said Mr. Davey, "and its repeal will be a good [illegible] of bad rubbish."

Senator Gray of Delaware thought the lesson of bad finance had not been thoroughly learned by the country, and the special meeting of congress would tend more to breed confidence in the silver men than anything else. The time between March 1 and the first Monday in December was none too long to enable the people to have the knowledge burn in them that the country since the passage of the Sherman law had suffered from criminally faulty legislation of a financial character. He thought that if congress had met in regular session the members would have a clearer understanding of [illegible] and might do better work, so far as statutory regulation of the country's currency is concerned.

Representative O'Ferrall of Virginia said that any public action of President Cleveland should be indorsed. He commends the stand he has taken and thinks the Sherman law will be repealed.

Representative McGann of Illinois was for the repeal of the Sherman act, and with that out of the way the passage of a sensible and broad [illegible] statute. He would oppose free coinage because it would inevitably react upon the producing classes of the country.

Representative Baker of New Hampshire said: "I am very glad that the president has called an extra session of congress. I think the fact of one having been called will have a beneficial effect upon the country and help in a measure, at least, to restore confidence in financial circles. It is early now to predict what congress will do, but I am confident that the [illegible] will repeal the Sherman [illegible] and that the Republican members in that branch will vote practically solid for its repeal."

PUEBLO FEELS EFFECTS.

Merchants Cancel Orders For Fall Goods of Eastern Houses.

PUEBLO, Colo., July 2.—The depression in the price of silver is already beginning to make its effects felt in Pueblo. All the smelters of the city have advised their ore buyers in the various mining camps of this and adjoining mining states to make no more contracts for ore.

Friday, between 12 and 20 principal mercantile houses sent orders to the eastern trade cancelling orders for fall goods. They state that the reduced price for silver will close the mines and smelters, throwing many thousand men out of employment, crippling the railroads and dependent industries and mining trade.

OPERATIONS SUSPENDED.

Striking a Serious Blow to Mining Interests of Territory.

SILVER CITY, N. M., July 2.—The sudden drop in the price has caused the suspension of operations in practically all the silver mines in New Mexico. The mines at Georgetown, Lone Mountain and Hanover were closed down yesterday. Less than half a dozen mines which produce silver alone can be operated in the territory with silver at its present price.

No more than one-half of the silver mines in the territory have been in operation this year, but the closing down of the remaining ones will be a serious blow to the mining interests of the territory.

Business Is Paralyzed.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Herald's Lima (Peru) special says: The fall in the price of silver has produced a financial and commercial crisis in Peru. Business is paralyzed. The rate of interest is 21 pence.

LONE HIGHWAYMAN

Was Only a Boy of 18 Acting Under "Bullet Orders."

WICHITA, Kan., July 2.—The lone highwayman who attempted to rob the Santa Fe passenger train at Wharton, Thursday, and was captured by Conductor Gleason and put in jail here, is a boy only 18 years old.

He told the sheriff that he met a gang of four men at Ten Mile Flats, in the Chickasaw nation, one day and they told him of a scheme to rob the Santa Fe train, and said that he must help them, under penalty of death. They told him he must go on the Santa Fe train on June 30, and when it approached Black Bear creek he must cover the conductor and stop the train, and that they would do the rest.

All this work was imposed upon him under "bullet orders," as he calls it, and he was afraid to disobey. He said he made a mistake of one day in carrying out his orders. He thought Thursday was the 30th, and carried out his part of the program. He said the leader of the gang under whose orders he was working was Bill Dalton. Two of the others were Bill Anderson and Arthur Gage, while the fourth [illegible] a resident of Fort Gibson, whose name he did not know.

RHODE ISLAND MUDDLE.

[illegible] Political Fight [illegible] Before Supreme Court.

PROVIDENCE, July 2.—The Democratic house of representatives met the Republican senate in the supreme court Saturday, and laid before the full bench their [illegible] claims and demands, the Democrats contending that the Republicans illegally induced Governor Brown to prorogue the legislature, and the Republicans [illegible] that the Democrats, by unseating [illegible] members of the house, violated the constitution; hence they were warranted in taking the step which they did in securing the prorogation.

This was the last pitched battle between the contending forces, and the result will not be made known until Aug. 12, if the attorneys and the judges insist upon their vacations being interrupted.

Arthur L. Brown appeared for the Democrats and Benjamin Bosworth for the Republicans. Both came fully equipped for a contest which is to be written into the history of Rhode Island.

DISHONEST OFFICIALS.

President and Cashiers of Texas Banks Under Arrest.

DALLAS, Tex., July 2.—John R. Williams, president and W. S. Jones, cashier of the City national bank of Rockwall, were arrested on the charge of embezzling funds of the bank and making false entries.

S. J. Walling, Jr., cashier of the City national bank of Brownwood, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $73,000 of the funds of his bank. Other arrests will follow.

Victims of Political Riot.

PUEBLO, Mex., July 2.—Advices have reached here that the town of San Nicolas, this state, was assaulted last Tuesday by a body of well-armed men. In the fierce fight that ensued the mayor and a justice of the peace were killed. Besides these two officials, a number of men on each side lost their lives. It is supposed here that the assault was in the nature of a local political riot. An investigation is being made.

Chelsea Man Missing.

BOSTON, July 2.—Sabine A. Parker, who has resided in Chelsea for the past 15 years and was employed by T. H. Buck & Co. as a wood turner, disappeared from his home a week ago and has not since been seen. He leaves behind him a wife, one daughter of 13 and a son of 12, in destitute circumstances. Parker is about 50 years of age.

Cannot Sign Wage Scale.

MILWAUKEE, July 2.—The Bay View mills of the Illinois Steel company in this city closed down Friday night shortly after 12 o'clock. The company has decided that it cannot sign the wage scale submitted by the Amalgamated association, and the mills will be closed for some time. About 2000 men are thrown out of employment.

Russians Ordered Home.

CHICAGO, July 2.—The Inter-Ocean says that the czar of Russia has ordered home all of his soldiers now at the World's fair. No specific cause is given in the order. It simply says that all Russian soldiers are needed at home. The contingent here, which numbers over 50 men, will start for Russia the early part of the week.

Universalists Summer Meeting.

LACONIA, N. H., July 2.—The 1st Universalist national summer meeting will begin at the Weirs on August 7, and continue one week. The meetings will be conducted by Rev. G. H. Shinn of Gainsbury, [illegible] will be assisted by clergymen of national prominence.

Persecuted Armenians.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 2.—The Armenian residents of Marsovan have sent to the British, German and American legations here a request that they intervene with the sultan to protect them from Turkish persecution.

Treasurer Missing.

NEW YORK, July 2.—John Weiss, grand treasurer of the Order Germania, one of the largest German benevolent organizations in this state, is missing, and his accounts are said to be [illegible] short.

FIGHTING GALORE.

With Results Generally Favorable to the Revolutionists.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Herald's correspondent in Rivera reports that General Saravia has gained an important victory for the cause of the revolutionists in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil.

A large body of Castilhistas, under the command of General Nepo, was entrenched in Uruguayana. General Saraiva marched against them and the battle was fought near Uruguayana.

The fighting lasted several hours, during which many were killed, the Castilhistas being forced to retire.

There has been a great deal of fighting during the last few days at various places in the southern part of Rio Grande do Sul and the engagements have generally resulted favorably for the insurgents.

S. Edwin Tobey Removed.

BOSTON, July 2.—S. Edwin Tobey, the architect, whose name is in the plans of the Medfield insane asylum buildings, has [illegible] [illegible] has been reinstated. The cause for the action of the commissioners is not given.

LOCKOUT FEARED.

Boston Garment Workers Preparing for Trouble.

EXPECT TO FIGHT FOR EXISTENCE.

Manufacturers Said to Have Combined to Destroy Labor Organizations.

BOSTON, July 2.—Storm clouds are lowering over the clothing industry of this city, and the members of the united garment workers are preparing for war. General Secretary Reichers is here, having come on from New York at the solicitation of the leaders of the local unions, and is in consultation day and night with the members of the local executive board on the best methods to adopt to meet the impending trouble.

The threatened trouble, so the garment workers say, is a big lockout of all the clothing operatives in the city, numbering some 7000.

According to the statements of the garment workers, the clothing manufacturers of the city have effected a combine beside which the famous combine of New York is insignificant.

For some time the clothing manufacturers of Boston, so it is alleged, have the increased power and resources of the garment workers' organization, and only waited a fitting opportunity and reasonable excuse to make a sudden move which should stamp it out of existence.

To this end, so it is alleged, they have bound themselves each by a $5000 bond to stand by each other in the trouble which is expected.

In the big New York combine of clothing manufacturers which virtually comprises the representative houses of that city, over $20,000,000 worth of capital, according to their sworn statements in the court was represented, and yet they only required a bond of $2500 to keep their organization together.

After the big fight of four weeks' duration they were unsuccessful, and a complete victory was won by the garment workers. This increased bond the garment workers consider an evidence of a greater determination on the part of the Boston manufacturers to make a hard battle. What the outcome will be is as yet an open question.

The manufacturers who are said to be in the present combine affect to discredit the entire story or refuse to talk about it.

The sudden arrival of Mr. Reichers from New York and the evident knowledge possessed by the garment workers of their plans and movements has somewhat and many of the other clothing manufacturers who are not in the combine are expressing the opinion that the scheme of a general lockout has been frustrated.

The officials of the garment workers, however, believe in preparing for war, and to that end are mobilizing all their resources, financial and otherwise, to be in readiness for the attack when it does come.

One of the largest clothing houses in the city has had trouble with the garment workers' organization and a boycott has been placed on all their products.

Five men have been placed upon the road by the union to notify the customers of the firm in every section of the United States of the existing trouble and to request them to give their orders to houses employing union men under fair and healthy conditions.

It remains to be seen what the manufacturers' association, of which the firm is a member, will do under the circumstances. Either the manufacturers' association will take up the fight for this firm or the association will allow the firm to fight it out on their own hook. In the latter case the garment workers have no fears of the result.

DESTRUCTION IN ITS PATH.

Cyclone Sweeps Across the Eastern Part of Arkansas.

MEMPHIS, July 2.—A cyclone swept across the eastern portion of Arkansas Friday night, leaving destruction in its path. All telegraph wires west of Memphis are down and details are meagre, but it is known that the loss to property is enormous.

A bulletin was received by the signal service observer at Memphis from Little Rock by way of Galveston and New Orleans, saying that the wind was blowing at the rate of 70 miles an hour and that a large amount of property had been destroyed. No further particulars could be obtained.

STORMY PASSAGE.

The Chicago Reaches the Other Side Safe and Sound.

QUEENSTOWN, July 2.—U. S. S. Chicago from New York, June 16, has arrived here. The vessel had an extremely stormy passage. On June 21, she experienced a severe northwest gale, the vessel rolling at an angle of 45 degrees.

When the storm broke the ship's hatches were battened and the speed of the vessel was reduced to 10 knots per hour. No damage was sustained by the warship. All on board are well.

Watch Hill Point and Watch Hill-pond have been known by these names for over 210 years, according to entries made in the old Stonington town record books.

During Officer Tabor's absence from duty, Officer Norris will patrol his beat, Policeman Young will do duty in lower Greeneville and the supernumerary will guard Laurel Hill.

Governor Morris Saturday appointed ex-Lieutenant Governor E. H. Hyde of Stafford as a delegate from Connecticut to the World's agricultural congress at Chicago, October 16, 1893.

Captain S. J. Geer is again in command of the steamer Block Island this season, and J. H. Rafferty is acting as purser. R. L. Powers has accepted the position of steward for the summer.

The steamer Block Island will reduce the rate to Block Island and return July 4, which will make a cheap and pleasant sail. The boat will leave at 5.15 sharp and make all regular landings.

The Rev. F. R. Cuno, pastor of the German Lutheran church, conducted German evangelical services in New London Sunday evening. He is endeavoring to organize a German church in that city.

The New London Steamboat company has issued a list of seaside resorts, mentioning the hotels of New London, Groton, Mystic Island, Watch Hill and Block Island, the management of each, and the rate of board.

A small fire broke out in the house of [illegible], No. 436 Boswell avenue, Saturday afternoon. An alarm was sounded, but the family extinguished the flames themselves, and a recall followed swift on the heels of the alarm.

Mr. H. F. Burdick, who has been the mail carrier between Westerly and Voluntown for the past four years, has now contracted to perform service between North Stonington and Voluntown, and will enter upon his new duties today.

Eleven local wheelmen made a journey to Niantic and return Sunday. It is expected that the Rose of New England Wheel club will be represented by thirty uniformed members in the Willimantic parade tomorrow.

George E. Parsons, Esq., the new clerk of the city court, studied law with Thayer & Thayer, has been a practicing member of the New London County bar for several years, is a straight-out republican and deserves the position to which he is appointed. Mr. Parsons had the endorsement of the mayor and all the members of the city government for the position, and he, by his manhood and training, honors the office as much as the office honors him.

Mr. David D. Wells, son of Hon. David A. Wells, who was a member of the class that graduated at Harvard last week, was also among those of his class who received honorable mention for high scholarship—the only way Harvard distributes her honors among her annual graduates.

The steamer Block Island, on her first trip Saturday, carried to the sea-girt isle of the same name about three hundred passengers, many of whom stopped over Sunday. There was a party of one hundred from Springfield, Mass.

A stranger who had imbibed too deeply of Norwich "Oh, be joyful," fell asleep on the stringers of the Central Wharf railroad bridge Saturday night. At about midnight he tumbled off into the waters of the cove, and succeeded in reaching shore with great difficulty. Officer Norris locked him up.

The local croquet club will begin the erection of the National association one-story club house in about a fortnight. Mr. George A. Johnson of Philadelphia is expected to arrive this week to grade the grounds.

Dr. A. W. Nelson, the New London surgeon, has invented a rubber policeman's club with a metallic core. With this club, it is said, there is no danger to a man's bones being broken. He will introduce the club in New York police circles.

The Fourth of July celebration at the Stafford springs fair grounds will attract a large crowd. A grand merchants' parade, balloon ascension and parachute drop by man and dog, imperial Japanese troupe in their great acrobatic feats, bicycle races, athletic sports and horse races, are some of the special features promised.

Lineman Johnson of the Western Union Telegraph company erected a remarkably tall pole on the track near [illegible] yard Saturday afternoon. A rope attached to the pole was fastened to a locomotive, which steamed down the track and hoisted the pole into place. A good-sized crowd witnessed the feat.

Miss Mary Ann Roath, a well known dressmaker, died Saturday at her home on North Main street, in which she was born and had spent her years. She was sick but a few days with pneumonia, and death's presence was hastened by an old ailment of diabetes. Absolute personal integrity had been the watchword of her career, and many friends are left to testify to her generous nature and many estimable qualities.

Additional Mail.

A mail for Block Island will close at 8 a. m. and open at 6.30 p. m. on and after today dispatched by the steamer Block Island.

Dr. Kerr's Illustrated Lecture.

Dr. Kerr's fourth illustrated lecture upon the life of Christ, given in the Central Baptist church Sunday evening, traced the life of the Saviour from the transfiguration to the time immediately before the crucifixion. Notable among the illustrations were those of the passover, the institution of the Lord's supper, and of the judgment hall of Pilate. The portrait of Christ, first shown at the lecture two weeks ago, was by request presented for the second time. The three truths, that Christ is first the water, secondly the bread, and lastly, the light of life, were typified by portraiture, preceding the views illustrative of the scenes forming the theme of the lecture.

Next Sunday evening the last lecture of the series will be given; subject, "The Crucifixion.

BASE BALL.

The Moosups Defeat the Clippers on the Greeneville Grounds.

About two hundred people saw the Clipper-Moosup ball game at the Greeneville grounds Saturday afternoon. The Moosups came here to win and brought a strong team with them, including two Jewett City players. The Clippers were equally confident of winning, and would have done so had they played their usual game. They had an off day, and, in addition to this, they felt the absence of their regular pitcher, Driscoll. The Moosups played the better game and won. New London papers should take note of the last [illegible]. It is a way Norwich men have of acknowledging defeat. A feature of the game was the satisfactory work of both umpires. Score:

Lester Wins the Windsor Locks Medal.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 2.—The seventh of the one-mile bicycle races given by the Windsor Locks Wheel club was run at Windsor Locks, Friday night. There were four entries—H. R. Collin, Jr., Ned Montgomery, Clarence Lester and Clinton Pomeroy. The two last named were given 150 yards handicap. Lester won the race by only a few inches over Pomeroy. As Lester has now won the gold medal three times, it is his for good. The medal was offered by Postmaster Converse, and is valued at $10.

THE Y. M. C. A.'S INNOVATION.

Successful Sunday Open Air Meeting on the Steamboat Wharf.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting on the steamboat wharf on Sunday afternoon was a thorough success. It was the first of a series to be held every Sunday under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association. The association is to be commended for this practical method of suiting their work to the conditions and tastes of the men whom they seek to influence for good. Between two and three hundred men gathered on the dock from all parts of the city and enjoyed a live open-air meeting under the most favorable circumstances on a warm day with the benefit of shade, seating accommodations and breezes off the water.

The meeting was presided over by General Secretary Ross of the association, who spoke pleasantly for a few minutes of the plan outlined for the season and extended a hearty welcome to all men, both young and old, to avail themselves of these special gatherings. Much will be done to make the meetings highly interesting and attractive from week to week. The first part of the meeting was occupied by a song service in which the audience joined heartily. Mr. James L. Case conducted the music. Mr. Harry Trafton played the organ, and cornets were played by Messrs. Robert W. Otis, Fred. Cranston and C. W. Hunt.

After prayer by Mr. Wm. T. Lane, the chairman of the committee of arrangements, Mr. Ross introduced the Rev. Dr. Kerr, who delivered a special address to men full of suggestive points and lessons for everyday life. The men listened very closely to all that was said, and the truths presented cannot fail in producing good results in the lives of the hearers.

The entire meeting created a feeling of great satisfaction, and there is promise that the series of services will be exceedingly popular during the hot summer months.

STUDENTS AND POLICE FIGHT.

Republican Guards Called Out—The Students Retreat.

CAUSE OF THE RIOTS.

Further Disorderly Demonstrations Expected from the Students.

PARIS, July 3.—On Saturday an affray occurred between the police and a number of students in the Latin quarter, and for a time matters were very lively. The affair caused the greatest [illegible] excitement among the students who lodged in that quarter, and they determined to lay the facts in the case before the government and to [illegible] satisfaction for what they deemed the arbitrary and overbearing conduct of the police.

When the chamber of deputies met today students to the number of 1,000 proceeded to the legislative building and sought to gain admission. The officials of the chamber fearing a riotous demonstration, gave orders to close the gates to prevent their ingress. After considerable parleying, during which the students expressed themselves very freely, ten of the number were admitted to the chamber. The spokesmen of the students were accorded a hearing by the chamber. They stated the facts in the case and declared that their only object in coming to the chamber was to urge the deputies to support a motion censuring the government, which was to be offered by M. Millerand. M. Millerand submitted his motion asking the house to censure the government for its connection with the affray.

PARIS, July 3.—At 9.30 o'clock this evening 1,000 students surrounded the prefecture of police, jeered the officials and [illegible] through the windows. While the police were preparing to charge the mob upset all the booths in the neighborhood and smashed the street lamps. The police were resisted stubbornly. The students fought back with clubs and stones. In the first onset several students were wounded and two policemen were stretched unconscious.

After the third charge had been repulsed, the students marched, singing and shouting, to the Place St. Michael. The police rallied and a call for cavalry was sent out from the prefecture. At 10.15 the students were on the Boulevard St. Michael.

The immediate cause of the riots today was the death of M. Nuger, a clerk who was injured mortally by the police in their encounter with the students on Saturday. A disorderly demonstration will be made probably by the students at Nuger's funeral.

The republican guards were called out at midnight. The students retreated down the Boulevard St. Michael as the guards approached and dispersed shortly before 1 o'clock. The guards remained at the bridge to prevent the return of any rioters to the palace de justice or the prefecture of police. M. Lozé denied last evening that he had resigned.

Intense excitement prevailed in the Latin quarter until 2.15 this morning. Students and police fought repeatedly. Many police and students were injured seriously. The students set fire to the street kiosks.

SUNDAY OPENING A FIZZLE.

Its Opponents Eager to Renew the Battle.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The World's fair national commission met today the opponents of the Sunday opening committee who were eager to renew the battle. Commissioner Hundley of Alabama, presented a resolution declaring that the committee had been placed on record only opposed to the opening of the gates on Sunday.

Commissioner Tousley of Minnesota, in support of the resolution, said: Sunday opening is a downright fizzle, so far. Now the directors want a 25 cent admission. This thing will result in a conference and the addition of another rule for Sunday closing. Why don't you act like men? If the committee could have enforced the Sunday closing rule in a lucid interval the fair would have had an average daily attendance of 200,000. You will find that Sunday opening will be a failure. The poor man will not pay 25 cents for a four-fifths show or a one-fifth show.

A Manitoba Bank Insolvent.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 3.—The Commercial bank of Manitoba has been declared insolvent and liquidators have been appointed. The bank's bills are as good as gold under the Dominion law.

INSURANCE HAD SUICIDED.

Could Not Endure the Violent Temper of His Wife.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Sunday afternoon, F. G. Grubb of Bridgeport was found dead in a passenger car in the car sheds of the Danbury division of the Consolidated road at Danbury. By his side was a package of Paris green, part of the contents of which had been used. Near by was a note addressed as follows:

"Dear daughters, Annie and Ada:—My last thoughts were of you. Had your mother's wicked temper been kept more under control things might have been very different. Good-bye and God bless you all."

He had been acting queerly recently, had been drinking and his business did not pay. He was a native of England, about 60 years of age, and came to this country about eight years ago. He had been employed by the Metropolitan Insurance company as superintendent at Norwalk.

Mrs. Mary S. Grubb, his wife, said last evening: "It is true I reproached my husband at times, but only when he had been drinking. He drank brandy and whiskey and it made him crazy. I think it was a cowardly thing for him to do this and leave his two children, who are 14 and 10 years of age. My husband had an insurance of $100 on his life. It made him angry when I asked him to increase it. He did not believe in insurance and he would not join any secret societies."

WAGES REDUCED.

Because Workmen Were Paid More Than at Other Shops.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., July 3.—Beginning with the first of July a reduction of wages went into effect at the factory of Berlin Bridge company at East Berlin. Men who were earning $2.50 a day were cut to $2; those who were earning $1.75 were cut to $1.60, and those who were earning $1.50 were cut to $1.40. A great deal of dissatisfaction exists among the men at the shop. It was only recently that the contract system went into effect and it has engendered ill feeling. The explanation of the cut down is that the company has been paying higher wages than other shops in the same business.

WILL NOT RING TODAY.

Liberty Bell Imperfectly Cast and Will Have to be Recast.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The new Columbia liberty bell, recently cast at Troy, N. Y., will not be rung at the World's fair tomorrow, nor will it be rung until it has been melted and recast.

When the bell was removed from the mold a serious flaw was discovered.

It was imperfectly cast.

A Denial.

TROY, N. Y., July 3.—The Columbian Liberty bell will be rung for the first time at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in this city, the ringing to be controlled by electrical communication with Chicago. The statement from Chicago that the bell will be remelted and recast because of a flaw is denied. The casting was a perfect one, and the bell is one of the finest ever made.

To Investigate the Condition of American Meats in Europe.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Morton has addressed a letter to Special Agent Mattes, who will shortly leave the United States for Germany and other European countries, requesting him, in addition to investigating the possibility of extending the consumption in Germany of maize and maize products, to further investigate the condition of American meats, the benefits, if any, derived from our system of government inspection and the prospects of an extension of our trade in these products. Further, he is to ascertain the character of the laws regulating the trade in tobacco, with a view to determining whether such regulations are better than [illegible] in America.

Report Denied.

BOSTON, July 3.—With regard to the statement published this morning from Cheyenne, Wyo., that the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York had been defrauded of $44,078 in a land swindle in Wyoming, Mr. Chas. A. Hopkins, the general agent of the company at Boston, received the following dispatch today from Second Vice President Lloyd of the company:

The report you call attention to does not apply to this company. The Mutual Life has never purchased nor owned real estate in Wyoming.

New York's Holiday.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Fourth of July holiday evidently was begun by many business men Saturday, and no business was transacted down town today except that which could not be avoided. Those brokers who were not short of stocks and who had renewed their loans on Friday over until Wednesday, evidently remained away today, content to let the silver question and other matters of that character in which they were interested take care of themselves.

Royal Northern Yacht Club.

LONDON, July 3.—The regatta of the Royal Northern Yacht club took place today. The course was off Rothesay, Scotland. The wind was light and the regatta proved little better than a drifting match. At the end of the first round the commodore of the club stopped the race and awarded the first prize to the Calluna, the Scotch cutter. The Valkyrie, the challenger for the America's cup, was given the second prize and the Satanita third prize. The Britannia was fourth.

Banker Drexel's Remains.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 3.—Drexel & Co. were today notified that J. H. Harjes, Sr., of Drexel, Harjes & Co. of Paris, and his son, will leave Carlsbad on Wednesday with the body of Anthony J. Drexel. The remains will be shipped to New York from Bremen on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II., next Saturday.

Picture of the Borden Jury for Lizzie.

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 3.—The Borden sisters have received a large photograph of the jury before whom Miss Lizzie was tried and acquitted, and it has been placed in their parlor. It is understood the foreman of the jury presented the picture, in compliance with a request by the other members.

Russian Warship Lost.

LONDON, July 3.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states that news has arrived there that the Russian cruiser Vladivostok, belonging to the Siberian fleet, has been wrecked on the rocks near Port Lazaref, on the east coast of Corea. The fate of the crew [illegible].

Georgie Drew Barrymore Dead.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 3.—Mrs. Georgie Drew Barrymore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Drew, wife of Maurice Barrymore, and herself an actress of [illegible] and ability, died here suddenly yesterday morning. Consumption was the cause of her death.

SENATOR SHERMAN TALKS.

Says He Is With the President for a Sound Currency.

CONGRESS MAY GO TOO FAR.

When Confidence is Restored Gold Will Flow Back from Europe.

CHICAGO, July 3.—"There has never been a time since the law of 1890, known as 'the Sherman act,' was passed, that I would not have voted for the repeal," said Senator Sherman here today. "The Sherman act was a compromise measure and it was passed to save the country from a free coinage bill that had been passed by the senate by an overwhelming majority. The [illegible] passed the Sherman bill and now they blame it for all the financial woes of the nation. I have told President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle that I will stand with them for a sound safe currency.

Mr. Cleveland in opposing silver is fighting three-fourths of his party. Of course I have my own ideas about what should be done, and when the matter comes up in congress I will have my say. I think the Sherman law will be repealed but the danger is that congress may go too far. If the clause providing for the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly be stricken out, it will be well. But if congress should repeal the clause providing that the United States shall maintain the parity between gold and silver coins, it would cause widespread distrust. There is in the treasury 360,000,000 of coined silver dollars and $145,000,000 in uncoined bullion. The legal tender of these coins must be preserved and their parity to gold maintained. It is well enough to stop the further coinage of silver, but the [illegible] must be sustained. To stop making silver dollars would not impair the usefulness of those already made, so long as the government guaranty is back of them.

The present stringency is caused by the apprehension of the [illegible] and financial world that we will not meet our obligations in gold, but will pay in cheap money. I believe we should have a sound, safe currency, on a gold basis. I do not think the [illegible] of silver coinage will bring gold here [illegible]. It will be utilized as the [illegible] and basis on which the [illegible] will rest for security. The action of India with regard to silver is not conclusive. It is in the nature of an experiment. The law that the silver rupee shall be worth sixteen pence is in the nature of fiat money, and has no effect here. Neither do I think the India council acted to aid Great Britain to force the United States to a gold basis. All the great commercial nations have tried silver and have failed at it. The United States is the last of them to realize that silver cannot be made the basis and standard of the world's money. If the coinage of silver dollars were stopped and the metal relegated to the position of subsidiary coinage, as among the nations of the Latin union the world would know that we proposed to pay our debts in the world's money—gold—and confidence would be restored.

"The exportation of gold to Europe has [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] against us. When confidence is restored the gold will come back. If congress acts conservatively and does not go too far in radical legislation, all will be well. I think the national bank system will lapse when our national indebtedness shall have been paid off."

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.

Dr. Masters of San Francisco Claims the Honor for a Chinaman.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., July 3.—The Rev. Dr. F. J. Masters of San Francisco, Cal., superintendent of the Presbyterian Chinese mission work on the Pacific coast, has been in this vicinity the past two weeks, and during his stay delivered a lecture in St. Johnsbury upon the subject, "Did a Chinaman Discover America?"

Dr. Masters claims that about 499, or one thousand years before Columbus discovered America, five Buddhist priests came from China to Mexico, being driven across the Pacific by the Japanese current. One of these priests, Hwui-shan, returned to China and his trip to Mexico, called Fusang in his diary, is recorded in the 200th volume of the imperial archives of the Chinese empire.

The priest describes Fusang very fully, and it applies remarkably closely to the knowledge of Mexico given by Prescott and other historians of the Toltec and Aztec period.

To corroborate this many of the customs of the ancient Peruvians and Mexicans are similar to the customs of the Chinese and Japanese, and there are striking phonetic resemblances in their languages.

Ethnologists on the Pacific coast have also noted marked resemblances between the Chinese and the Indian tribes of British Columbia, and Chinese coins hundreds of years old have recently been unearthed in British Columbia.

Dr. Masters goes to the World's fair as the representative of the California Geographical society. During a nine years' residence in China he made an exhaustive study of the interesting subject, and has many strong arguments to support his theory, which is as novel as it is interesting.

Ed. McCarthy Jumps from Brooklyn Bridge and is Fatally Injured.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Edward McCarthy jumped from the Brooklyn bridge this evening and sustained probably fatal injuries. It is supposed he was anxious to emulate the example of Steve Brodie and share in the bridge-jumper's notoriety. When taken from the river his side was black from foot to shoulder where he struck the water, and he suffered terribly from hemorrhages of the mouth for an hour. This is the fourth case of jumping the bridge and the third in two weeks. McCarthy jumped through a greater space than any of his predecessors.

The Sailors Were Amazed at Tryon's Orders.

LONDON, July 3.—A sailor who was on one of the smaller vessels when the Victoria was sunk, writes in reference to Admiral Tryon's signal: "We all stood amazed at such a signal, knowing very well that there was not room for the ships to turn, but the orders had to be obeyed. Although the vessel was sinking under him, Tryon signalled refusing boats. May I never see such a case of wholesale murder again. The whole fleet could see the poor fellows standing in perfect order, quietly drowning in their ranks."

A CENTURY AND A YEAR.

Death of Mrs. Fagan, Who Was Born in 1792.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Mrs. Mary Fagan, the widow of Lawrence Fagan and the grandmother of Alderman W. H. Fagan, died Sunday morning at the age of 101 years. Mrs. Fagan was probably the oldest resident of this city. She was born in Ireland in May, 1792. She came to this country early in life and had lived in this city sixty years. Her husband, a teamster, was killed in a runaway several years ago.

Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fagan, four of whom are now living in this city. Mrs. Fagan was never sick and died finally of old age.

Attempted Burglary at the Windsor Depot.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—Burglars made an attempt to rob the passenger depot in Windsor at 3 o'clock this morning. The night operator stepped to a part of his office to learn the cause of the noise outside and was confronted by two men with drawn revolvers and was driven back into his office. He rushed to his instrument and telegraphed to Superintendent Davidson's office and the express was stopped. The burglars were not to be found, but later they were seen around the freight house. By that time Mr. Albee, the operator, had called out several citizens, who made a search until daylight came, when further attempts to find the fellows were abandoned.

Prof. Harrington Exonerated.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Morton has exonerated Prof. Harrington from the charges preferred against him, in his administration of the weather bureau, and he retired the officer preferring the charge. Secretary Morton has caused a number of other changes in the personnel of the bureau.

Could Not Realize on Its Paper.

PHILLIPSBURG, Mont., July 3.—The First National bank closed its doors Saturday on account of the stringency in the money market, continued demand of depositors and inability to realize on its paper. There is no doubt of the bank's solvency. The extensive mercantile firm of Freyschlag, Hoffman & Co., was compelled to assign Saturday.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

A Trusted Employe Arrested for Robbing Mail Pouches

STOLEN LETTERS FOUND.

For Two Years the Thief Has Done Successful Work.

CHICAGO, July 3.—For two years the loss of mail upon the Grand Trunk, including the American pouches consigned to Canada and the mail from Montreal and Toronto consigned to all western states, has been a source of great annoyance to Canada and the United States. At last the matter became unbearable to the Canadian government and Postmaster General Blaisdell was asked to assign post office Inspector James E. Stuart to the case. He worked on the case several days and was convinced that the thefts were being done in the mail car in daylight.

Finally he saw Charles Ford, superintendent of repairs for the Grand Trunk at Port Huron, ex-president of the town council and for years one of the most trusted employes of the Grand Trunk, enter the car, remove the valuable letters from the pouches and reseal the pouches. Ford then withdrew, locked the car and walked toward his private office. He had proceeded but two hundred yards when Stuart arrested him. A crowd gathered, but Stuart took his prisoner to a quiet place and discovered on Ford's person 326 letters. The thanks of the Canadian government have been tendered to the inspector.

HE ASKED FOR A SHIP.

Representative of Liberia Called to His Washington Errand.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—An unexpected and unusual demand has been made upon the navy department by a representative of the republic of Liberia.

It was that the United States should present to Liberia a vessel of war.

It appears that in 1883 a law was passed by congress authorizing the secretary of the navy in his discretion to turn over to the republic of Liberia a vessel of the navy, free of all expense to that republic. The law does not specify the class of the vessel or the time or the manner of its presentation.

The representative of Liberia who made the demand pointed out the law and stated that his country was now prepared to receive the vessel.

The only satisfactory solution of the question seems to be that there were at the time of the passage of the act a much [illegible] number of ships in the navy than [illegible] be necessary in time of peace. [illegible] [illegible] that the representative who [illegible] the navy department did not [illegible] any special authority to make an [illegible] demand upon the government.

Corner-Stone of the Masonic Temple [illegible] Grand Master Wheeler at the Head—An [illegible]

The corner-stone of the Masonic Temple was laid with the [illegible] and appropriate ceremonies of the order Monday afternoon, in the presence of a distinguished and representative Masonic assembly. A procession of all the bodies in the city, led by Tubbs' Military band, formed on Water street at 4 o'clock and proceeded to the site of the fine new building on lower Broadway. The following gentlemen acted as officers of the grand lodge: Joseph B. Wheeler, grand master; Charles W. Carter, deputy grand master; [illegible] Gilbert, grand senior warden; Daniel [illegible], grand junior warden; Albert B. Comstock, grand treasurer; John T. Corry, grand secretary; Howard L. Stanton, grand senior deacon; George A. Ellis, grand junior deacon; A. D. Smith, grand marshal; Rev. J. D. Herr, D. D., grand chaplain; H. Douglas Bevin, grand senior steward; Charles Huntington, grand junior steward; Increase W. Carpenter, grand architect; Daniel F. McNeil, grand Tyler.

The exercises, which took place on the temporary first floor of the structure, were opened by President Arthur H. Brewer, of the Masonic Temple corporation. He sketched briefly the formation of the company, "which after mature deliberation and with the principles of masonry deep at heart, had set out to erect a building, which from turret to foundation stone should be dedicated to the purposes of the order."

"We have been singularly fortunate in the location of our lot," said Mr. Brewer, "We are confronted by the law, which no good Mason has cause to fear—supported on one side by the Gospel, the foundation, corner stone and capstone of Free Masonry, and on the other by that powerful engine of modern civilization, the public press. In the near distance is a new building dedicated to the supreme master, and in close proximity are the refining influences of the public [illegible] and library and the dramatic stage. Our regret at the enforced absence of Grand Master Powell is greatly modified by his selection of yourself, Brother Wheeler, as [illegible]. You are allied to Norwich Masons by stronger bands than to any other body outside of Hartford, for you are a member of the body having headquarters in this city, the Connecticut Sovereign Consistory." President Brewer then introduced Mr. Charles E. Dyer, who read a valuable paper on the history of Masonry in Norwich.

For more than a century Free Masonry has been recognized in an organized form in the town of Norwich.

History informs us, and to history alone are we indebted for the materials herein used, that the records of the first lodge of Free and Accepted Masons which was organized and instituted in this goodly township show that it was chartered by St. John's Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in the year 1767, a little more than 126 years ago and eight years anterior to the declaration of the independence of these United States. These records are now, it appears, in the custody of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

The early meetings of Masons in Norwich, we are informed by history, were held at Brannan's tavern (now Companion Dr. Howe's residence) and which was once known as the Tuel house. In 1796 at the house of Dr. Joshua Lathrop at Norwich Town (the house now owned and occupied by Mrs. Gardiner Thurston); then in the chamber of the brick store of Deputy Nathaniel Peabody, which was afterward known as the Mansfield building on Main street and now over the store occupied by John G Standish. The next lodge room was the apartments now occupied by the Knights of Pythias in the upper chambers of Uncas hall building. In the year 1865 (May 19 it was dedicated) the lodge, together with all the other Masonic bodies, leased Uncas hall proper. Since which time all the orders of Masonry, from the Blue Lodge to and including Columbian Commandery, have made it their continuing city and abiding place. In the year 1884 (deed is dated October 26, 1884) the A. A. Scottish Rite Masons purchased a lot on Park street and erected the Academy of the Rite thereon, which they still occupy and possess.

From 1845 to the present time, a period of thirty-eight years, there have been thirty-two masters of the lodge, commencing with Chauncey Burgess and closing with Currie Gilmour.

Saint James lodge, No. 23, was originally chartered May 15, 1795, and the convocations thereof were held in the adjoining town of Preston until the year 1846, when the charter and all implements thereof were lodged with the secretary of the grand lodge. In the year 1873 it was reorganized by dispensation. And on the 18th day of June, 1878, the original charter was regranted, and the lodge meetings were held in Union hall, together with the other bodies, until 1878, when the lodge removed to their new and commodious quarters in the bank building on Shetucket street. Her existence as a revived lodge has been comparatively short, but her character and history are one of honor and credit. In the 21 years of her recent existence there have been 12 masters of the lodge, commencing with Rufus M. Ladd and closing with George E. Parsons.

From 1795 to the present time all of the various orders of Free Masonry located at Norwich, with the exception of that known as the Scottish Rite, have been tenants, and, in a certain sense, homeless. Today, my brethren, of every order, we meet for a purpose, the object of which must lie very near the heart of every true Mason, viz: to commence the erection of a home. It is eminently appropriate that we meet today as members of one family, with the proper working tools of our profession, to lay the corner stone of a building which is to be devoted to our own uses, to be owned conjointly by us all, and to be occupied by all as our Masonic home.

Mr. Dyer's address was given a hearty round of applause. Grand Master Wheeler then took charge of the ceremonies. After thanking President Brewer for his pleasant words, and assuring the assembled Masons of the pleasure it gave him to assist in laying the corner stone of the building, and of the kindly feeling he had always cherished towards Norwich brethren, he called upon Grand Chaplain Herr, who fervently implored divine blessing on the work inaugurated there that day.

After a short congratulatory address by the grand master, Grand Secretary Corry read the following list of contents of memorials:

Grand Treasurer Comstock deposited the box in the cavity of the corner stone, a block of sandstone at the northeast corner of the building. The stone was lowered in position, tested by the implements of the order, the plumb, level and square, and the elements of consecration, corn, wine and oil were spread about. Grand Master Wheeler extended an invocation, public grand honors were performed and the services ended with the benediction by the grand chaplain shortly after 5 o'clock.

Meritorious Pupils.

The following are names of pupils who have not been absent, during the term ending June 30, in the West Town street school.

Senior Room—Sarah Frederica [illegible], Mary Emma Starkweather, [illegible] Callyhan, Frank Clarence Pierce, Charles Arnold Brady. [illegible] Room—Arthur [illegible], [illegible] Stanton, Eddie C. Crooker, Florence Sullivan, Joseph White, Dora May Pierce, Jennie L. Nye.

The variations which time works in family names are well illustrated at the Scotch family gathering at Chicago. Various members of the clan spell their name McLean, MacLean, McLain, McClean and McLane. The chief's name is Maclean.

RECEIVER ASKED.

Northern Investment Company Hopelessly Involved.

LARGEST HOLDERS TAKE ACTION.

Expenses of Company Heavy—Property in Hands of Creditor.

BOSTON, July 3.—A bill was filed in the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts this afternoon to put the Northern Investment company in the hands of a receiver.

The bill alleges that the company is hopelessly involved, and that its present management has paid dividends and even an extra dividend with borrowed money, or by the sale of new stock.

The expenses of the company have been very large, it is stated, and its property is said to be now in the hands of its chief mortgage creditors, the Boston Investment company, whose agent is collecting its rents.

There are between 800 and 1000 stockholders scattered all over New England, many, perhaps half, of whom are women.

The gentlemen petitioning for the bill are among the very largest stockholders and are well known men.

The attention of the commissioner of foreign corporations is to be called to the affairs of the company.

Sioux City, Ia., is where the company has its basis of operations. The par value of the stock is $100, and it was quoted recently at $102.50. The company advertises the paying of 8 1-2 per cent. dividends per annum.

The Officers of the Company Also

Treasurer, Alden A. Howe, formerly cashier of the First National bank of Galeson, also of the Quinsigamond National bank of Worcester; directors, W. A. Faulkner, president of the Traders' National bank of Boston; Charles W. Perkins, cashier of the Massachusetts National bank of Boston; George L. Joy, president of Union Loan and Trust company of Sioux City, Ia.; Frank Baldwin of North Grafton, a retired capitalist; A. L. Stetson, president of the American National bank of Sioux City.

The auditors are Lafayette Burr of Boston, treasurer of the National Dock and Warehouse company; John F. Howell, auditor of the city of Worcester.

The corporation counsel are Hon. Arthur M. Alger, attorney, who has been corporation counsel and mayor of the city of Taunton. W. L. Joy, one of the most prominent lawyers of the state of Iowa, and president of large financial corporations. E. A. Burgess of Sioux City, educated with one of the best law firms of that city, has charge of the deeds, leases and contracts of the company.

The Company's Possessions.

The company has set down among its possessions Gordon block, on Fourth street in Sioux City, a large stone and brick building, three stories high, leased for a term of years; Plymouth block, on Fourth street, which contains 11 large stores, the upper story being rented for a mercantile college.

The Bay State building, a solid granite building four stories high, rented, so it is claimed, on the basis of about 8 per cent. net on the entire cost.

Brown estate, 50 by 150 feet, situated on Nebraska street, covered with one-story structures. School house lot, corner Fifth and Jackson streets. Core place lot, on corner of Pierce and [illegible] streets, [illegible] by 150 feet.

Other possessions set down to the company are as follows: Club house estate on Fifth street, is rented to a club composed of some of the richest men in Sioux City; Stetson block on Pearl street, rented to the Tollerton-Stetson company; Baker & Bissell block at the corner of Pearl and Second streets, occupied by the wholesale hardware firm whose name it bears; Iowa Savings bank building, owned by a corporation, of which the Northern Investment company holds the controlling stock interest.

BOSTON STATISTICS.

Report Showing Births, Marriages and Deaths at the Hub.

BOSTON, July 3.—William H. Whitmore, city registrar, Saturday, submitted to the mayor his first annual report, in which it appears that during 1892 there were recorded 15,184 births, including 104 children of parents actually living out of the city; [illegible] intentions of marriage, [illegible] marriages in the city, 625 marriages of citizens elsewhere married in the state, 78 of citizens married out of the state, 11,221 deaths and 644 stillborn children.

As returns of marriages performed will continue to be made for months the figures given above are probably within [illegible] per cent of the whole.

BOLTING PRESBYTERIANS

Hold Secret Conclave in New York on Dr. Briggs' Suspension.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Recorder says: An important secret conclave of "bolting Presbyterians" was held in this city on June 22, to protest against the action of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church on the suspension of Dr. Briggs. The meeting was large and was composed entirely of supporters and sympathizers with Dr. Briggs, and advocates of his policy and tenets.

All information of the meeting and its purposes was carefully kept from the outside public, both before and since the meeting, until yesterday, when a reporter learned that such a conference had been held. Many clergymen from other cities in this city, and some from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Rhode Island, were present. Dr. Francis Brown and Dr. Thomas S. Hastings, both of the Union theological seminary in this city, were present at the meeting, and took an active interest in the proceedings, as did also Dr. James H. Ecob of Albany.

The attendance at the conclave were enjoined to strict secrecy regarding the meeting and its objects, but the reporter learned that some very vigorous protests were entered against the action of the general assembly, which may result in a complete split in that body, and a secession of no mean proportion from its ranks. It was resolved to take immediate steps to circulate a protest against the general assembly's action on the Briggs matter, the protest to be signed by Presbyterians of the more advanced school all over the country.

The reporter called upon a number of clergymen who are known to have been present at the meeting, but all feigned ignorance of it, or refused absolutely to talk on the subject.

GHASTLY SCENE.

Torpedo Station at Newport Burns—Men Killed and Wounded.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 3.—The hospital at Torpedo station presents a ghastly scene. The floors are sprinkled with blood and cots are bespattered with it. Frank McLaughlin and Jeremiah Harrington [illegible] and Michael [illegible] gan is dying. The others, about [illegible] frightfully mangled by the explosion of the gun cotton, may live.

Among them are Michael Steele, [illegible] Dunphy and [illegible] Coppinger. [illegible] is so badly hurt that he still lies on the stretcher under the hands of the surgeon.

The station was discovered to be on fire at 1:40 o'clock, but before assistance could be given from the city, the buildings were a mass of flames.

Nothing remains of the gun cotton factory but the chimney. The loss on machinery and stores will amount to thousands. The fire is now under control. Four men have died and a large number are wounded.

STUDYING TAXATION.

United States Legations in Europe Seeking Information.

BERLIN, July 3.—It is understood here that the United States legations in Europe have been instructed to study and report on existing systems of taxation, in order that the Washington government may select the least oppressive and offensive so cover the deficit which will result from the reform of the tariff.

The member of the Berlin legation, who is examining the Prussian system, is inclined to favor the adoption in the United States of a tax similar to the direct property tax, recently approved by the Landtag.

The wealthier classes in Prussia, he explains, do not complain bitterly of the new tax, and the poorer people consider it equitable.

The rich men in America, however, he thinks, would resist stubbornly the introduction of the tax.

Germany on Silver.

BERLIN, July 3.—The governor of the reichsbank, in an interview yesterday, discussed the critical condition of the silver market. The countries with large commercial interests, he said might convene a conference with a view to encouraging the subsidiary use of silver and thus preventing a scarcity of gold. They might agree to retain silver as an exchange token similar to notes for the retail home trade, while reserving gold for the wholesale and international trade.

[illegible] Selling Atchison.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The recent selling of Atchison securities is credited to C. P. Huntington. He is said to have parted with at least [illegible] shares of the stock. Mr. Huntington said to a reporter last week, in answer to an inquiry, that he had sold some odds and ends of bonds recently, probably $600,000 in all, but nothing at all like the amount rumored. The street story was that he had sold about $10,000,000 worth of securities.

Regimental Scandals Ended.

SALEM, Mass., July 3.—This being the home of the Eighth regiment, Massachusetts volunteer militia, the withdrawal of Mayor Dinsmoor from the colonelship now, is said here to be the "burying of the hatchet." It leaves Lieutenant Colonel Dodge, Captain Little and Captain [illegible] the only candidates. The line officers say this ends the scandals of the regiment.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

New York state monument was dedicated at Gettysburg.

George B. Case, left fielder of the Yale nine, was chosen as captain.

Samuel W. Mason, the old Boston schoolmaster, passed away at his home in Chelsea, Mass.

Reynolds, one of the prisoners escaped from Machias (Me.) jail, has been retaken. Christie is still at large.

George E. Tree, one of the best known citizens of Manchester, N. H., died of heart trouble, aged 66 years.

The Mutual Life Insurance company of New York was defrauded out of $44,075 by its Cheyenne agent on a deal in land.

Peter F. Henry, aged 48, was killed by falling from the first story of the Forest House, Worcester, Mass., while in a fit.

The Baptist church society of North Adams, Mass., received word from Rev. R. D. Penney of Auburn, N. Y., accepting the call given him.

The alumni of Monmouth academy, Winthrop, Me., proposed to celebrate its 90th anniversary, which occurs this summer, in an appropriate manner.

Norwalk (Conn.) elm trees, which line nearly every important street up town, are infested with worms, and hundreds of these shade trees are in danger of being killed.

Louis N. Lindberg, 6 years of age, while crossing the Providence division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, near Worcester, Mass., was struck by a train and instantly killed.

McSweeney Takes the Oath.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., July 3.—Today's mail brought to Edward F. McSweeney of Marlboro his commission as assistant United States commissioner of immigration, and this forenoon Hon. William N. Davenport of that city administered the oath of office. The new assistant commissioner leaves Marlboro today for Ellis Island, N. Y., where he expects to report for duty Tuesday. The salary of his office is $2500 a year.

Cruelty to a Horse.

LYNN, July 3.—Charles Glidden, a livery man, let a horse to Fred Leighton and Gorham O. Curtis yesterday afternoon. The team arrived home early this morning and the horse was completely covered with cuts. The animal did not have the strength to stand up and fell over in the harness. Leighton and Curtis were arrested for cruelty and their case will be heard in court Wednesday.

One Burglar Caught.

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 3.—A night watchman, in passing the storehouse of Bell's express last evening, heard noises within. He espied an open window and daringly entered alone. Frank Grant, one of the burglars, was arrested, but the other, who was recognized as a dangerous criminal, having served time before, escaped. Grant was escorted to the lockup.

Latin Union Conference.

BRUSSELS, July 3.—The Belgian government is reported to be about to convene a special conference of the Latin union states for the purpose of considering what action they shall take in view of the recent fall of silver. This special conference will precede the reassembling of the international monetary conference.

DISTRESSED SCHOONERS.

Mattie Collins Total Wreck and Edgar Foster Leaking Badly.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 3.—The schooner Mattie Collins of Ragged Island was lost last night on Harbor Odarin. A boat was lowered after the vessel struck, but was dashed to pieces. The crew managed to get on the rock and lashed themselves to it. The waves washed over them. Their position was discovered later and their rescue effected with great difficulty.

The schooner Edgar Foster of Beverly, Mass., is here, leaking badly, having been strained on the Grand banks in a heavy sea. She has been out since April 1, and has 150,000 pounds of fish aboard.

[illegible]

PARIS, July 3.—The American and English delegates to the Behring sea court of arbitration gave a banquet on Saturday in honor of M. Develle, the French foreign minister. Toasts were drunk to the health of President Carnot, Queen Victoria and President Cleveland. John W. Foster of the American delegation thanked M. Develle for the cordial welcome that had been extended to the delegates.

A HOME WEDDING.

Mason—Allyn.

A quiet home wedding took place June 28, at Riverview, at the residence of Mr. Calvin Allyn. The contracting parties were Miss Lois Anna Allyn, eldest daughter of Mr. Allyn and Mr. Dwight Leslie Mason of Winchendon, Mass. Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in a white figured silk gown and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and maiden-hair ferns.

Miss Annie Billings of Ledyard, acted as maid of honor and wore a white silk gown. The ushers were Mr. Zadoc L. White, James R. Allyn, brother of the bride and Orland W. Mason.

After the ceremony a reception was held. Some of the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Zadoc Long White, Miss Mabel Mason and Miss Helen Watson of Winchendon, Mass.; Miss Nellie J. White of Honolulu, Sandwich Islands; Mr. Charles White of Uncasville, Conn.; Mrs. Evan P. Henry of Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. James Allyn of New London, Conn. Besides these there were a large number present from Norwich and the adjoining towns. Miss Lucy Blackman, a teacher in the Free Academy, during the bride's course, was also present.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents.

A large number of regrets were received from various parts of the country.

The bridal couple left on an evening train for a short trip, after which they will receive their friends Thursdays in August at their home in Winchendon, Mass.

The fat women residents of Harper county, Kan., held a picnic the other day.

A kite string 1,600 feet long blew and lodged against the rigging of the Baltimore schooner Souther when it was in the Atlantic, thirty-five miles from land.

Fourth of July.

JULY FOURTH.

Let the bugle and trumpet resound,
Let clamor fill all the vast round
Of a land that is happy and free.
Let the sharp rat-a-tat of the drum
Preach the gospel of freedom to come
To the nations beyond the blue sea.

Ring the bells! Shout the story abroad
Of a cause that was helped by the Lord
And of heroic deeds that were done.
Let the scabbard that hangs on your wall,
With the sword rusted in, tell us all
How a thrice blessed Union was won.

Fling our flag to the vibrating air,
That banner so precious and fair,
And remember ye how it was made.
Its red, dyed in blood of the brave
Who perished their country to save—
Its sanctified hue can ne'er fade.

Its blue fixed the heavens on that day
When the chains of the slave fell away,
And he stood on the broad earth a man,
While the stars of the states crowded in,
Each his place in a nation to win,
Whose boundaries were set by God's hand.

Oh, white may her stripes long remain,
Untarnished by oppression's dark stain,
On history's page shining bright!
Beat drums! Ring out, all ye bells!
While the chorus of Liberty swells
And a nation rejoices in might.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

HOW TOM WAS FOUND.

The Fourth of July comes in midwinter south of the equator, which explains why the passengers on the deck of the big ship Petrel, from San Francisco to Melbourne, drew their wraps closely about them on the evening of the day they would have at home celebrated with firecrackers and feasting.

Among these passengers was the Thurston family, late of New York—father, mother and four children. A girl baby was the youngest of them; then came 7-year-old Tom, and after him a sister and brother almost grown up. Mr. Thurston owned real estate at Melbourne, and he had decided to live there in the future.

Just after the brilliant stars came out Tom saw several muffled up men with big bundles under their arms hurry stealthily to the bow of the vessel. This mystery was almost instantly explained by a hissing roar and the upward rush of a skyrocket's streak of light. Then 20 sturdy sailors' voices started that song dearest to every American patriot's heart, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." By the time they had finished the first grand verse every American on board was at the bow of the ship singing with them. Though home was 12,000 miles behind, it was still the glorious Fourth.

After this first song the captain mounted to the bridge with a rolled paper in his hands. All sounds were hushed. The burly bo'swain held the lantern for his commander, the paper was raised aloft, and every one knew that it was the great charter of freedom.

"I am about to read to you the Declaration of Independence," said the captain in a voice husky with emotion. "There are many of us here tonight who may never hear these dear words again."

The cheers that came after he had finished had not begun to die away when high and clear above them rose a pure soprano. The cheers stopped, and all listened as Mrs. Thurston sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Tom stood at her side, and her soft hand passed caressingly over his [illegible]. When she ended the first verse, she knelt down at him and said:

"Sing with me, Tom."

After that his sweet, childish piping joined her magnificent notes.

But the last words of the song were scarcely finished when tears that glistened in loving memory of home and country were frozen on pallid cheeks by the hoarse and awful cry of "Fire!" "The ship's on fire!"

Brave men worked with the energy of despair, but the carelessness of a sailor had done its work too well. Before dawn eight boats were pulling away from the blazing hulk of the Petrel.

In vain Tom called for his mother. With the first alarm she had told him to stay exactly where he was while she ran below to get his little sister, and he had tried to obey her injunctions, but despite his protests he was taken away before she returned and put in the first boat to leave the ship.

When morning came, but three of the boats were in sight, and in none of these could any member of the Thurston family but Tom be found. A few days later rough weather parted these consorts, and the boat in which Tom was so tenderly cared [illegible] possible wanderer on the Pacific.

The horrors of thirst and starvation that followed quickly found victims, but Tom, wan, pale and most of the time quietly weeping, lived on, though in his sorrowful little heart he really wanted to die. All the boat's crew loved him, and as long as there was any to divide divided the food and water with him. Worse and worse grew the hours for the little company. Every day some one died. At the end of three weeks only Tom and two others were left.

When morning broke on the twenty-second day after the desertion of the burning ship land was sighted. As they neared the shore long canoes manned by brown skinned natives came out to meet them. The savages lifted Tom's comrades from the bottom of the boat. He never saw them again. One great, strapping fellow threw Tom over his shoulder, and overcome with thirst and exposure the little fellow fainted. When he revived, a kindly black face was bending over him as he lay on the grass beneath a spreading tree. The words the native woman spoke Tom had never heard before, but he eagerly seized the gourd of milk she held to his lips and understood the language of her tender actions.

He was soon dressed in the rude skins worn by his savage rescuers and before many weeks had passed began to comprehend much of their talk. The woman who had been so kind still watched over him with jealous care. She had lost her own little black son the day Tom had been brought into camp, and in spite of angry protests and fierce looks she had claimed this white boy for herself, declaring that their god had sent him to her in answer to her prayer. As she was the wife of one of the big chiefs the child was given to her.

Months passed, and Tom became almost as one of the tribe. Then came a famine such as the oldest chiefs had never known before. Many were the envious glances cast at Tom's plump, sturdy little figure, and his foster mother became more watchful than ever.

One night as he lay asleep she touched him on the shoulder. "Come," she whispered, and as Tom sprang lightly up she placed a finger to his lips. Then taking him by the hand she led the way through the bush.

Finally, when they were almost exhausted by hunger and fatigue, the slender wire of one of the telegraph lines that stretch across the Australian wilderness was seen on strong poles reaching high above the stunted trees.

The woman gave a cry of delight. In an indistinct way she knew what the wire was. She had seen one once before and had been told by her superstitious chief that through it the white men talked with their God.

She determined to try to talk with the white man's God herself—to try to get him to send after this little one whom she loved so well and for whose safety from her hungry tribe she had worked so hard.

She prostrated herself before the pole and prayed for the boy's deliverance all that day and most of the night. Then it occurred to her that if she placed her lips close to the wire itself the white man's God would surely hear and answer.

Before she began the climb up the pole she fashioned a rude sling out of her skirt to hold her at the top while she talked to God. With this in her teeth she started. Higher and higher up the bare pole she crawled, clinging desperately with arms and legs, stopping every foot to rest, praying all the time. Great splinters tore her skin, and a little stream of blood from her wounds ran down the pole. She did not mind. Her only thought was of the boy who had absorbed all her wealth of mother love. At last, almost fainting, she reached the top. With one trembling hand she put the sling over it so that the hook holding the wire would keep it from slipping. Then, with head drooping and relaxed muscles, she hung there for awhile, too weak even to pray. When her strength had partly returned, she began, and no prayer from the finest carved pulpit ever was more fervent.

Noon came without any sign of rescue from heaven or earth. Still she clung there. The shadows began to lengthen. Her limbs had stiffened from her cramped position, and her mind was crazed by exhaustion and disappointment. Her prayers changed to curses. The white man's God scorned her and scorned her boy. She grew frantic with wrath and pounded the pole and wire with her fists as she hurled anathemas at them and their God. Hanging by a string about her neck was a boomerang of hardened wood. With it she struck and shattered the glass insulator. Then she pounded the swaying wire. She twisted it and bent it in her fingers. She bit it with her teeth. Finally she broke it. Then she slid to the ground and groveled on the grass in an ecstasy of grief and anger at God and man.

She was recalled to her senses by a piercing cry from Tom. His weariness had changed to the delirium of hunger fever. She gathered him, struggling and screaming, in her arms and held him until the paroxysm passed. Then she made a soft bed of leaves for him and searched for food. She only found a few berries until noon the next day, when greatly to her delight she discovered the nest of some wild fowl with eggs in it. These she forced Tom to suck. She ate nothing herself. What Tom rejected went untouched. She thought only of him.

For three days this went on. She was getting constantly weaker. When the morning of the fourth day broke, she could only crawl on hands and knees in her search for berries. That day linemen sent from the nearest telegraph station, many miles away, to find and repair the break in the wire found them—black woman and white child—lying at the foot of the pole.

They gave them food and heard the woman's story. Touched by it, they offered to take them both back with them, but the woman would not go.

"Take him," she said, pointing to Tom, "take him to his people. He will be better there without me. Give me a little food to keep breath in my body, and I will go back to my tribe. I have saved him. My life is full of joy."

As they bore the boy away she gazed after them wistfully until the bush hid them. Then turning and parting the thick undergrowth she plunged into the wilderness.

For a long time Tom tended sheep for the lineman who had rescued him. The old life was almost forgotten. He ceased to think it strange that he should tend sheep and swelter beneath the shade of a tree on Christmas when in his old home there had been cold and snow and ice. Then another change came. His master died, the sheep were sold, and he was turned away from the station by the newcomers.

A month later, ragged, worn and hungry, he was wandering about the streets of Melbourne. For weeks he kept body and soul together by begging and doing what work he could find. Winter was coming. June merged into July, and the southern cold set in. Barefooted and clothed in rags, Tom was trying to sell papers. As night approached the air grew sharp and biting.

The stars came out clear and beautiful. Suddenly through the cold, crisp air a rocket shot upward. Tom rubbed his eyes. A flood of recollections overpowered him. He sprang forward in the direction of the great trail of light, but soon he stopped. "I guess it must have been a dream," he said to himself as the jumbled memories of the past confused him.

Again the sky was lighted, and some passerby [illegible] a friend:

"Those [illegible] celebrating the Fourth of July."

"The Fourth of July," murmured Tom and started eagerly up again.

Swiftly now his bare feet bore him toward the light of the fireworks. By and by he stood before a great brown building with marble steps and heard the sound of music. A woman's voice floated out on the night air, a voice that thrilled Tom to his soul—he could not tell why. It seemed to the little wanderer as if an angel were singing. With trembling steps he crawled up the [illegible] and sat on the doorstep listening.

Again the voice broke the stillness, this time with the glorious notes of "The Star Spangled Banner." Tom drew his hand over his eyes. It all came back to him—that Fourth of July night on the ship so long ago.

The verse ended, but the piano played on as though some one were to go on with the second verse. Then a strange thing happened. A sweet, piercing boyish voice swelled on the night air, and floating through an open window reached the ears of the happy gathering within. Never, they thought in their astonishment, had they heard so sweet a boyish tenor. The butler, after the unexpected voice had stopped, opened the door to ask the silver voiced chorister in and almost stumbled over a bundle of [illegible] up in the corner, sobbing.

"Come in, little chap," said he. "Praps you'd like to 'ave somethin to eat."

Bashfully Tom walked into the great lighted hall and into the great dining room, where a table was laden down with good things, but his gaze roved over them and rested on the face of a beautiful woman, who with others of the party was crowding eagerly forward to see the boy who had sung so wonderfully. For a moment Tom looked into her eyes, but there was no sign of recognition in them—only interest. He said again:

"I guess I must 'a' dreamed it all," and turned wearily away.

"Dreamed what, little boy?" asked the beautiful woman, bending over him.

"I don't know—quite—but when I heard the music a-comin through the winder," Tom's voice was low and thoughtful, "it seemed to me that some time I'd been on a big ship off on the ocean; that while they was a-sendin up fireworks I had stood long side of a beautiful lady and"——

The stooping woman dropped to her knees and grasped Tom by the shoulders. Her eyes were fastened eagerly on his face; her bosom was heaving. The others stood around in wonder.

"You stood by a beautiful lady," said the woman, "and—and what. Go on!" There were tears in her eyes.

Tom was frightened. "'Tain't nothin, ma'am—I didn't mean nothin—I guess I must 'a' dreamed it. I didn't mean to make you feel bad."

"Go on! Go on! You haven't made me feel bad. Go on!"

"Well, I stood by a beautiful lady, and she looked like you, only her hair wasn't gray; and she sang, I think"—Tom's voice trembled now, and his eyes shifted from the woman's face and looked off over her into memory—"and I sang that song with her. I can see it all so plain! She had 'er hand on my head. I think she was my mother. I—I think so."

In an instant the woman's arms were about the ragged little boy. The woman's sweet lips were covering his dirty face with kisses.

Tom's Fourth of July had ended very gloriously.—New York Press.

Fourth of July Dance in the Panhandle.

When the set was slow in filling, the master called out persuasively:

"Two more couple, an we'll have a little dance. Hurry up, now, an throw yourself around on this stretch like a quarter horse. Let's have a race."

But it was not often the dancers needed encouragement to fill. More frequently the master was obliged to argue:

"Stan back and give us a little room, people. We've got a wild cat spring here."

The crowd, in the eagerness to see the dancing, gave the dancers scant room for the measure.

"Hoe down on her!" said the master. The violin started, and so did the shuffling:

Circle to the left and gents walk home.
Let the ladies' row in front.

So he called, and dropping his voice an octave he sang:

Everybody dance; corners swing.
Good style; pretty little partner;
[illegible]

Shuffle, shuffle go the feet, and the figure is finished. Off starts the caller again:

First couple, right ladies swing out;
Gents swing in; swing out and promenade.
Do, do, gents, slow;
Do, so, ladies, don't you know!

Then comes more intricate work. The cowboys can't begin to get in all their fancy steps. The pace is hot. The shirts of the graingrowers [illegible] through the air as the master calls:

Balance the next; three hands round;
Ladies swing out; gents swing in;
Three hands out and go it ag'in;
Gents swing out and go it ag'in;
Seven hands up, and ladies swing out;
Bow and balance now, partners promenade all.

The master permits 30 seconds' breathing spell, during which the cowboys try to get rid of some of their surplus perspiration, while the girls ply their fans and look cool and happy. The caller gathers himself for a prolonged effort. "Second couple to right," he calls, and then he goes it without break for five minutes, like this:

Ladies swing out; gents swing in;
Three hands up and go it ag'in;
Balance again, ladies to center;
Fall in the corners; promenade home;
Six in two and two come down;
Ladies in center and seven hands round.
Fall in the corners. Now, partners all,
Go south. What's all dead,
And you've got one [illegible], I guess.

"Not in the Wichita valley, the [illegible]" one of the dancers shouts, but without minding interruptions the caller goes right along with his fun making:

Fall and balance; swing and run;
Four to two and two come down;
Lady in center and five hands round;
Ladies swing out and gents swing in;
Five up and go it ag'in.
Swing out; run away with the swing;
Hold and balance; all balance;
Now partners run away with the ball.
Everybody dance; salute the lady you danced with;
Final promenade; the cowboys' [illegible].

And the next time it is something different, with variations on this kind of a figure:

Four hands up; half round the world;
Gents turn a "summerset"; ladies just so.
Ladies round the gents; gents don't go;
Round up fours; everybody swing;
Swing them [illegible];
swing, behind double fashion;
Pretty little partners round up home.

And thus it went on with endless variety in the language and measures, but the same drumming, the same [illegible] girls and the same frolicsome cowboys, until the sun went down behind the Comanches' tepees.—Exchange.

[illegible]

Since the 4th of July [illegible] recognized as the natal day of our nation our population has grown from 4,000,000 to 65,000,000. Its border, [illegible] westward 1,000 miles since 1790 is eloquent with the founding of cities and the birth of states. Our settlements, clearing the forests and subduing the prairies and adding 4,000,000 to the few thousand farms which were the support of the early republic create one of the greatest granaries of the world and open exhaustless reservoirs of national wealth. The industries which the first act of our first administration sought to encourage now give remunerative employment to more people than inhabited the republic when first established. The grand total of their annual output of $7,000,000,000 in value places the United States first among the manufacturing countries of the earth.

One-half the total mileage of all the railroads and one-quarter of all the telegraph lines of the world within our borders testify to the volume, variety and value of an internal commerce which makes these states, if need be and if wisely used, independent and self supporting. The hundred years of development under favorable and unfavorable political conditions have brought the sum of our national wealth to a figure which has passed the results of a [illegible] motherland herself, otherwise the richest of all modern empires.—Chicago Ledger.

Give the Youngsters a Chance.

All the big, full grown patriotic Americans who have at home one or more little Americans who are anxious to celebrate the Fourth in a fitting manner had better hustle around and get them something to celebrate with if they are unsupplied. All the little Americans ought to have a fair, square chance to make some kind of a noise on Independence day, and they will be heard from if you give them half a chance.—New York Sun.

Battles Fought Over Again.

The city way of celebrating the Fourth is flippant and thoughtless compared with the methods employed in many country districts where they are still raising troops to fight against King George. There the American flag is triumphantly raised, and the orator of the day offers his life in its defense amid a great salvo of cheers. He is looked upon as a great hero by the assembled citizens, whose imaginations are so aroused that they look furtively around to see if there are any double dyed Hessians in concealment.

This spirit is enjoyed also by the children, who, having only recently learned how this country became free, feel all the enthusiasm of converts. They would like to get up a movement to go out into the highways and byways and slaughter any sinister looking Englishmen whom they might find lurking around.—New York Herald.

How to Celebrate the Fourth.

To celebrate the Fourth properly you must rise at 4, creep to the window and try to find out whether it looks like rain. Go to bed again and dream dreams of infinite wealth until the small boy of the house fires a cracker at your door and wakes you to the realization that you are in poverty and America. Get up and assume that nonchalance which becomes a man who has a holiday forced upon him. Take a bath and breakfast if you can afford them, then count your nickels and hug them tenderly, for ere the setting of the sun you'll be as poor as a poet.—Texas Siftings.

THE SPIRIT OF UNCLE SAM.

It [illegible] the Small Boy and Fills Him With Enthusiasm.

Uncle Sam is 117 years old today. He is a very jolly old chap. Every one knows just how he looks, the same as every one knows about Santa Claus. He and old Santa are the patron saints of our land. Once a year each comes into the busy life of the world and bids it cease work and celebrate, and the world obeys.

So on this day the spirit of Uncle Sam is abroad. He has made his presence felt for days, and he has encouraged the small boy to squander pennies for "Maple Hawkeyes" and punky slowmatch to be fired surreptitiously on the roof when no one was near. This morning the same old gentleman peeped into the nursery and tickled the nose of the same small boy with the breath of a fragrant firecracker and bade him be up and doing. You wonder who it is that wakes the small boy on the Fourth of July, do you not?

This [illegible] disturber of juvenile slumber, who prompts the offender to rise and fire off his loudest artillery to disturb your morning nap, is Uncle Sam himself. He stands around and drops his hands down deep in his trousers pockets and then gives that patient garment a hitch that threatens the straps that confine it, and then he chuckles with glee. He seems to say:

"This is my birthday, children, and I depend upon you to celebrate it."

Uncle Sam never says anything about politics. It is neither north, south, east nor west that he favors, but he stretches the stars and stripes over the length and breadth of the United States to glorify the land of the free and the home of the brave.

This is the day to teach the children patriotism. There is no catechism to be taught as a side issue with the lesson. The firecracker is the A B C of patriotism. This is the day to teach the children what it means. They will like it all the better when they know how important the teaching is.

The growing world loves the Fourth of July because of its associations. Every man can recall the feeling of one small boy in his memory who was blown up with gunpowder. Every woman can remember one little girl who burned her fingers and a hole in her gown. Every father and mother have a little story, a reminiscence, to relate. The children listen, and Uncle Sam listens, too, and chuckles at the recollection. He remembers it himself.

So we all love the Fourth of July. Even the baby whose first Fourth is today, shouts in glee at the disturbance that grasps the beautiful, bright flag you put into the chubby hand and sucks the paint off with infantile relish.

The little chap whom you [illegible] and for whom you buy some firecrackers because you see [illegible] will remember you as long as he lives and bless you.

And as for the rest of us, let us all grasp hands and circle around north, south, east, west, Uncle Sam, Columbia and everybody to celebrate the genial old gentleman's one hundred and seventeenth birthday.—New York Recorder.

A Cannon Cracker in the Salad.

The pranks of last Fourth of July are of course stale, flat and unprofitable by this time, but one which decorated that event seems to me original enough to warrant the telling. At one of the innumerable Newtons—"the top, obviously prosperous Newtons," as a Bostonian calls them—there was on the Fourth a Sunday school picnic. Now, in this unregenerate part of the world there are wicked boys, even at Sunday school picnics, and one of these conceived the brilliant idea of sticking a huge cannon cracker into the dish of salad which stood at the head of the festive board—or rather cloth, for there are never boards at Sunday school picnics, but only tablecloths spread upon the ground. How the small boy managed to get his cracker into the salad unperceived, or to light it after it was there, is one of those mysteries which must remain unsolved until the time when the small boy begins to be understood, as he is not at present. The fact is both these things were accomplished, the latter under the very nose of the pastor, who stood at the head of the feast to say a lengthy grace directly over the smoking bowl. The effect of the volcano of salad, which showered the pastor with an oleaginous lava of mingled lobster, oil, eggs and lettuce, is one of those things of which the fancy may dream, but which words cannot paint. The grace was concluded without an amen, and general consternation ensued. The women shrieked, and the graceless youths of the crowd chuckled in unholy joy, and over that picnic descended the gloom of a general conviction that there was present one small boy for whom eternal perdition was not only sure, but on the whole rather too good.—Chicago Tribune.

A Fourth of July, 1864.

Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Hunter, were the words of the day on July 4, 1864. Sherman was then on his successful march to the sea, carrying everything before him in his victorious progress. Martinsburg had just been evacuated by the enemy. Although no one was certain of it, the long war was nearly over, and the next Fourth of July was to see the white wings of peace where then waved the bloody banners of war. Lincoln had called for 500,000 more men for the front. Secretary of the Treasury Chase had sent in his resignation, and Fessenden had been selected for his place. The Kearsarge and the Alabama had met in conflict, and the Alabama had been sunk. Grant was before Petersburg demanding its unconditional surrender. Martinsburg was reoccupied, and Hunter had marched in at the head of his victorious troops.

So ended the last Fourth of July of the great civil war. When the next Independence day rolled around, the country was in peace, and the warm hearts of northerners were devising ways and means to assist their impoverished brethren in the south, who had lost everything in the war.—Exchange.

Why Some People Like the Fourth.

Because it's one holiday more a year anyhow.

Because one may get dizzy and be forgiven.

Because it's so much nearer to the next public holiday.

Because it gives them a chance to go fishing and lie about it.

Because the dear girls at home put extras on the dinner table.

Because their love of noise is second only to their love of peanuts.

Because the troublesome small boys have a chance to kill themselves.

Because they may show off the latest thing in tennis blazers and yachting suits.

Because it gives them a whole day for lovemaking and love's ineffable ineffableness.

Because roasting potatoes in a bonfire is a pleasure not experienced every day in the year.

Because they may make the same patriotic speeches they made last year and the year before.

Because one may go out into an open lot.—Judge.

KING OF HOLIDAYS.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH IS THE BEST OF THE WHOLE LOT.

New Year's and Thanksgiving Are Well Enough In Their Way, but They're Not In It With Independence Day—Reminiscences of Celebrations In Days of Yore.

The Fourth of July is the biggest, most riotous day of all holidays. New Year's amounts to nothing. People make resolutions, stuff themselves with turkey and look out of windows. That is New Year's day. Washington's birthday is simply a reminder that we are patriotic. Some people hoist flags, others have masquerade dances, and banks close their doors. That is Washington's birthday. Decoration day is pretty in its way. Flowers are strewn over graves, an opportunity is given everybody to parade in the rain, and the death list is boosted the next week as a result of early spring exercise. Thanksgiving day, like New Year's day, is simply an excuse for people to stifle the cry of their appetite by dumping upon it a load of turkey, "stuffin" and mince pie. Christmas is more of a day than any of those mentioned, but even then [illegible] people and leaves them to sit around in a silly way and grin at the evidences of their generosity.

But the Fourth of July! That is the day! It is wild. It is modern. The bursting of a firecracker is worth more than the turkey dinner of New Year's day. The explosion of a torpedo gives more inspiration than the bellow of a bass viol at a Washington birthday masquerade. The smell of red [illegible] the [illegible] displayed on Decoration day. The hiss and whistle of a pinwheel arouse a keener enthusiasm than the carving of a big, toothsome turkey, and the roar of a cannon [illegible] children than the [illegible] silly legend of Santa Claus. The Fourth of July is the big day of the year. It's the [illegible] at a marriage; it's the water that turns the wheel; it's the [illegible] string in the harp of holidays.

Big towns hear the boom and see the flash of the Fourth of July. There is a wild fusillade of explosions and the yelling and banging of fire engines. Ambulances tear through the smoking streets, and the surgeons grow dextrous and white aproned in the hospitals [illegible] whose bodies have been pierced and burned by shot and powder. War [illegible] enthusiasm. It develops warriors and heroes. Boys and [illegible] make pretty women drop their fans and take from their lovers to cheer them. The Fourth of July to a big town is a reminder of war. There are the dead and wounded, the streets are ablaze, and the sky at night is seared and pierced with fire. No wonder, then, that the day is the daddy of all holidays. Plum puddings, overgrown turkeys, good resolutions, wreaths of immortelle, cherry tree masquerades and a legend of a pink nosed man chimming down the chimney—compare all these with the bang and flash of Independence day.

Who wouldn't have a larger [illegible] on the Fourth of July?

But did you ever stop to think over the way you used to pass that day in the village where everybody knew you by a nickname? There were the old crates back of the crockeryman's store. The groceryman had some for the oil and tar barrels, but he always left them out of doors. You were a boy then, but for weeks and weeks you stole behind the buildings and dragged those crates and barrels to a place where nobody in the village could find them. The 3d of July was always a momentous day in town. The good crockery dealer knew what would be done with his crates. The groceryman knew what disposition was to be made with his missing barrels. They were to be burned. And so they were. Just as the clocks in the [illegible] houses were striking the midnight hour there was a blast of fire near the town pump, and in an instant the vine covered homesteads and the stores with their purple shades and quaint weather cocks reflected the glow of the patriotic fire. The crockery dealer's crates and the groceryman's barrels were in that blaze. But those merchants didn't mind that.

It was the Fourth of July.

Slowly the great bonfire fell away to ashes and snapping embers. Then day broke. With the first pulsations of light in the east came the middle aged villager with the village brass cannon. It was always dragged to the common by the hotel [illegible] driver or the snare drummer in the [illegible] band. These men knew how to fire a cannon. For a day or more they had been making charges of powder in red flannel bags and stalking about the streets at night with the air of a man who thinks he holds the world by the tail and can break its back by one swing of the arm. The boys who had built the bonfire with the crates of the crockery dealer and the barrels of the groceryman (and you were one of them) trotted after the man with the cannon. But you had nothing to say. The real serious waking of the day had just begun. The only thing you had done was to start the fire. The salute was always fired at sunrise. The bills on the boards of a fence of the fair grounds had announced the hour weeks before. There was much ceremony in ramming the charge home and jerking the lanyard. The hostler of the hotel barn had always had something to say about the way the thing should be done.

Country people never got to town much before noon. They came in wagons with soft maple boughs fastened to the harness of the horses and a flag or two fluttering from the tail gate of the conveyance. Meantime a Comanch looking fellow had given a street entertainment with a particularly bear in front of the postoffice. But the real celebration of the day never began until 2 o'clock. Then the assemblyman of the district (and a mighty man was he with his stringy hair and owlish eyes) would read the Declaration of Independence. Then would come the oration. Sometimes the assemblyman would deliver that, too, but as a rule the big village lawyer was given the job. His wife always sat on the platform with a proud look on her face. Then would come the greased pole, which the town lout would make a desperate effort to climb, but with the invariable result of falling ignominiously to the ground. The greased pig, a sack race, a procession of ragamuffins and an allegorical representation of the 13 original states in the flounces and [illegible] of 13 young girls, with the hotel keeper's daughter as the Goddess of Liberty, always closed the afternoon's celebration. Then the good women of the Presbyterian church would give an ice cream festival, at which the assemblyman with his stringy hair and the big village lawyer who had made the oration of the day would fill their faces and slobber over the napkins thrust in their necks. Then would come the fireworks, the screeching and hissing of the skyrocket, the bursting of a colored ball of fire in the lace curtains of the hotel and the sputtering of a pinwheel on the town pump.

Night always ceased with a fire in the bakery shop. This was Fourth of July in the country.—Chicago Herald.

THE [illegible] FOURTH.

[illegible] to celebrate the Fourth has [illegible] the minds of Americans for many [illegible]. The guns and the huge meetings, [illegible] the blood have not been [illegible] are had or the noblest way to [illegible] such an anniversary. [illegible] Forth, in the July Forum, answers the question: "How the Fourth of [illegible] be Celebrated" thus: "The [illegible] will be how to make the Fourth [illegible] festival, a national solemnity [illegible] the claims of the [illegible] as well as to be in [illegible] their place, I should think [illegible] of [illegible] and associations of [illegible] philanthropy. Those whose [illegible] long enough to understand [illegible] of human freedom [illegible] their studies and [illegible]. Very fitly, after such a [illegible] of them might [illegible], in whose numbers he might [illegible] of the philosophy of freedom. Mothers, who should [illegible] the true guardians of peace, might [illegible] together to study all that promotes [illegible]. In gatherings of [illegible] might be prepared and discussed. I can imagine [illegible] banquets of a [illegible] and sturdy [illegible], in which men and women [illegible] and pledge each other, [illegible] of friendship and good [illegible].

We can't imagine anything like the [illegible] as a celebration of the Fourth! A combination of the American spirit and the [illegible] of pure American ideas [illegible] be so common that something else should be needed on the Fourth of July [illegible]. It is not a day for preaching, but for fun. As a martial festival [illegible] always have a semi-military celebration, and be a carnival of explosions [illegible] those who enjoy powder and noise, a day for excursions for those who like to [illegible] picnic, and a day of culture for those who love to learn. It is a good old-fashioned twenty-four day with room enough in it for the quiet and the noisy to have a good time without disturbing each other.

THE SUSPENDED WARDEN.

The state prison scandal is now in the hands of the new board of prison directors and they have the matter to settle. It is claimed that although the board is democratic the majority of its members are known to be favorable to General Chamberlain. They have met and organized, and on Friday will meet and determine the issue.

Gen. Chamberlain and Dr. Fox are at the Wethersfield prison, and to a Courant reporter on Saturday, the warden said "he considered that his leave of absence had expired and that he was back again in his old position. He certainly was the one who had qualified as warden and was [illegible] the warden now, but the prison was under martial law and he should not interfere. Whenever the military and civil authorities came in contact, the civil had to give way and he should in this case."

It is not becoming in General Chamberlain to intimate that there is any usurpation of power over at Wethersfield, or that he is being in any wise unfairly dealt with. He ought not to be satisfied with any such conclusion of an investigation as the state of Connecticut has witnessed, and of which the press generally has disapproved. Innocent men like to be vindicated, not hung up and labelled in a political [illegible] both "guilty" and "not guilty."

Gen. Chamberlain is the suspended warden of the state prison, and we shall be glad, and no doubt he will be, when he is well rid of the suspense. He is now in the hands of his political opponents, and if they find the case against him unproven and restore him to power his vindication will be complete. It is intimated that he has a fair chance of being reinstated, and should he be, that will end a controversy that has been warmly participated in by most of the papers in the state.

THE EFFECT.

The correct views of the press and the mistake of the administration is plainly shown by the result upon the business of the country since President Cleveland issued his proclamation for an extraordinary session of congress. A reaction has set in, there are signs of confidence and good cheer, and stocks have shown a tendency already toward improvement. The loss of hundreds of millions of dollars is chargeable to the halting policy of the administration when the one hundred million reserve in the treasury was broken into and Secretary Carlisle almost decided that the government's silver certificates were not payable in gold. Apprehending results, President Cleveland promptly assured the country that these certificates were payable in gold and his secretary has since forgotten to speak upon the subject.

For nearly six weeks appeals had been pouring in upon the president to call an extra session of congress, and by a prompt response he could have effected the happy result which we see today. Cleveland has a good deal to answer for, and in view of the immediate change which followed his proclamation, he must be convinced that his "object lesson" policy was too ruinous for any man or party to indulge in who has the welfare of his country at heart.

THE REICHSTAG MEETS TODAY.

The fourth of July in Germany witnesses the assembling of the new reichstag, which it is supposed will support the emperor's army bill. The large number of parties makes results uncertain, because the balance of power changes with each new election, and the party that gains the power to hold over or overthrow a policy or to pass or defeat a bill usually has an axe to grind: and is ready for a compromise. By the late elections the balance of power fell to the anti-semites, and it cannot be said now what they will do, although they are counted in favor of the military bill. As the new reichstag stands there are supposed to be 204 votes for the army bill and 196 against it. The anti-semites gained 160 per cent. in the late elections, and their aim is to deprive the Hebrew race of all social and civic rights in the German empire; and they are now where they can stipulate for concessions from the government. The anti-semites excite the jealousy of the socialists, but these wagers of war against the Hebrew capitalists of that country may be expected some day to join hands with the socialists in waging war against all capitalists. It will be interesting to see how the emperor will manage to hold these Jew-haters in support of his bill for the enlargement of the military forces.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Be careful with that cannon cracker. A finger or an eye lost on the Fourth has no consolation about it.

An exchange makes the pat inquiry: "If the extra congress may not be regarded as an August body?"

Down at Boston they claim the cannon were right Friday for a Yale victory—an eagle flew over Mr. Ivey head before the race.

The Duke of Veragua sailed for Spain on Saturday. He was less courteous than the Infanta, and did not make so favorable an impression.

A. J. Drexel and Leland Stanford were millionaires whose contributions for the good of the people are a greater honor to them than the dollars which were counted to their credit.

A United States judge in California holds that a Chinaman arrested under the Geary act and convicted has the right to appeal, and that he cannot be imprisoned or deported without a trial by jury. The constitution secures to Chinamen every right that it secures to every other alien.

As Governor Flower was addressing the 47th New York regiment Sunday evening a "breezy" private exclaimed to him: "Governor, you are talking through your panama. Take it off and give the wind a chance!" Such insubordination cannot be commended, but the fellow apparently knew the governor.

The Boston Journal says: "'Pay up and smile' is what Harvard had to do last week. It is a good time to read the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table's definition of a gentleman." The Bulkeleys of New London have not learned how to do that yet! The reading advised might not prove pleasurable to them.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

We are What we Are!

The Fourth of July divides the old from the new. The world is on a higher level because of the self-sacrifice of our fathers. Their memory is our richest inheritance and their heroism lies at the foundation of our prosperity. We are what we are because they were what they were. Rejoicing mingles with responsibility and we face the future with a glorious past for a background. The republic has taught mankind that an educated people is its own king.—[New York Herald.

Something Dropped.

Have the congressmen heard something drop? It was silver. Stand from under.—[Springfield Union.

Ore!

"The trouble of our country is ore; when congress has met, let us hope it will be o'er."—[Boston Transcript.

He Can Wipe His Brow.

Mr. Quincy may now wipe his brow and take a brief interval of rest. He has got his man, McSweeney, into the office of assistant commissioner of immigration. This was one of the greatest efforts of his life.—[Boston Journal.

Poor Policy.

The instruction of the democracy by the "object lesson" method is the destruction of the property of the people.—[New York Press.

Apt.

Center college has dubbed our Adlai as LL. D. Lamentably Lonesome Democrat.—[The Chicago Inter Ocean.

"If."

If the country could believe in the democratic party there would soon be plenty of confidence in the financial situation.—[The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Kicker.

Some folks is allus kickin'
And raisin' of a storm;
In summer time they mope and whine, and say
"It's Too
Blamed
Warm!" —[Cincinnati Times.

Dire Confusion.

The vast army of disciples of democracy who had gone to Washington ready and willing, even anxious, to serve their country, if haply she may bid them do so, at suitable rates, were thrown into dire confusion by the president's sudden departure from the city.—[Worcester Spy.

His Epitaph.

It was said of a public man some years ago after he had committed a monumental error: "He has blown out the gas and gone to bed." Governor Altgeld might cut out this epitaph and paste it in his hat.—[New York Tribune.

It Didn't Work.

A sentimental South Carolina girl wrote to her lover, "Drink to me only with thine eyes." He was a plain, matter-of-fact chap, and he wrote back that there was no provision for his doing so under the new law. It is understood that the engagement is off.—[New York Tribune.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

"Madam, here is an article—
Difference scarce a particle—
Twixt this tooth wash and famed SOZODONT."
"DON'T care for it, thanks, sir,
None with that one ranks, sir,
Fact—and every body knows so."

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

"Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation;
Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation,
Gives healthy sleep, also aids digestion,
Without narcotic stupefaction.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions, should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

The Glorious Fourth.

A poor pilgrim to salute the day,
While the ringing clang of bells
From north and south and east and west
On the morning breezes swells.

The flutter of flags in the azure air
Through the sunshine's golden glow—
The growing murmur of busy feet
In the thronging streets below.

The crack of cracker, the clap of cap,
Then the big torpedo's round
Mixed in with the blare of a marching band
And the bass drum's noisy pound.

A short time lull as the day declines,
Then candle and wheel and light,
With bomb and flags and the rocket's burst
In the growing gloom of night.

No [illegible] idle, no change of scene,
Till the hours slow die away—
All hands off to bed to get the full facts
By reading the papers next day.

THE FOURTH IN TEXAS.

[illegible] Is Managed By the [illegible]—Indians Get the Bones.

Down by the bayou 10 cords of wood burned in the trenches Friday night. Old Dennis watched the fire. He is grizzled and black. [illegible] been a champion barbecuer [illegible] as he can remember, even when he was a [illegible] back in North Carolina. "Dennis" was not his name this time. When the bed of glowing coals was just right, Dennis and the helpers laid the railroad iron across the trenches, and on this [illegible] they placed the dismembered portions of 40 beeves and a complement of shoats and muttons.

At noon of the Fourth old Dennis stared with glistening and self satisfied face in the [illegible] of the [illegible] iron. The grill [illegible] empty. [illegible] upon tables under a brush was the [illegible] now cut down into half pound [illegible]. [illegible] It was only [illegible] to look down the long line of [illegible] outside of the ropes while the food was being [illegible] in wooden [illegible] on the long tables. Over the countenances of the Comanches spread looks of intense and quiet content as they drew long breaths of the odor. The palefaces waited with less patience and more hilarity. From the pens to the table was [illegible] reaching distance, but each man saw that his neighbor's [illegible] was held in check for the signal. One man [illegible], by the [illegible] of [illegible] lady, to infringe the rule. He was no [illegible] than Adam.

Dude Brown took a [illegible] of the bread and meat and pickle and started to carry it to [illegible] lady who [illegible] [illegible] with a mighty shout from a cowboy who saw the [illegible], but not the motive. Harve Stearns heard the shout, and from his place by the [illegible] turned and caught sight of Dude Brown making across the grounds. He was under the rope [illegible] the meat. Dude Brown tried to explain. [illegible] Harve Stearns shook his head and [illegible] the meat. "Fetch it back," "Make him fetch it back" [illegible] the crowd, [illegible] Harve Stearns [illegible] make him bring it back. Then, to see there would be no more case of Adam and [illegible] Brown the crowd [illegible] Knight, the marshal of the day, mounting his big [illegible], stood up and [illegible] before the ropes, warning "Hands off till you get the word." They "got the word" after awhile. There was one mighty rush, and a thousand dishes of bread and meat were lifted in the twinkling of an eye.

Then some dishes [illegible] out. After awhile nobody seemed to be hungry except the Comanches, who had stood in a long dignified line and looked [illegible] themselves [illegible] been helped. They looked wistful, but [illegible]. [illegible]—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Do you know anything about the French Fourth of July? It is on the 14th, and the French people celebrate their Independence day, for it was on that day 102 years ago that the old Bastille, where all the political prisoners were [illegible], was torn down by the [illegible] people. [illegible] the city of Paris is a very bright and lively one indeed. No carriages, stages or vehicles of any kind are allowed in the streets in the evening, and the avenues are lighted by thousands of [illegible], which are arranged in bands and [illegible], like the diamonds of a lighted necklace. At each square platforms, decorated with blue, white and red (the French [illegible]), are erected, and here bands of musicians are located, and they play for the merry dancers until late into the night. The palace of the Trocadero, which stands on a great hill overlooking the Seine, is shining with [illegible], and directly opposite on the other side of the river, is the great Eiffel tower, the tallest structure in the world. The revolving light in the [illegible] sheds beautiful rays of color—blue, white and red—over the entire city and can be seen for [illegible] surrounding country. Of course there are fireworks, rockets and [illegible] like we have, and the long tree lined avenues are decorated with [illegible] and [illegible] and ribbons.

The [illegible] more than the [illegible], [illegible] they will sing and dance in the streets as if they were afraid of [illegible] their share of merrymaking on the glorious day.—New York Advertiser.

Another [illegible].

PROVIDENCE, July [illegible] D. Russell Brown, through Judge Advocate General Charles A. Wilson, has today filed one more brief in the controversy now before the supreme court to determine the standing of his excellency and the Republican senate on the one [illegible] house on the other.

Crisp Calls on Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Ex-Speaker Crisp arrived in Washington this morning from Atlanta, and repaired at once to the treasury department, where he had an interview with Secretary Carlisle at whose suggestion he came north. The interview lasted 30 minutes.

Lasters' Strike Settled.

EAST WEYMOUTH, Mass., July 3.—The strike of the lasters at the shoe factory of M. C. Dizer & Co. has been settled and the men will return to work Thursday morning, the matter of a new price list being adjusted satisfactorily to both parties.

Killed Wife and Himself.

OSKALOOSA, Ia., July 3.—After great deliberation and preparation Alexander Carey White, coal miner, killed his wife and then himself yesterday. Difference about some money owned by his wife moved the man to do the deed.

Silver Certificates Decline.

NEW YORK July 3.—Silver certificates opened at 73 bid, and 75 asked, at the New York stock exchange. The closing quotations on Saturday was 73 1-4 bid, and 76 asked.

Tell the President.

COTTAGE CITY, Mass., July 3.—Big hauls of blue fish are being made off West Chop, at the entrance of Vineyard Haven harbor. The fish have struck in in large numbers and are in pursuit of schools of [illegible].

POPULAR PORTER.

Chilians Wildly Cheer New United States Minister.

UNUSUAL HONORS ARE PAID HIM.

Warmth of Reception Surprises Chilians Themselves.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Under date of Valparaiso, yesterday, the Herald has this: James D. Porter, the new minister from the United States, arrived in Valparaiso yesterday, and proceeded this morning to Santiago, accompanied by Secretary of Legation McGarr.

Minister Porter was met at the railroad station in Santiago by the officials of the foreign office, and escorted to his hotel in the government carriage. This mark of [illegible] newly arrived representative of a foreign nation.

Before leaving Valparaiso Mr. Porter was serenaded at his hotel by the [illegible] band and cheered by thousands of citizens in the streets.

No other representative from a foreign nation has been so cordially received by Chilians in recent years. His welcome has been so [illegible] as to surprise even Chilians themselves, who have adopted this method of showing how pleased they were that another representative from the United States has come.

To Take the Sting of [illegible].

The warmth of the reception given Mr. Porter in Valparaiso and Santiago was only a repetition of the feeling displayed at the [illegible] cities of Chili.

The captains of Chilian war ships and the governors of several states displayed great rivalry in paying attention to the minister.

Some of the Chilian newspapers publish long articles welcoming the new minister and [illegible] that Mr. [illegible] has arrived.

[illegible] of the [illegible] is published [illegible] by Minister of Foreign Affairs [illegible], in which he speaks in complimentary terms of Mr. Egan. This letter is commented upon unfavorably, and declared to misrepresent the sentiment of Chilians, who—from the [illegible] page—are declared to be at a loss to understand how such a letter could have been given [illegible] of Chili.

Minister Porter will probably be formally received by President Montt on July 4.

BUENOS AYRES EXCITED.

President Advised to Resign and Will Be Forced Out of Office.

NEW YORK, July 3.—There is great excitement in Buenos Ayres over the political situation. The Herald's correspondent telegraphs that the chiefs of the various political factions have advised President [illegible]

A conference, which lasted all night, was held by President Pena, the members of his cabinet and leaders of [illegible] parties, including Mitre and Roca.

It was generally believed that the president would [illegible] on account of his unpopularity, and great crowds gathered in front of the president's palace to await the result.

[illegible] the public and the politicians, but the circumstances were against him.

Mitre replied that he would give no counsel relative to the continuance of [illegible] Roca and Pelligrini [illegible] intimating that the longer continuance in power of President Pena was impossible.

The president again declared that the last cabinet was organized with the hope that through it congress might be induced to support his administration, but in this his expectations had not been realized.

The conference ended without accomplishing anything favorable to the president. Indeed, it made more clear the opposition of political leaders to Senor Pena. Their advice that he resign showed [illegible].

[illegible] believed that [illegible] to influence public opinion against his political opponents by giving them a chance to support his policy and restoring tranquility.

The members of the cabinet are still in conference with the president in the palace.

It is believed he will be forced to resign within a few days.

McKinney Reaches Bogota.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Herald's correspondent in Riviera telegraphs that the Brazilian revolutionists have blown up the bridge across [illegible] Negro, near [illegible]. The Castilhistas, he adds, are badly [illegible]. [illegible] McKinney, the new United States minister to Colombia, has reached Bogota. The story that General Pierola has landed at Challa, Peru, and is organizing his followers for a revolution, has not been [illegible] in Peru.

SILVER IN AUSTRIA.

[illegible] Move In [illegible] Regarded as Temporary.

VIENNA, July 3.—The Politische Correspondenz says that the fall of silver will not influence unfavorably the Austro-Hungarian operations in connection with the currency reform. The Austrian and Hungarian ministers, it says, are discussing the time at which the mints shall cease purchasing silver and what steps are to be taken to provide employment for the silver miners at Przibram and Schemnitz after the suspension of work in the mines around these places.

The Neue Freie Presse prints an interview on the silver question given to its London correspondent by Mr. Goschen, ex-chancellor of the exchequer.

India's action in closing her mints to the free coinage of silver, Mr. Goschen said, must be regarded as temporary and tentative. India [illegible] standard of value. It was [illegible] such a state of affairs should continue indefinitely. Everything depends in India upon how the natives regarded the new measure. The natives were naturally conservative, and esteemed the rupee as almost sacred. If they absolutely refused to accept the new measure, the government would be compelled to withdraw it.

NOT BUYING SILVER.

Secretary Carlisle Refuses to Go Into the Market as Usual.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Carlisle has decided not to resume the purchase of silver today and has so notified the principal firms that offer of silver to the treasury on purchasing days.

This action is unusual, but the matter of purchasing silver on given days is discretionary with the secretary of the treasury.

The reason assigned in the notice sent to intending offerers is that the treasury department has not yet completed its annual settlements, made at the end of each fiscal year, at the United States mints.

Whether silver purchases will be resumed Wednesday is left open, and will not be determined until Wednesday comes, and circumstances will then decide the matter.

The price paid for silver when the treasury department completed its June purchases was 82.9 cents an ounce. Since then it has declined to [illegible] cents an ounce and is today quoted at [illegible] cents an ounce.

NOTABLE GATHERING.

World's Student Conference Now In Session at Northfield.

EAST NORTHFIELD, Mass., July 3.—The world's student conference, which began its sessions here Sunday, promises to be one of the most notable gatherings ever at Northfield.

Evangelist Moody is present and will have charge of the conference. Among the other noted speakers will be Rev. Henry Van Dyke, Rev. W. H. P. Faunce, both of New York, Rev. H. P. Beach of the School for Christian Workers in Springfield, Professor George T. Purvis of Princeton, and Professor M. W. Jacobs of Hartford Theological seminary.

The singing will be conducted by Professor D. B. Towner. Tomorrow will be the field day of the conference. The afternoon will be given up to athletic contests between representatives of different colleges. Congressman Breckenridge will give an oration in the evening. The conference will continue until July 12.

Franchise Is Accepted.

FITCHBURG, Mass., July 3.—The Worcester North Street Railway company of Leominster on Saturday filed a notice of acceptance of the franchise offered them by the town. This is the famous one wherein it is ordered that the company pay the town 50 per cent. of its net earnings for five years. The first call of 10 per cent. for the capital stock has been subscribed and the rest will be gotten together as soon as it can be.

Fourth in Boston.

BOSTON, July 3.—Fourth of July will be observed in the city of Boston substantially as it has been for several years past. The city government appropriated $12,000 to be expended under the direction of Chairman John H. Lee of the board of aldermen and President David F. Barry of the common council.

Children Burned to Death.

BUFFALO, July 3.—Dannie and Myrtle McCarthy, aged respectively 12 and 10 years, children of Dennis McCarthy, were burned to death last night in a fire which resulted from the explosion of a lamp. Mrs. McCarthy saved her two younger children. The father was severely burned and may lose an arm.

Skull Crushed With a Club.

NEW YORK, July 3.—[illegible] J. H. [illegible] years old, was crushed by a blow with a club in Maurice Quinlan's liquor shop at 57 Market street late Saturday night. Regan is in the Chamber street hospital still unconscious, and his death is looked for every minute.

All Bids Rejected.

BOSTON, July 3.—The secretary of state has rejected all the bids recently presented for the furnishing of paper and stationery supplies for the coming year. He will call for more bids right away, as the time is pressing and he wishes the contract to be awarded soon.

Gladstone Sprains His Ankle.

LONDON, July 3.—Mr. Gladstone slipped and fell yesterday while descending a staircase in the Petersham residence of the Earl of Dysart, with whom he is visiting. Beyond spraining one of his ankles, he was not seriously hurt.

English Shipping Declines.

LONDON, July 3.—A memorandum on the shipping of Liverpool shows that the number of vessels using the harbor of Liverpool has decreased by [illegible]. The decrease in tonnage is 200,000, and in receipts [illegible].

Pastor Resigns.

WEYMOUTH, Mass., July 3.—Rev. Oliver [illegible], the pastor of the Congregational church has given notice of his resignation. He leaves for abroad next month to continue his studies.

Change of Name Forbidden.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 3.—A ukase just issued decrees that hereafter those who change their names for any purpose, especially with criminal intent, shall be punished under the criminal code.

In Time to Celebrate.

BOSTON, July 3.—The Catalonia arrived at [illegible] this morning from Liverpool by way of Queenstown. She had 15 cabin, 86 intermediate and 274 steerage passengers.

Tax on Railway Tickets.

BERLIN, July 3.—The government is considering a plan to cover with a tax on railway tickets part of the expenditure required by the army bill.

FALL RIVER FIRES.

Are Considered by Some Good Persons of Incendiary Origin.

FALL RIVER, July 3.—The city was threatened with two great fires at a very early hour this morning, and both were of incendiary origin.

The first one was located at the rear of Gronard & Smith's paint store on North Main street, where a long row of low wooden buildings is occupied by [illegible].

[illegible] few blocks from the [illegible] and by prompt work the firemen succeed in confining the flames to two stores.

A still alarm was answered from the [illegible] after the alarm was rung in.

The damage will be less than $2000, and is covered by insurance.

The fire department was hardly in its quarters before an alarm was rung in from box 12, calling [illegible] to Cook, Borden & Co.'s lumber yard on Davol street, the most extensive lumber yard in the city.

The fire had been burning at least 30 minutes before the alarm was given.

That it had been set afire was shown by bundles of oakum found underneath the lumber. When the department arrived a [illegible] and a half million feet of lumber were throwing out the hottest kind of flames.

Engine and water works streams were directed towards the blaze, but it was not until 5 o'clock this morning that the firemen left the place.

The lumber was thrown into the river, which is now littered with floating [illegible].

During the progress of the fire several roofs in the vicinity were ignited by flying sparks, but fortunately for all there was only a very light wind blowing from 1 to 3 o'clock a. m.

The total damage has not been estimated as yet.

Edward Dwire of hook and ladder No. 1 suffered a fractured collar bone from being struck by a falling plank.

A Case of Emergency.

President of College (in his nightclothes—time, 2:30 a. m.)—What do you want, my boy?

Messenger (from office of Morning Tornado)—Called the doors, sir. Editor would like to have you come to the office as quick as you can. We've lost the proofs of that baccalaureate sermon, pied a line of the Hebrew, and there ain't a man about the shop that knows Hebrew from Halifax. Editor says please hurry.—Chicago Tribune.

A PASTOR'S TROUBLES.

His Sinful Doings Paraded at Church Door.

CIRCULAR TELLS WHOLE STORY.

Congregation Upbraided For Upholding Such a Monster.

NEW YORK, July 3.—There was trouble in Dr. Potter's Baptist tabernacle yesterday. Charges were brought against the pastor some time ago by his assistant, Rev. Dr. Putnam, and a committee has been investigating them ever since.

Dr. Putnam thought the committee was slightly favoring Dr. Potter, so he issued a circular to be distributed at the church door yesterday—communion Sunday. This letter reviews the case from the beginning, and upbraids the congregation for upholding the pastor in the face of what the author considers positive proof of his guilt. Following are some of the excerpts:

"The victims of his dishonesty and the victims of his wiles are so many in this community and elsewhere that the officers of the law have to employ all skill and means at their command, and to enter the very sanctuary of the Lord, and at a time of worship in order to secure

Justice for Potter's Creditors.

It seems strange that a church whose members have poured streams of scandal into one another's ears for years, concerning their pastor's dishonesty and immorality, should now be engaged in the vain attempt to exonerate him through the effort of a jury of his own selection.

"It is only fair and just for me to state that a short time before I brought the charges against Potter to your notice he threatened me with arrest, and failing in that he offered me a bribe to leave the city and to pledge myself never to state anything derogatory to his character.

"For your guidance and in order to remove any doubt from your minds as to whether I am in possession of undeniable facts of Potter's guilt, I hereby in print charge D. C. Potter, upon my own personal knowledge, and upon the evidence of unimpeachable witnesses, with habitual lying, deliberate dishonesty, fraud, drunkenness and adultery with women whose names I am ready to divulge before a proper tribunal and for the sake of morality and behalf of many of his victims I have participated in the unhappy controversy and shall continue to do so until the guilt of D. C. Potter is clearly exposed before the world and the ministry rid of an unworthy member. Upon the proving of these charges I stake my own reputation, my private and ministerial character, my future career, in which is involved my own happiness and that of my family."

Some of Dr. Potter's partisans called on the police to prevent the distribution of the circulars, but before the officers arrived they had all been handed out and no arrests were made.

They Robbed Freight Cars.

CONCORD, N. H., July 3.—In the police court this forenoon Albert Clarke and William Walker were held for the grand jury in $1000 bonds each on the charge of breaking and entering and stealing from the Boston and Maine freight cars.

Safe Door Blown Off.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Me., July 3.—Nickerson's store was robbed Saturday night. The safe door was blown off and the cash box, containing $30 in money and checks, taken. The checks are not negotiable.

"Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both."

To ensure both the above safe, good, wholesome, palatable food is demanded. It is next to impossible to present a sufficient variety of appetizing bills of fare for our meals without a liberal allowance of pastry and other food to which shortening is required. How to make crisp, healthful, digestible pastry has puzzled the cooks. A difficulty in all good cooking in the past has been lard. Always fickle, never uniform, most unwholesome—lard has always been the bane of the cook and the obstacle to "good digestion."

Cottolene
comes now into popular favor as the new shortening—better than even the best of lard with none of lard's objectionable qualities. And
COTTOLENE
comes attended by both "APPETITE and HEALTH."

NORWICH AND VICINITY

CITY NEWS.

The Slater museum will be open today from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowland left this city Monday for the Catskill mountains.

Miss Edith Cairns of Jersey City, is visiting with Mr. John C. Perkins and family.

[illegible] has leased the Dr. Arms house opposite the green at Norwich Town.

A first-class caterer will serve refreshments at the picnic today in Hall's grove, [illegible].

James G. Blaine is the guest of Col. A. G. Tyler at the latter's pleasant villa on Pequot avenue.

Walter A. Ingalls and wife left for Scranton, Pa., last night to spend a few days with their friends.

The Block Island carried a fair-sized party to Block Island yesterday and had a very smooth passage.

Mr. Frank Clark and family of Center street are occupying a cottage at Westbrook for the season.

Take the steamer Ella to Watch Hill this morning and get a Rhode Island clambake and shore dinner.

The second annual athletic games of the Sunnyside Amusement club will be held in Sunnyside grove this afternoon.

The Block Island will leave at 8.15 sharp this morning for Block Island and intermediate landings at a reduced rate.

The wire which is to be laid across the Laurel Hill bridge, before the cement is placed on the electric car track arrived yesterday.

Joseph P. Scally, who graduated from the Snell Business college on Thursday last, has taken a position in the store of Hendricks & Kelley.

Robert J. Cook, Yale's great aquatic mentor, will spend the glorious Fourth with his family who are domiciled at the Fort Griswold house for the summer.

Upon the entry list for the bicycle races in Hartford today are the names of W. C. Seager, E. A. Nelson, George C. Smith and Hoyland Smith, all crack wheelmen.

The young ladies stopping at both the Pequot and Fort Griswold houses are on the qui vive of excitement over the anticipated arrival of several of the Russian squadron in these waters the latter part of the month.

The rush of visitors to the Pequot and Fort Griswold houses still continues. Nearly all the cottages that cluster around these popular resorts on both sides of the river have already been leased for the season.

Miss Mattie Jenks of this city has been reappointed teacher in the Chandler street school, Concord, New Hampshire. Miss Jenks will spend her vacation in Mystic and at her home on Laurel Hill avenue.

George Campbell, for about three years a resident of Norwich Town, but who recently removed to Ware, Mass., is spending a day or two at his old home. Mr. Campbell has been well known as an amateur boxer.

The steamer City of Richmond will make an excursion to Rocky Point at 8 a. m. today. Good music for concert and dancing will be furnished by Prof. Jarvis' Military band. Prof. McIntyre will prompt.

Mr. Frank P. Bent of Alling Brothers with John T. Wetherbee of the Boston & Norwich Clothing company left Monday evening for New York where they will start for Chicago today and there take in the sights of the World's fair for the next few weeks.

Miss Alice L. Thomas and Miss Josie H. Palmer of this city left town Monday for a week's vacation in Worcester, Mass. While there they will be the guests of Miss Thomas' sister, Mrs. H. A. Kendricks, Hotel Parker. On their return they will visit Boston and Nantasket Beach.

At a regular meeting of the Norwich Association of Stationary Engineers held July 1, the following officers were elected: President, A. H. Breed; vice-president, G. H. Bennett; secretary and treasurer, C. F. Moore; conductor, [illegible] C. Culver; doorkeeper, F. L. Moore; trustees, M. A. Barbour, A. H. Breed.

The Fourth will be celebrated today at the ball grounds under the auspices of St. Mary's T. A. and B. society. A grand programme of field day sports, dancing, target shooting, tug-of-war and other amusements has been arranged. Music by Yeager's orchestra. Prof. Kirby, prompter. Special music for breakdown dancing.

Miss Alice J. Buckley, who graduated in the stenographic course at the New London Business college on Thursday evening and who has received the honor of salutatorian, belongs in Norwich. Miss Buckley's sister graduated in the honor division at the Free Academy last week, receiving honorable mention in French and taking the medals in science and [illegible].

Richard Mansfield's new yacht Royal Highness is hauled out on the ways at East New London to receive the final touches before going into commission. Her sails have been bent and the interior will be finished today. Charles Ferguson of Groton will command the new yacht when she goes into commission. She will carry a crew of five men.

In State Secretary Hine's annual report Norwich is credited with 166 children employed in cotton and 13 in woolen industries. In the former their average weekly wages are $4 and in the latter $4.50. Throughout the state wages in the cotton industries range from $3 in Stonington to $4.00 in Windsor Locks, while in woolen Greenwich pays the lowest, $3.75, and Norwalk and Preston the highest, $5.

It is estimated that over 30,000 people viewed the oarie struggle between Yale and Harvard. In addition to thousands brought by railroads, there were over a dozen big excursion steamers, besides the hundreds of yachting parties. While those who came to see the race were pleased to have it rowed in the morning, New London merchants find fault because the crowd got away from the city so early that they were not benefited materially.

The Post Office Today.

Post office hours today will be as follows:

Open from 7 to 9 a. m., 11.30 a. m. to 12.30 p. m., and from 4 to 4.30 p. m. Money order window will be closed all day.

Carriers' window will be open from 11.30 a. m. to 12.30 p. m., and 4 to 4.30 p. m. Carriers will make the regular morning trip only. Last collection from street letter boxes will be made at 5 p. m. All evening mails will close at 6 p. m.

City Court—Kellogg Judge.

The following cases occupied the attention of the city court Monday morning:

William Kilroy of Norwich Town, breach of peace, continued; $10 and costs, $23.[illegible]. Appealed.

Samuel Dobson, drunkenness, $2 and costs, $10.20. Paid.

Patrick McMahon, drunk, $3 and costs, $9.12. Paid.

Robert Bloomfield, similar offence, $3 and costs, $9.93. Paid.

Wm. H. Frisbie of Greeneville, drunk, $5 and costs, $13.40.

Thomas Murphy and Thomas O'Brien were charged with drunkenness. The men became involved in a fight in Greeneville Sunday night, and Officer Young put them in the cooler. Their cases were continued until July 6.

A Few Norwich Needs.

An electric arc light over the center of the new Laurel Hill bridge.

A small excursion boat to run twenty times a day to some quiet pic-nicking ground on the banks of the Thames.

A place for basket picnics somewhere on the line of the electric railway.

Permanently constructed main roads through the town.

Generous street improvements around the Backus hospital grounds to compare with the lay-out of that grand public institution.

A public park of seventy five or one hundred acres accessible by street cars.

Better tenements at reasonable rents for working men.

And a public bathing house for the boys, to keep abreast of the times and in step with other cities of her size.

[illegible] capitalists to think and to do for "The Rose of New England."

COMMON COUNCIL MEETING.

The Street Railway Extension Authorized — Supernumerary [illegible] Appointed to the Police Force—Other Officers Elected.

The July meeting of the court of common council Monday evening was one of the longest on record, consuming over two hours. There was a full attendance of aldermen and councilmen.

Mayor Harwood rapped for order at 8.[illegible] o'clock, and opened the meeting by presenting a petition appealing from the report of the street committee ordering a concrete walk on both sides of Ward street from Mt. Pleasant street to Hill's avenue, claiming that there was no necessity for the walk, and that public convenience was satisfied at present.

George H. Pratt appeared in opposition to the report, Manuel Field argued in its support, and several residents of the street made rambling remarks about snow, muddy streets, crosswalks and their opponents' shortcomings.

Alderman Aborn defended the report, and the council ratified it unanimously.

Alderman Aborn then presented the report of the committee to whom was referred the petition of the Norwich Street Railway company to extend its track, introducing a resolution which accepted the plans proposed, except that that portion extending from 180 feet south of the junction of High with West Thames street to 380 feet north was reserved for future consideration. The company, Mr. Aborn said, had acted for the best interests of the city, and had made all the changes asked at the last meeting by remonstrants.

Clerk Spalding read a communication from President Cogswell of the road, giving as the principal reasons for declining to change the proposed terminus at Dunham street, that it would make the schedule time inoperative, because cars stop 100 or 200 feet from Shipping street, which will contribute the only material patronage to the road, and because if factories be established at the extreme boundary line at Thamesville, they would be as near the street railway tracks as the mills at the Falls, Greeneville or the average tenement house to Taftville.

The report was put to vote and accepted unanimously and the resolutions accompanying were adopted.

The [illegible] ordinance referred from last meeting was adopted on motion of Alderman Palmer.

Alderman Palmer of the fire and street committee reported that it had been deemed best to allow the Young Men's Christian association to move the lately acquired Union Square hotel up Chestnut street to the Ripley lot on Franklin street, allowing a fortnight for each of two sections to be en route, providing neither stand on Broadway over forty-eight hours and that the work be finished in sixty days. A bond of $10,000 was demanded to guard against the possibility of injury to city property. The report was accepted after explanatory remarks by Alderman Aborn and Corporation Counsel Brown.

The quarterly report of Chief of Police Bowen was presented and accepted, as was the June report of the street department and the yearly statement of Yantic cemetery finances, which showed receipts of over $5,000. The annual report of Chief Engineer Greenberg was read and accepted, and Mayor Harwood paid a high tribute to the department.

The fire committee reported favorably on the building petitions of Gustave Geduldig, A. Tilden, Joseph Burdick, Mrs. C. M. Gardiner and Herman Wlsky.

The street committee reported favorably on the petition for a water fountain on Washington square.

Lina G. Howard petitioned to build a sewer on Fairmount street, and the street committee reported favorably.

The petition of F. A. Bill to improve his property on River avenue was referred to the street committee, as was also a petition for a crosswalk from the court house to the catch basin in front of the residence of N. S. Gilbert.

A petition signed by Costello Lippitt, H. H. Osgood and forty others requested the appointment of H. B. Lewis to a place on the regular police force. Referred to the police commissioners.

The trustees of the Otis library proposed to transfer a strip of property on the easterly side of the annex, to the city, provided the city would rebuild the wall and coping. Referred to the street committee.

On motion of Alderman Palmer the following officers were then elected and appointed:

Special Constables—John M. Newton, Benj. Cross, Rufus W. Marshall, Charles E. Whitaker, George E. Waters, C. C. Williams, E. A. Roath, Charles F. Twist, Wm. Burnett, Alex Carrington, Wm. F. Hill, Charles J. King, Rufus C. Sherman, James W. Crosnis, Thomas Slattery, George W. Parsons, John Harrigan, Charles H. Miner, Sr., Louis W. Greenberg, Wm. J. Nelson, George W. Dennison, George W. Swan, Joseph Ashwell.

Weighers—W. K. Hubbard, J. D. Brewster, E. A. Roath, Alvah Francis, John A. Morgan, A. H. Brewer, J. H. Powelson, C. J. King, Chas. B. Lee, A. L. Potter, E. D. Fuller, Wm. Palmer, H. A. Bingham, A. P. Carroll, Elijah D. Harris, A. S. Spalding, C. M. Converse.

Measurers—Nathan Small, E. A. Roath, Alvah Francis, E. D. Harris, J. P. Barstow, N. A. Bingham, J. F. Tompkins.

Inspectors of Lumber and Timber—E. F. Chapman, J. A. Morgan, A. L. Potter.

Inspector of Charcoal—J. A. Bowen.

Haywards—C. R. Park, George E. Waters, Benj. Cross, Chas. H. Miner, Sr.

Committee on Compensation—Wm. H. Jennings, James A. Brown, John Steiner.

Health Committee—C. E. Stark, M. D., John A. Bowen, George Linton.

Alderman Perkins of the police commissioners moved that Supernumerary John Royston be advanced to the position of regular policeman.

Councilman Whitaker offered a motion that Supernumerary Dennis J. Toomey, be placed on the force.

Councilman George spoke in favor of the appointment of Mr. Toomey, entirely on the ground of age and physical development.

Alderman Perkins said that the position morally belonged to Mr. Royston, whose three years' service had been faithful and efficient. The citizens of Thamesville, where the new officer will be stationed, favored his cause.

Alderman Aborn thought the right of seniority subordinate to the other requisites for the place.

The vote by ballot developed seven ballots for Mr. Toomey against five for Mr. Royston. On motion of Councilman Henderson the nomination was made unanimous.

An appropriation of [illegible] was made to the board of Water [illegible] to cover bills presented. An appropriation of $1,316.35 was made to [illegible] rendered by the street [illegible] for work done during the month of June. After money had been appropriated for a large number of bills, the council adjourned.

Delegates to the National Conference.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Second Congregational church Christian Endeavor society, held Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Allen, Miss Ida R. Sutherland, and Miss M. Louise Sturtevant were elected society delegates to the national Christian Endeavor conference, which will be held in Montreal July 5-9.

Military Standing for the Season.

Orders issued from the adjutant-general's office contain the figures of merit of each organization of Connecticut National Guard for the work during the drill season just ended. The Second regiment leads with 97.61, and the First regiment is second with 94.58. The Fourth regiment has 91.79 to its credit and the Third regiment 89.02. In the First regiment, Company C of Rockville has the highest standing of 100.

The commandant of the First Machine-Gun section is authorized to enlist two additional men, and the captain commanding the Machine-Gun battery is authorized to appoint from said section a trumpeter, and to nominate from said section a first sergeant. Ordway's Cycle Infantry Drill Regulations will be adopted by the Brigade Signal corps. The commandant of the corps is authorized, subject to approval, to make such changes in the drill as are necessary to make them conform to the formation of the corps. Gallup's Handbook of Military Signaling is adopted as authority. Commandants of brigade signal sections will make requisitions for ten copies each.

BETTER NEXT YEAR.

More Leeway Should be Allowed Passengers on Boat Race Days.

The New London Day says: When the time tables are arranged for the boat race next year the New York, New Haven & Hartford road will need to allow more leeway in order that passengers shall have time to transfer to the observation train and the New London Northern people be given a chance to couple the several divisions of the train and get under way for the race.

On Friday the trains were late, and though Superintendent Mackenzie endeavored to have the race postponed 15 or 20 minutes, Referee Rives was inexorable and in consequence those on the observation train missed the best part of the race, [illegible] first mile. Superintendent Mackenzie telephoned the [illegible] to Gales Ferry, the probability that [illegible] people who had come from long distances to see the race were liable to disappointment, but nothing could be done to hold the race. There is, of course, the chance of detention to be considered and therefore the railroad people ought to time the arrival of the last train to allow for detention.

It was a sore disappointment to the occupants of the forty cars and the railway management was enthusiastic in great shape.

Although whales grow to enormous size, sometimes 80 and even 90 feet long, the throat of the common whale is so small that it cannot swallow a bite as large as a tea biscuit. The spermaceti has a mouth large enough to swallow a man.

FOURTH OF JULY SPORTS.

The Way Uncle Sam Celebrated His 117th Birthday.

ROSELAND PARK EXERCISES.

Regatta at Lake Quinsigamond—Bicycle Road Races, Etc.

WOODSTOCK, Conn., July 4.—The distinguished guests who were to participate in the exercises at Roseland park arrived Monday on a special train from New York, and were conveyed to Roseland cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen held their annual reception from 9 to 11 p. m. The host and hostess were assisted in receiving the guests by the Hon. Seth Low, president of Columbia college, and his wife, Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court, the Rev. Dr. McArthur and wife of New York city, Maurice Thompson, the poet of Crawfordsville, Ind.; Senator J. R. Hawley and wife of Hartford, and F. E. Murphy, the temperance advocate, and his wife.

The weather was bright and delightful and the forenoon exercises commenced promptly at 10 o'clock.

The large crowd applauded when the Hon. Charles A. Russell appeared to deliver the "Address of Welcome." Grand concerts were given day and evening by the Music Block orchestra. Following is the forenoon programme:

Address of welcome by the Hon. Chas. A. Russell, M. C.

Address, as president of the day, by President Seth Low of Columbia college, New York.

"America," vocal and instrumental music.

Prayer by William H. Ward, D. D., New York.

Address, "Individual Liberty," by Justice David J. Brewer, United States supreme court, Washington, D. C.

Poem, "Bloom of the World," by Mr Maurice Thompson, Crawfordsville, Ind.

Address, "Books and Libraries," by the Hon. A. R. Spofford, librarian of congress, Washington, D. C.

Music, "Rally Round the Flag, Boys," vocal and instrumental.

Senator Hawley and others then addressed the audience.

The morning session closed at 12.30, and the speakers and invited guests were served with a lunch on the piazza of the boat house.

At 2 o'clock the afternoon exercises opened by the Rev. R. S. McCarthy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of New York, speaking on "American patriotism, the dangers it encounters and the duties it enjoins." He said the American who does not love America was not worthy the name of an American citizen. His heart should glow with the memory of Concord and Lexington. Among the dangers to American patriotism is the indifference to political duty on the part of men of [illegible] and influence. The worst [illegible] [illegible] to vote.

Another danger to American patriotism is [illegible]. To foreign immigration is due the greater part of the illiteracy of our time. [illegible] not [illegible] the [illegible] to the people, but to all [illegible] to become Americans. [illegible] and criminals must be excluded. [illegible] by [illegible] the [illegible] and power of [illegible] political bosses and the influence of political [illegible].

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe of Boston, read a poem written especially for the occasion, entitled "Our National Holiday." At the conclusion of the reading President Low called upon General Hawley to read Mrs. Howe's poem, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," before doing which the general thanked Mrs. Howe for the inspiration that the poem had been to himself and thousands of soldiers on the battlefield.

Ex Secretary [illegible] was to have been the next speaker but was not able to be present. In his stead Mr. Clarence W. Bowen gave an account of a trip to Spain in the spring of 1888, in the interest of the celebration of Columbian year, and his reception by royalty.

Miss Edith E. Thomas of New London read "A Vision of Brave Men."

The last speaker of the day was Mr. T. E. Murphy, who spoke of temperance, giving a bright forcible talk, full of anecdote and witticism. He advised his hearers not to look to the legislatures or the laws for the abolishing of the liquor traffic, but instead give them a remedy, which he would guarantee would stop the business and that was to prohibit liquor from entering the hole between their nose and chin.

The literary exercises closed with the singing of "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

The evening was devoted to orchestral concerts and fireworks.

THE FOURTH AT BOSTON.

Entertainment for Everybody—The City Very Noisy and Lively.

BOSTON, July 4.—A better day than this could not easily have been made, and it has been appreciated by the thousands who have enjoyed the Fourth of July programme provided for their entertainment by the city authorities and by private enterprise. The usual formalities of ringing bells, firing salutes, etc., were observed.

At 9 o'clock the parade in Charlestown that had been postponed from June 14 on account of rain was moved out. It was the best ever seen in that place.

The other features of the day were bicycle races at Franklin park, rowing races on Charles river, sailing regatta off City Point, band concerts in various sections of the city morning and evening, an oration in Boston theater by Henry W. Putnam and the reading of the declaration of independence, batting games, veteran firemen's playout, lacrosse games, children's entertainments and various other events. The rowing regatta on the Charles was an attraction to thousands who were lined up on the river bank and the new Harvard bridge.

There was a display of fireworks on the common this evening witnessed by an immense crowd. The city has been livelier and noisier today than for many years, on the Fourth.

REGATTA AT WORCESTER.

30,000 People Witness the Races on Lake Quinsigamond.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 4.—The annual regatta of the New England Amateur Rowing association, held this year on Lake Quinsigamond, was one of the most notable aquatic events that ever took place in this country. Eleven closely contested races were rowed over the old college course, north of the Causeway. They were witnessed by the biggest crowd of spectators that ever gathered at the lake. Conservative judges place the number of people at 20,000 and some estimate it as high as 30,000. The water was as smooth as glass and a graceful breeze blew across the lake. John A. St. John of St. Louis was referee and Walter A. [illegible] president of the New England [illegible] was starter. The whole programme was completed inside of five hours.

The Atalantas of New York carried off most of the honors of the day. They won the senior eight easily, defeating four crack New England crews, while the junior eight got first [illegible] by three feet from the Wachusetts. [illegible] Donegan, the single sculler of the Atalantas would doubtless have won in his event but he unfortunately mistook the stake-boat and turned at the half-mile boat.

The most interesting contests of the day outside of the magnificent eight-oared events were the four-oared senior shell and the four-oared working boat race. In the former two rival Boston crews, the Bradfords of Cambridge, and the Riversides [illegible], the Bradfords winning by a short length. In the working boat race the Worcester crew won by three lengths.

The following summary gives the position of the contestants at the end of each race:

Single canoe race, one mile with a turn, won by Clarence Bacon, Springfield Boat club, Springfield, Mass.; David Buttrick, Arlington Boat club, Arlington, second.

Four-oared shells junior, one and a half miles with turn, won by Boston Athletic association; Arlington Boat club, second; Riverside Boat club, third. Time, 9.30.

Single scull junior, one and a half miles with a turn, won by Joseph J. Whitehead, Columbian Rowing association; Albert W. Bamey, Pawtucket Boat club, second; Harry B. Goodell, Lakeside Boat club, Worcester, third. Time, 10.17 1-2.

Double sculls junior, won by Boston Athletic association; Union Boat club, second; Riverside, third. Time, 9.45.

Four-oared shells, senior, one and a half miles, with a turn, won by Bradford boat club of Cambridge, Riverside boat club second. Time, 9.[illegible]

Four-oared working boat, senior, one and a half miles, with turn, won by Worcester boat club, Neponset boat club of Neponset second. Time, 9.44.

Junior eight oared shell, one and a half miles, straight away, won by Atalanta boat club of New York, Wachusett boat club of Worcester second, Riverside boat club third, Worcester boat club fourth. Time, 8.30.

Four-oared working boat, junior, one and a half miles, one turn, won by Wesleyan boat club, Riverside boat club second. Time, 9.30.

Eight-oared shell, senior, one and a half miles, straight away, won by Atalanta boat club New York; Columbian Rowing association of Boston second, Bradford boat club third, Crescent boat club of Boston fourth. Time, 7.57½.

The citizens committee tendered a complimentary banquet to the regatta officials.

New York Cycling Association.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The second day of the inaugural races of the N. Y. Cycling association, held under the rules of the National Cycling association of America, drew a crowd of nearly four thousand persons. H. C. Wheeler won first prize in each of three big events and received $735 of the $1,600 given out in prizes. H. S. Crocker of Newton, Mass., during the first heat of the half mile race got an ugly fall, but was all right in the second heat.

Summary:

One mile—A. S. Mims won, C. W. Dorntge, second. Time, 2.44.

Half mile race—H. C. Wheeler, first; Barle, second; W. A. Rowe, third. Time, 1.09 4-5.

The great Fourth of July handicap, one mile, purse $1,000, divided—H. C. Wheeler, scratch, won; P. J. Barle (40 yards), second; J. A. Woodhouse (60 yards), third. Time, 2.25 1-5.

Ten mile race—H. C. Wheeler won; H. J. Barle, second; C. E. Kluge, third. Time, 26.15 1-5.

People's Regatta on the Schuylkill.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—The trial heats of the people's regatta on the Schuylkill river took place this morning. [illegible] thousand people saw [illegible] noon. The course was one and a half miles, and every condition was favorable. In the four-oared shell race, half a mile from the start the [illegible] boat club of Chicago was [illegible] by a barge. The shell was demolished and the oarsmen were pitched out of the boat but none were hurt. The event was declared no race and will be rowed over tomorrow.

In the pair oared shell race the West Philadelphia club fouled the Vesper Boat club and the latter shell was upset. The race was taken over.

A SUCCESSFUL PICNIC.

St. Mary's T. A. & B. Society Celebrate the Fourth.

St. Mary's T. A. & B. society commemorated the nation's birthday by a picnic held on the Greeneville base ball grounds Tuesday afternoon and night. The spot was well patronized during the day, and those who tended the refreshment tables had no cause to complain. An awning was spread for the dancers, and was sought especially during the latter part of the day.

At 2.45 the athletic sports were called. The games were decided as follows:

100 yards run, H. D. Armstrong, scratch, first, time, 11 seconds.

Running broad jump—J. Daley, 2 feet, first, distance, 17 feet 6½ inches; J. Downes, 6 inches, 16 feet 6 inches.

440 yards run—H. D. Armstrong, scratch, first, time 1.10; T. Brady, 10 yards, second; J. Hagerty, 10 yards, third.

Potato race—J. Downes first.

Putting 16-lb. shot—W. Ryan, 4 feet, first, 32 feet 10 inches; Barry, 4 feet, 31 feet 6 inches; T. Brady, scratch, 31 feet 5 inches.

Hop, step and jump—J. Hagerty, 39 feet 2½ inches; T. Brady, 38 feet 11 inches; C. J. Downes, 36 feet 10 inches.

880 yards run—J. Hagerty, scratch; time 2.38.

The tug-of-war between teams of five chosen from St. Mary's T. A. & B. society and the Ancient Order of Hibernians for a silver pitcher, proved a very exciting contest. The former team had the heavier men, but their opponents were game to the end and were defeated only after a hard struggle, by five inches. When the result was announced the winning team was loudly cheered.

Owing to the poor track the time made in the races was slow. In the dash, Armstrong fell into a rut near the finish and sprained his ankle, but ran later in the quarter mile. The high kicking contest did not fill and was omitted from the programme.

Herbert D. Armstrong of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. won his fifth medal of the season.

Silver medals were given to first and bronze to second men.

Following were the officers of the day:
Referee—Frank Murtha.
Judges—John J. Corkery, Edward T. Burke.
Clerk of Course—John M. Lee.
Handicapper—Frank Murtha.
Starter—Edward F. McMahon.

WILLIMANTIC.

How the Day Was Celebrated in the Thread City.

The Fourth in Willimantic this year was celebrated in an old-fashioned manner, and by night-fall everybody was completely tired out. The idea of holding a celebration a little out of the ordinary, sprung up in the minds of some of the members of the Thread City cyclers, and about two weeks ago the club voted to hold a parade and other attractions in addition to the meeting of the E. C. C. association at the fair grounds on that day. They were ably assisted, financially, by a number of our citizens, which, of course, went a good long ways in helping the project along. Committees were at work all night long getting things in readiness, and the advent of the Fourth was announced at 5 a. m. by the ringing of all the bells in the city for half an hour. At 9 o'clock they were again rung, and by that time hundreds of strangers had arrived.

The paraders commenced to fall into line [illegible] and moved over a long line of march [illegible] 11 o'clock. As the [illegible] there [illegible] to [illegible] the crowd [illegible] by the good-natured way in which they were received. [illegible] the Thread City [illegible], Thread City drum corps and Nathan Hale drum corps of South Coventry. Numerous teams bearing cages of roaming wild animals captured in the wilds of Cherry Valley and Hop River, were pleasing features as were the takeoffs on the Natchaug school steps and other local hits.

The parade was dismissed at 11.30 and at 1 o'clock p. m., the crowd wended their way to the fair grounds to witness the racing events of the E. C. C. association.

There were ten races in all, the summary of which is as follows:

First race—Novice, open. H. Schulz, Hartford, first; F. C. Smith, Rockville, second; F. B. Clark, Hartford, third. Prizes, easy chair, horse blanket, revolver. Time, 2.45¾.

Second race, one mile—Scratch, open. R. M. Alexander, Hartford, first; S. E. Hapelvan, Willimantic, second; W. P. Jordan, Willimantic, third. Prizes, diamond stud, dress suit case, patent leather shoes. Time, 2.45¾.

Third race, half mile—Handicap, E. C. C. C. D. H. Baker, first; I. A. Bissell, second; W. P. Jordan, third. Prizes, cyclometer, sweater, bicycle shoes. Time, 1.20¾.

Fourth race, one mile—Team race, E. C. C. club. Rockville, 19 points; Willimantic, 11 points; Norwich, 6 points. Time, 2.43¾.

Fifth race, one mile open, 3 minute class—R. M. Alexander, Hartford, first; F. S. Hudson, Hartford, second; Wm. E. Steele, Hartford, third. Prizes, gold watch, opera glasses, box cigars. Time, 2.46¾.

Sixth race, one-half mile handicap, E. C. C. C.—F. S. Snow, scratch, Rockville, first; H. C. Kite, Rockville, second; D. H. Baker, Willimantic, third. Prizes, gold-headed ebony cane, silk umbrella, toilet roll. Time, 1.13.

Seventh race, one mile, 3 [illegible] class, handicap—Wm. L. Jordan, first; P. E. May, second; F. H. Bissell, third. Prizes, bicycle suit, dozen photographs, bicycle bell. Time, 3.15.

Eighth race, one mile handicap, E. C. C. C.—G. E. Hinman, Willimantic, first; H. C. Kite, Rockville, second; W. Burnham, third. Prizes, diamond stud, mantel clock, shirt buttons. Time, 2.[illegible]

Ninth race—Half mile special (local) scratch to 3 minutes: I. A. Bissell, 1st; H. E. O'Neil, 2d; F. H. Bissell, 3d; T. F. O'Laughlin, 4th. Time, 3.04¾.

Tenth and last race—1 mile championship E. C. C. club: F. J. Snow, Rockville, 1st; G. E. Hinman, Willimantic, 2d; W. P. Jordan, Willimantic, 3d. Prizes, medal $40, medal $20, medal $10.

The day's celebration closed by an elaborate display of fireworks in front of the T. C. C. quarters at 8.30 p. m.

STATUE OF P. T. BARNUM.

A Throng of 11,000 People at the Unveiling Ceremonies.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 4.—The P. T. Barnum statue at Seaside park was unveiled this afternoon before a throng of fully 11,000 people, including many visitors from other cities. The ceremony connected with the event, while not grand was imposing, owing largely to its simplicity. There was a large street parade, composed of military and civic societies. All local camps of national guards turned out.

When the procession arrived at the park, the presentation of the statue to the city was made by an ex-mayor and accepted by Mayor Bostwick. Rev. Robert Collyer, D. D., of New York and Hon. William H. Hurd of Brooklyn, both former friends of the late P. T. Barnum, made addresses.

The statue was unveiled by Nancy Barnum Leigh, grand-daughter of the late showman. The statue is located on a prominent spot, between Marina, the home of Mrs. Barnum, and the Sound. It is the work of Ball, the famous sculptor, and represents the great showman sitting in an easy chair, with his arms resting lightly on the arms of the chair. It is of bronze and eight feet in height. The pedestal is of granite. Newspaper men from all parts of the state and a number from New York were here upon invitation of James A. Bailey and were given a banquet at Pleasant beach, after the parade. Mrs. Barnum was not present at the exercises, having recently gone to Europe for the benefit of her health.

A Quiet Day at Springfield, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 4.—The Fourth was rather quiet today. There was an old-fashioned observance in City hall, where the Declaration of Independence was read and addresses were made by Congressman Gillett, Mayor [illegible], the Rev. Dr. Buckham and City Marshal Rice. Picnics were held by the Y. M. C. A. at the Riverside with an address by the Rev. D. H. Dexter, the cathedral cemetery, in Warner's grove.

Handicap Bicycle Road Race.

CINCINNATI, July 4.—The [illegible] 18 mile handicap bicycle road race was won today by Charles H. Peck of [illegible], who entered the race with a four and a half minute handicap. Time 40 minutes, [illegible] seconds. Coupdick of Islington, Ky., despite a handicap of eight minutes came in second, ten feet behind the winner and made three and one-minute better time than Peck. S. A. McDuffee was third.

300,000 Visitors in Chicago on the Fourth.

CHICAGO, July 4.—The city was crowded with visitors today, rates being reduced on all roads running into Chicago. It is estimated 300,000 visitors were in the city. The American flag was everywhere, and everybody seemed to enter heartily into the spirit of the day.

The President Has Not Yet Arrived.

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass., July 4.—At 7 o'clock tonight the president had not arrived at Gray Gables. His [illegible] is [illegible].

Incendiary Fires at Webster.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 4.—Fires, thought to be of incendiary origin, badly damaged the National Bank block and totally destroyed the A. C. Barnett steam saw mill, both in Webster, about 2.30 o'clock this morning. The losses at the Bank block fire were E. F. Larned, retail boots and shoes, $3,500; Larned, Barnes & Son, dealers in paints and oils, $8,000; W. F. Branch, newsdealer, $2,500. All the losers were fully insured. The loss on the building was $7,000; also insured. The loss on the saw mill, which was total, uninsured, was $8,000.

Escaped Prisoner Recaptured.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., July 4.—Patrick Carey, a notorious young Tolland county lad was captured in Belpoin grove this afternoon by Sheriff Hibbs and Deputy Sheriff Eaton. Carey and a friend resisted the officers in a desperate manner. Carey escaped from Tolland county jail over a year ago.

Electric Cars Running in Norwalk.

NORWALK, Conn., July 4.—Thousands of people patronized the tramway electric road which commenced running cars today. About four miles of track are in operation and the road will be rapidly pushed to near by towns. The company is using large observation cars and they promise to give good satisfaction.

American Bi-Metallic League.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—A. J. Warner, president of the American bi-metallic league, has issued a call for a national convention of the league to be held in Chicago beginning August 1, next.

130 MEN ENTOMBED.

Terrible Explosion in a Yorkshire, Eng., Colliery.

RESCUERS AT WORK.

Heartrending Scenes at the Mouth of the Fatal Pit.

THORNE HILL, Yorkshire, Eng., July 4.—A terrible explosion occurred in Ingham's colliery this morning and 130 men are believed to be entombed. Rescuing parties are hard at work.

The day shift went to work as usual early this morning. The ventilation was reported good. All went well until noon, when the workers at the pit-mouth were startled by a muffled explosion and by clouds of dense smoke rolling up the main shaft. They tried to communicate with the working but found that the interior had been cut off from the shaft. The pit managers organized an exploring party and descended slowly through the smoke. They were driven back repeatedly and eventually gave up their purpose of penetrating to the working before the foul gas should be cleared away.

After taking up the bodies found at the bottom of the shaft, the rescue party waited for several hours before making another descent. About the middle of the evening they went down again. The gas had cleared off near the shaft and they were able to examine part of the working. The bodies of the miners lay in heaps. Many were sent to the surface. Unremitting efforts are being made to reach the few miners who may be alive. About one hundred and ten are supposed to have been killed.

The relatives and friends of the entombed miners gathered at the pit mouth soon after the explosion, and harrowing scenes were witnessed.

Meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati in Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 4.—The annual meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati in Connecticut, was held here at noon today, the president, General Dwight Morris, in the chair. Four candidates were admitted to membership and the claims of several applicants considered. The following officers were elected: President, General Dwight Morris, Bridgeport; vice-president, Charles H. Murray of New York, treasurer, Nathan Pond of Milford; secretary, A. W. Morris of Wilton; assistant secretary, W. I. Judd of New Britain; chaplain, the Rev A. N. Lewis of Montpelier, Vt., and historian, and keeper of archives. A banquet was held after the business meeting.

WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

Unveiling of a Bronze Statue to His Memory—Imposing Parade.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., July 4.—The bronze statue of William Lloyd Garrison, presented to the city by William H. Swasey, was unveiled today, as a prominent feature of the observance of Independence day.

There was a large influx of visitors this morning, including many colored organizations from out of town and together with the local militia, G. A. R., and other organizations had an imposing parade in the forenoon.

Immediately after the parade the ceremonies of the unveiling took place on Brown's square.

Mayor Gurney, as president of the day, opened the exercises and Rev. J. W. Dodge offered prayer.

The Declaration of Independence was read by E. C. Adams, after which a chorus sang "Keller's American Hymn." The Rev. [illegible], on behalf of the donor, presented the statue to the city, and at the conclusion of his remarks the American flag which [illegible] was lifted from the statue, and Garrison in bronze was unveiled amid [illegible] applause. Mayor Gurney accepted the gift on behalf of the city.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

Women Empowered to Vote.

One of the last bills passed by the legislature was one allowing women to vote in school district meetings. Every woman who shall have attained the age of 21 years, who shall be a citizen of this state, or of the United States, and who shall have resided in the state one year, and in the town six months, and can read the English language, shall have the right to vote at any meeting held for the purpose of choosing any officer of schools or for any educational purpose under the general or special laws of this state.

Mr. Merrill in Charge.

The newly established State Normal school at New Haven will positively open in September. Mr. Merrill, the present principal of the Willimantic Normal school, has been sent there by the state board of education to take charge of the school. It will be conducted temporarily at the Skinner school. Where the school will be permanently located is uncertain. It is thought that the present high school may be used or a new building may be erected on a site for which $30,000 was appropriated at the last district meeting.

A FINE SOUND STEAMER.

The City of Lowell a Splendid Specimen of Marine Architecture.

The new steel twin screw Norwich Line steamer City of Lowell is now in frame at the Bath Iron works, Bath, Me., from designs by A. Cary Smith of New York. The boat shows that the line is alive to the exigencies of the times. The City of Lowell is of 280 feet water line, and 306 feet on deck, 48-49 feet beam at the water line and will draw loaded 12 feet. Below the main deck will be the accommodations for the crew.

The main deck with the exception of a small ladies' saloon aft, will be given up to freight which will be handled from two gangways. The next deck will be given up to staterooms and there will be a passage way outside, all around. Some of the rooms will open into each other so that families can be accommodated and good ventilation secured. On the next deck is situated the dining room, galley, officers' quarters and at the after part of the boat will be staterooms. The boat will be fitted in the most modern and palatial manner.

On the galley deck will be the dining room. This will be forward. Aft of the dining room on the port side will be the smoking room. On the starboard side will be the pantry and galley. Aft of the galley will be the officers' quarters, which will be reached from the main deck by a private stairway. Aft of the officers' quarters will be a stateroom hall with a large opening overhead in the deck for light and air.

The steamer will be driven by two triple expansion engines with 28, 40 and 60-inch cylinders, and thirty-six inches stroke. The boilers will be six in number and are expected to develop 4,500 horse power. That she will be a "hummer" in sound travel there is no doubt and it is confidently believed she will outstrip anything on the sound. She will be ready in November.

TOWNE WAS A FRAUD.

An Impostor Collecting Money for the Whipple School at Mystic.

The discovery has been made in New Haven that "Mr. Towne," who represented himself to be connected with the Whipple School for Deaf and Dumb at Mystic, and who has been collecting funds for that institution, is a fraud. During the past few weeks he has visited a number of prominent people in that city and obtained handsome contributions from a number of them. A short time ago he called on S. H. Barnum among others and received a donation from him. He repeated his call a few days ago and asked for another contribution.

Mr. Barnum's suspicions were aroused and he wrote to the superintendent of the school about the man. Then he learned that he is a fraud and is not authorized to collect any money for the school. Towne was accompanied by a deaf mute whom he said was an inmate of the school.

ASHWILLET POST OFFICE.

Dissatisfaction Over the Change of Postmaster and Location.

The people of Ashwillet, in the town of North Stonington, are greatly dissatisfied over the changes made in their post office. S. P. Eggleston, the old postmaster, had held the position since the office was established. The office was in the center of the town, near the stores, blacksmith shop and church. It was the unanimous wish of all the people who received mail at the office that he be continued in office, and a petition signed by eighty-seven people who received mail was sent to Washington asking that Mr. Eggleston be retained. E. C. Eccleston of that town, a democrat, aspired to be a postmaster. He got out a petition and some of the people in Ashwillet say that it does not bear the name of a person who receives mail at the Ashwillet office. Mr. Eccleston sent his petition to Washington and has received his appointment as postmaster. He will remove the office from its present location one and a half miles on a country back road and have the office in his house. The people don't care to have their mail come there, as it is so far from the center of the town, and but one of the eighty-seven who signed the petition for Mr. Eggleston will be patrons of the office. These make nearly the entire population of that section of the town.

THE REVENUE COLLECTORSHIP.

Said That the Norwich Candidate is Out of the Race.

The appointment of John G. Byxbee to be United States revenue collector for the district of Rhode Island and Connecticut, was expected before this, but as it has not been made it is all probability the protest of Congressman Pigott is having some effect.

Mr. Byxbee made an early and thorough canvass of the ground, obtaining the support of Clinton B. Davis, chairman of the democratic state central committee, and Congressman Cadee French.

But just as he had when laid ready for work, and appeared to be successful, Congressman Pigott comes to the front, backed by Congressman Sperry of Hartford, with a protest against the appointment of Mr. Byxbee.

Gentlemen who have visited Washington recently say that Mr. Pigott has filed a set of charges against the candidate, in which, they say, he is accused of bad faith in politics and of endeavoring to defeat a regular democratic nominee.

These gentlemen say also that the matter is now entirely in Mr. Cleveland's hands, and that he told them they must present a better democrat than Mr. Byxbee, if they do not want the latter appointed.

These gentlemen are of the opinion that neither James Gallagher nor John P. Murphy of this city have any chance of getting the plum.

STONINGTON'S [illegible]

Swallows that Nest in a Bombshell—Albino Crow and Robins.

A pair of swallows have got a very dainty home in a curious, hard, conical mansion on a post near the gateway of the railway station in Stonington. For several years the birds have had the same home, coming from the far south in the second week in May, and none of the early birds is greedy enough to try to take the queer house from them. Only very small, thin birds could do housekeeping in it anyhow.

The mansion of the swallows is a big bomb, smooth, intact, glistening with black varnish. The British threw it into Stonington in the war of 1814, with many tons of similar missiles, but it failed to explode.

After the war ship sailed away, [illegible] there was something like two or three tons of English iron scattered about the streets of the old borough. Then the first citizens gathered the bombs that had failed to explode, and piled them in small pyramids in the public squares and in their ample dooryards. In this way, in time, it came to pass that social lines were rigidly drawn in Stonington according to a family's heirlooms in British bombs, and even to this day a man doesn't amount to much socially in the borough if he is at all short on bombs.

Every family displays its bombs in the most effective way possible, keeps its pile symmetrically arranged and shining with varnish, and guards it with almost the same veneration that it bestows on its two-hundred-year old Bible, its polished brass doorknocker, and antique fender and andirons.

But not all the bombs were appropriated by private families; the town took a few of them to itself, set them up on short posts here and there in the streets, and wrote on their varnished sides:

"In memory of the bombardment of Stonington, 1814."

The particular bomb the birds have taken for their house is one of the biggest and best in the town. The hole in the end of it in which the fuse was set is barely big enough for the slender birds to slip in and out, and they have to hold their wings close to their sides, but once they are inside nothing can reach them or make them afraid.

Stonington has a couple of other wild birds that are quite as interesting in another way as the swifts in the bomb. They are two young robins, albinos, white as milk. They were first noted in the borough one afternoon last week flitting about the trees in the shady yard of the old Congregational church, and a pair of old robins were teaching them to fly. A citizen bagged the fledglings, put them in a cage in his home, and they are thriving.

Still another queer bird, a perfect albino crow, was captured in the hill town of East Plymouth by Abram I. Kurtz, a farmer, one day last week. It is as white as snow, with yellow bill and feet. Mr. Kurtz has it in a cage in his farm house, and it is doing well.

In 1890 the German banks had $425,000,000 capital and $780,000,000 deposits.

ADMIRAL TRYON

Escaped Ignominious Death by Sinking With His Ship.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN SHOT.

This is the Opinion of Eminent Sir Charles Dilke.

LONDON, July 4.—Sir Charles Dilke, one of England's most eminent lay authorities in naval and military matters, who was interviewed concerning the reports that Admiral Tryon was suffering from temporary mental derangement when he conducted the maneuvers off Tripoli, said: "While the foreign office has a deal to say on this subject, I must confess that Admiral Tryon never gave me the idea that he had any mental weakness whatever. One of the lords of the admiralty said that a better sailor than Tryon never trod a ship's deck. The blunder simply passes comprehension. Had Tryon lived he must have been adjudged guilty according to the present evidence, and unless the crown used its prerogative, have been shot."

Major General Walter Goldsworthy said: "Tryon served with me in Abyssinia. He was a tireless and clearheaded worker. I never heard of any mental deviation or want of precision on his part. His fatal error in judgement must have arisen from illness."

Numerous private letters have been received from sailors of the Mediterranean fleet. One sailor, who was on one of the smaller vessels, writes in reference to Admiral Tryon's signal: "We all stood amazed at such a signal, knowing very well that there was no room for the ships to turn, but the orders had to be obeyed.

"Although the vessel was sinking under him Tryon signaled, refusing boats. May I never see such a case of wholesale murder again. We saw the men fall in at command four deep on the forecastle till the water reached their feet. They then received orders to fall in on the quarter deck. All the time they never attempted to go near the boats. This will show you how naval discipline is ground into people. The whole fleet could see the poor fellows standing in perfect order, quietly drowning in their ranks."

THE NEW HEGIRA.

Thousands of Moslems Will Settle in the Southern States.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Ex-Consul Alexander Webb, who represents the Mohammedans in the United States, said before starting for Chicago that he had reported to the syndicate of rich Mohammedans in India, for whom he had been securing estimates on lands in Georgia, Alabama and Florida for the formation of Mohammedan colonies.

He expects a definite report from the syndicate within a few weeks, and it is probable that the purchase of the land will be consummated shortly afterward.

Consul Webb has as his guest Abdurrahim Effendi of Egypt, who is here to assist him in his work. Both the effendi and Consul Webb are enthusiastic about the project, and both are of the opinion that lands in the south are better adapted for colonization purposes than lands in any other section of the country. The effendi will journey to the World's fair as soon as Mr. Webb returns.

Immediately after the lands are bought they will be put in readiness for the colonists. Everything is working well in India for the emigration, which will be large. Several hundred thousand dollars will be represented in the purchase of the land.

Crushed by Circus Chariots.

NASHUA, N. H., July 4.—Michael J. Gibbons, an employee of Barnum's circus, was killed here. At the close of the chariot races, just as the chariots were leaving the ring, Gibbons started to run across the ring and one of the chariots struck him, knocking him down and running over his body. He got up, started to run and was struck by another chariot, which ran over his neck. He lived about nine minutes.

Five Hurt by a Falling Floor.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Five laborers were seriously injured by falling timbers in the Adams building. The building was damaged by fire two weeks ago, and they were employed in clearing away the debris. They were all at work on the first floor when a portion of the fifth floor gave away and came crashing down upon them.

Funds Wanted For Ashtabula Monument.

ASHTABULA, O., July 4.—The committee for raising funds for a monument to the memory of the unrecognized dead who perished in the railroad accident caused by the falling of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway bridge into the river on Dec. 29, 1876, has issued an appeal to the public for contributions.

Killed While Fishing.

LANCASTER, Pa., July 4.—During a heavy storm Charles Mackinson was instantly killed by the lightning and William Stahl was fatally injured. They were fishing in a creek near Lancaster, and took refuge beneath a tree from the storm. The tree was knocked to pieces, and one of Stahl's shoes was torn from his foot.

A Suit Against Senator Squire.

ROCHESTER, July 4.—An action has been commenced by F. G. Shepard, Philo Osgood and William S. King against Senator Watson C. Squire and wife of Seattle, Wash. The defendant is a son-in-law of the late Philo Remington. The action involves property in and near Seattle to the value of $2,000,000.

A Long Distance Walk Begun.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 4.—Edward C. Lockwood, the athlete, who started from New York to walk to San Francisco in 100 days, reached here, and this morning left for Hudson, 41 miles. Tomorrow he walks to Coxsackie and Thursday to Albany.

Sacked the Church.

ATHENS, Pa., July 4.—Burglars broke into the church of the Epiphany of Sayre, and forcing open the door of the Tabernacle, stole the chalices that were stored there. After securing everything of value in the church that they could get hold of, they attempted to force an entrance into the pastoral residence, which is occupied by Rev. Father Costello. Father Costello's sister, who was sleeping in the room over the dining room, heard them at work at the windows and gave the alarm, which frightened them away. There were four men in the party.

A Fatal Cutting Affray.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 4.—A stabbing affray occurred at McDonald. Ed Wasson, an oil man, whipped a coal digger named Tom Bradley. James Bradley, seeing his brother getting the worst of it, drew a knife and stabbed Wasson five times in the back. Bradley left the knife sticking in his victim, and getting possession of a heavy club said he would kill any one who attempted to arrest him. Wasson is still living, but cannot recover. Bradley has not yet been arrested.

Many Miners Are Out.

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 4.—Fifteen hundred miners at Long Run, Dillonvale and Laurelton mines, on the Wheeling and Lake Erie, are out on a strike because of the discharge of the check weighman.

SICKLES' LATEST VICTORY.

On the Field of Gettysburg He Puts to Rout an Obnoxious Photographer.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—A few veterans remained here to pass the Fourth, but the larger part of the veterans have gone. The last feature of the big celebration was at Little Round Top, the strategic point of the second and third days' battle. The handsome new monument of the Forty-fourth and Twelfth New York infantry, a tower shaped structure, on the most commanding point of Little Round Top, was dedicated and the remnant of the two regiments, with some of their old commanders, met again on the spot where they resisted the successive onslaughts of the enemy.

An incident of the day, due to the agitation of the trolley subject, was the interference with Photographer Tipton, who had his camera pointed at the new monument on Little Round Top. By order of General Sickles and General Butterworth he was told to take his camera away. He refused, and his instrument was dismantled.

He immediately returned to the town and swore out warrants against Generals Sickles and Butterworth, charging them with interfering with him in his business. The matter will be settled in the courts.

THE SHOT IN FUN.

A Fourth of July Tragedy Which Resulted Fatally.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Henry Sohl, 19 years old, a lithographer, was shot and killed by Christina Scheibler, a cigarette girl, employed by the Consolidated Cigarette company. The man who was killed was a sweetheart of the girl. He with his brother, Gustave Sohl, and a friend called on the Scheiblers to discuss a picnic they had arranged to go on today. Henry Sohl amused the small crowd by firing blank cartridges from a 32 caliber revolver.

Later, Christina took up her sweetheart's revolver and said playfully, "I would like to shoot you."

Henry replied with a laugh, "All right." The girl then placed the self cocking revolver to his left temple and drew the trigger. The man fell over, much to the dismay of every one present, and before a doctor could arrive he was dead.

How the loaded cartridge which killed young Sohl got into the pistol is not known. Although the girl Christina was arrested and locked up, it is believed that the affair was accidental.

Italian Laborers Made Trouble.

FONDA, N. Y., July 4.—A gang of Italians, employed in the construction of the Cayadutta Electric railroad, attempted to tear up the tracks between here and Johnstown. They also heaped ties and stone on the track to prevent the passage of cars. Sheriff Liddle, with a number of officers, went to the scene and arrested 15 or 20 of the leaders and lodged them in the county jail. The others quieted down, and cars are again running. It is said the trouble was caused by the tardiness of the company to pay the Italians their wages.

Saw His Son Killed.

ATHENS, Pa., July 4.—The Lehigh Valley milk train, south bound, struck and instantly killed Thomas Page, aged 7 years, a son of George Page of Green's Landing. The father and son were walking on the track. The son was a little in advance of the father, when the latter observed a train coming toward him on the north bound track. He stepped out of the way, and as he did so spotted the south bound train. He tried to save his son, but was too late.

Admirers of Governor Altgeld.

CHICAGO, July 4.—At the session of the national convention of the Socialist Labor party, Delegate Pappaport of Indiana, for the committee on resolutions, offered a declaration expressing "admiration for Governor Altgeld of Illinois because of his frank and courageous statement of the reasons for which he exercised his prerogative" in pardoning Anarchists Fielden, Schwab and Neebe.

Lightning Set Off Fireworks.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 4.—Lightning struck the Western Union telegraph office in this city. The office windows were filled with fireworks, and the lightning, which ran along the wires, ignited the entire display. An explosion, which was heard nearly a mile away, followed. The entire front of the building was blown out and the wires and switchboard ruined.

New York Liederkranz in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 4.—One hundred and fifty members of the German Liederkranz of New York are at the Great Northern hotel. They have been making a tour of the principal cities of the central states and are now fresh from St. Louis.

Bound Brook's Celebration.

BOUND BROOK, N. J., July 4.—The 25th celebration of Independence day by the Washington Camp Ground association was held on the site of Washington camp at Middle Brook, occupied by the Continental army during the winters of 1777-78-79. Rev. W. R. Lewis, D. D., one of Plainfield's ablest pulpit orators, delivered the oration, and Rev. T. E. Davis recited the stirring events in Bound Brook during the revolution.

A Little Boy Fatally Cooked.

PORTLAND, O., July 4.—Victor, the 5-year-old son of S. Davidson, furniture dealer of Laconner, Wash., while at play fell into a vat of boiling quassia chips. He was quickly pulled out, but his flesh was literally cooked, and after lingering in terrible agony a few hours he died.

Another Loss For Partridge.

CHICAGO, July 4.—A fire which started in the kitchen in the Cafe on the sixth floor did $150,000 damage to the stock of Fish, Joseph & Co., dry goods merchants, 112 to 116 State street. The building is owned by Ed Partridge, and his loss is included in the estimates.

Want No Mining Restrictions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—A meeting of the California Mining association has been called for Wednesday for the purpose of memorializing congress to remove the restrictions on hydraulic mining.

Did a Mile in 2:08 3-4.

KIRKWOOD, Del., July 4.—The trotter Ayres P., with running mate Telephone, were driven a mile on the kite track here in 2:08¾. They were driven by John Hamlin of Parkeville, L. I.

One Firm Signs.

PITTSBURG, July 4.—Word was received that the Findlay Rolling Iron mill of Findlay, O., had signed the scale. This company employs 200 men.

Prussian Landtag's Session Over.

BERLIN, July, 4.—The Prussian landtag closed with the reading of King William's message.

A Bishop of the Seashore.

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 4.—Bishop Elect Lawrence of Massachusetts has arrived for the season.

New York Naval Reserves' Outing.

NEW YORK, July 4.—It has been determined that the old New Hampshire shall be towed to Huntington, L. I., to arrive there on or before July 22, for the summer drill of the New York naval reserves.

A FACETIOUS VIEW.

VEGETARIANISM CARRIED OUT TO ITS LOGICAL END.

The Arguments of the Advocates of Vegetable Diet Applied to Some of the Recognized Evils of Life, and Some Startling Deductions Are Evolved.

The beneficent physical, moral, social, financial and esthetic advantages of vegetable food are insisted upon by the members of the vegetarian congress at Chicago, and each advantage is lauded as salutary in the highest degree. Professor Mayor, a well known classical scholar of St. John's college, Cambridge, avers that vegetarians suffer but little from thirst. They are "set free from cravings which the world without hears as the voice of instinct, strong, imperious, incurable." He drinks a glass of lemonade at 7:15 p. m. "from habit rather than to slake thirst," and he sometimes takes a swig of milk at railway station restaurants "to encourage the dairy at the expense of the brewery." Thus, so far as he is concerned, thirst is abolished. He needs no drink of any kind.

The English soldiers and civil servants in the tropic stretches of Asia and Africa have only to follow Professor Mayor's example. Thus the value of vegetarianism to military science becomes evident. In fact, not merely the operations of the commissary department, but the whole art of war would be wonderfully changed and simplified if Mr. Thomas Atkins would forswear meat. Professor Mayor has not attained his victory over thirst without sacrifices, at which the grosser race of meat eaters will grin. For instance, he takes the white of an egg neat, without salt or pepper. Thus he avoids the incitements to thirst and keeps his palate in condition to receive with rapture that British vegetable, the Brussels sprout. Doubtless a vegetarian palate, long brought up on herbs and grasses and outside of all condiment, becomes capable of receiving savory sensations from dishes of the simplest sort, and a turnip picked up in the furrow may be sweeter than a stalled ox tenderloin.

We hope that Professor Mayor will now go on to the abolition of hunger. He has put thirst away from him, and there seems no reason why he should be less successful with his running mate. Of course he will be allowed to nibble a radish now and then from habit, even after he has conquered imperious, incurable instinct. The economic advantages arising from the abolition of thirst would be very great, and Professor Mayor has it in his power, if he can get the world's hunger throttled, to add enormously to the wealth of the world. Still greater would be the saving if the world would eat vegetables from habit only. It's cheaper to keep a cow than a man. We are afraid, however, that the majority of men would go on perpetual strike if the necessity of eating and drinking were removed, so that there would be a loss of wealth after all. But what's the use of being wealthy if you can become healthy and virtuous by eating vegetables only.

The profound moral which vegetarianism holds for prohibitionists is obvious. "The consumption of flesh," says a vegetarian resolution, "creates a thirst for intoxicating liquors and should be abandoned by all who desire to promote temperate reform." This goes to the root of the matter. Prohibiting grapes and corn and hops and apples wouldn't be enough. There will always be some intoxicant as long as man continues to be subject to the demands of thirst. Here's the real gold cure, the elixir of temperance, the pill of prohibition. Prohibition and garden "sass," one and inseparable, now and forever! Nor is intemperance the only evil which will not and cannot grow in the garden. Dr. Paul Foster of Berlin is confident that the adoption of vegetarian principles will "end the war between the poor and the rich, solve the social problem, complete the work of religion and in all ways ameliorate the unhappy condition of the human race."

Reflect upon these things, erring carnivores, and think that every time you order a beefsteak at the butcher's, you are ordering unhappiness, the deterioration of the human race and the debasement of society. Go to the grocer's and buy a peck of potatoes and some cucumbers and a plug of tobacco, and carry peace and potency of social regeneration home to your cook. Who can tell that the future of Europe may not be peaceful if Professor Foster can induce the German emperor to live upon string beans and asparagus tips for a few months? Will anybody pretend that Rasalino might not have been a man as mild as milk if he had been restricted to a diet of spaghetti in his youth? Does anybody suppose that Jeffreys lived upon olives?

In addition to the moral, physical and economic advantages of vegetable diet there is the esthetical advantage. Mrs. Bruce, the English woman whose paper on "The Æsthetics of Vegetarianism" was read at the congress, believes that "meat eating is opposed to idealism, while vegetarianism has much to offer that connects it with the highest and best in life. The highest aspect of vegetarianism is estheticism. It is full of vital truth and beauty." We now see why Mr. Oscar Wilde ate huckleberries when he was in the United States. Using the term estheticism in its larger sense, we see why Emerson ate beans and why, judged by results, so many of his disciples seem to have lived on cabbages. —New York Sun.

Avoiding Wrinkles.

Many wrinkles may be avoided by the woman who will take some pains with her expression when she is by herself. She who bends over her book, her desk or her sewing with knitted brow and compressed or working lips need not be surprised if her face refuses to smooth itself when she turns to other employments. It would cost her very little trouble to avoid such tricks of feature.—Harper's Bazar.

Indignation Aids Digestion Sometimes.

A little bit of wholesome indignation is as good as a tonic once in awhile, and one is all the better for it if one can keep one's wrath within bounds and not suffer a loss of dignity in consequence—a good burst of honest indignation, mind you, that says its say and is all sunshine again, not the kind that smolders and makes one morose and moody. —Buffalo News.

AN OPERATIVE'S LIFE

A VISIT TO THE HOME OF A FALL RIVER MILL EMPLOYEE.

People Who Marry Young and Find Themselves In Debt In a Few Years—How the Wife Helps Her Husband to Add to the Family Income—The Children.

Being in Fall River the other day, I sought some facts concerning the operatives. Fortune brought me into the home of what proved to be a rather intelligent one. It was Saturday afternoon, and as the mills close at noon the whole family, including the [illegible], was at home. The "home" was a tenement in a large double house, where three other families besides the one I interviewed were living. It was in the rear of a populous street which is the home of a large number of the more thrifty and sober operatives. This particular tenement consisted of a large room in the center, where the stove was placed and where the cooking was done. Around this room three bedrooms and a sinkroom were grouped. The furniture was better than one might expect to see, though it was by no means luxurious.

Entering into conversation with the man, I found that he had formerly attended the English church while in England and that for some time after coming to this country he had been quite interested in church work. In token of his interest, I learned, one of his children bore the name of a clergyman of the Episcopal church. At the time of my visit, however, he said that he was not attending church at all, partly because he could not buy clothes with which to make a respectable appearance at church and partly because he felt that the clergy were inclined to side with the mill owner as against the mill operative.

His wife, as women usually are, was more hopeful and content and explained that she thought they could get along very well. She was quite willing to work and had done so, somewhat against her husband's protest—a protest, however, which was evidently hushed by the necessity of the case. In order to work this good woman was obliged to hire some one to care for her baby and to let the other three "shift for themselves, chiefly in the street."

The longer I talked with these people the more interested I became, and the more confidence was mutually manifested. It seemed to me that three or four things were to be noticed.

Neither [illegible] saved up their earnings [illegible] have done previous to [illegible] marriage. True, in this respect [illegible] the ninety-nine hundredths of [illegible] young people, whatever their work or mission in life.

This family was at that stage where there was but one old enough to work unless the wife did precisely as this wife did a part of the time—i. e., hire some one to care for her baby while she went out to work. A few years later and the children, who may go into the mills at 14, will be able to earn enough to make the family entirely comfortable. Indeed many such families as this one promise to be in the course of a few years can save enough from their earnings to buy a home for themselves after awhile.

It seemed to me that it would be quite a practical thing for this family to combine with other families and start a kind of kindergarten, where not only the baby, but all the children under public school age might be cared for at far less expense than was now paid for "minding the baby."

Such a movement as this would doubtless not only meet with the hearty and practical support of well meaning people in general, but it would be supported by the officials of the mills. I was especially pleased to learn that many of the corporations of these Fall River mills support a bed in the local hospital for the free use of their operatives. The kindergarten would be a philanthropy along the same line.

It will be quite a practical thing to give some statistics of the earnings of this family for the week previous. Those of the man had brought $7; those of the wife $5. Deduct from this total $2.50 for "minding the baby," and $9.50 is left as the net income of the household. For rent they pay $2.50 per month, and a barrel of flour lasted seven weeks.

The wife explained that she was only working "for a spell to help them out of debt." If action to do this all the housework must be done after returning tired from the mill at night, when both of them must work late and early in the morning before going to the mill. As the mills start at about half past 6 in the morning it will be seen that very early rising is necessary.

Nor is this all. It makes life a treadmill with no evenings for recreation. Besides the wife has no time for her needle, and the appearance of the children must greatly suffer. The great relief is found in the fact that, by the most frugal living and by the strictest economy, this wife was not compelled to work in the mill all the time. Still it seemed about impossible for the family, with the strictest economy and sobriety, to do better than was being done until the "boys got big enough to work."

This visit enlightened my understanding, broadened my view and deepened my sympathies. While there are many of the operatives who, like us all, live far below their privileges, still if many of us could study life from their view point our sympathies for the broadest brotherhood would be deepened.—Boston Commonwealth.

No Wonder She Smiled.

"An acquaintance of yours, eh?" inquired Brown as his friend Green lifted his hat to a passing lady.

"Yes, slight acquaintance."

"She smiled very sweetly on you."

"She ought to. The court allowed her $10,000 alimony."

Brown tried to say something about the weather, but his emotions downed him, and they didn't get chatty again until Green struck a banana peel.—Detroit Free Press.

AN ARTIST'S STORY.

It's 30 years since that time. I was a light hearted boy then—a boy of 20. I lived in Paris, and I studied Art. Being an artist, I always spelled Art with a capital A. I have other things to think of besides Art now. I have to think of painting what the public will buy. I have to make it pay—I have made it pay.

But it is not about myself I want to talk; it is of Orson—of Orson the Hirsute, Orson the Unrelenting, Orson the Hater of Art. Of course his name wasn't Orson. His real name was Jobinard, and he lived at the corner of the Rue de l'Ancienne Comedie, and this uncompromising grocer, this well-to-do Sham of the Quartier Latin, this man who hated Art, artists, and, above all, Art students with a peculiar ferocity.

Alcibiade Jobinard had reason to dislike Art students. They had a nasty way of getting into his debt, but Jobinard took the bull by the horns—he gave no more credit.

"Ma foi!" he would say, with a supercilious sneer, "Credit is dead, my good young sir. He doesn't live here any longer. He is dead and buried."

And then one had to go empty away. It had been so handy in the good old days just to run into Jobinard's for whatever one wanted, and—well, "stick it up." You see, you could get an entire meal at Jobinard's, one of those little sham boneless hams; they've quite enough on them for four. Tinned provisions in inexhaustible variety, wines from 75 centimes upward, liquors, dessert, even in the shape of cheeses of all sorts, almonds and raisins, grapes and peaches. It was excessively convenient. When one was hard up, one dealt with Jobinard, and it was put down to the account. When one was in funds, one dined and breakfasted at a restaurant and left Jobinard's severely alone.

But now all was changed. Mlle. Amenaide, an uncommonly pretty girl, and we were all desperately head over heels in love with her. By "we" I mean the Art students, but of all the Art students that were desperately in love with Mlle. Amenaide, Daburon, the sculptor, was the most demonstrative. Jobinard hated Daburon with a deadly hatred because Daburon never expended more than 10 centimes at a time. It was the society of Mlle. Amenaide that Daburon hungered for, and he got it because he was entitled to it, being a purchaser.

Mlle. Amenaide was Jobinard's cashier. It was a large shop, and there were several assistants, but all moneys were paid to Mlle. Amenaide, the cashier, who sat in a glass box underneath the great chiming clock.

Daburon, the sculptor, would enter the shop, nod in a cavalier manner to Jobinard, as though he were the very dust beneath his feet; then he would look at Mlle. Amenaide, raise his hat with his right hand, place his left upon his heart and make her a low bow; then he would pretend to blow her a kiss from the tips of his fingers, as though he were a circus rider; then he would take up a box of matches or some other peculiarly inexpensive article.

"Have the kindness to wrap that up carefully for me in paper," he would remark in a patronizing manner. Then he would march up to Mlle. Amenaide with the air of an Alexander—you could almost hear the tune of "See the Conquering Hero Comes" playing as you saw him do it. He would pay his 10 centimes and whisper some compliment into the ear of Mlle. Amenaide. Then he would receive his purchase from the hand of M. Jobinard in a magnificent and condescending manner. Then he would strike a ridiculous attitude of exaggerated admiration and stare at the unhappy grocer as though he were one of the seven wonders of the world.

"What a bust!" or "What arms!" or "What muscularity!" he would say, and then he would heave a sigh and swagger out of the shop.

Jobinard, who was a particularly ugly, thickset, hairy little man, used at first rather to resent these references to his personal advantages. His four assistants and his cashier would titter, and Jobinard used to blush, but at length the poor fellow fell into the snare laid for him by the villain Daburon.

He got to believe himself the perfect type of manly beauty. When a Frenchman has once come to this conclusion, there is no folly of which he is not ready to be guilty.

The fact is, Daburon had passed the word round. The Art students, male and female, invariably stared appreciatively at the little, hairy, thickset Jobinard as though he were the glass of fashion and the mold of form. Jobinard now began to give himself airs. He swaggered about the shop, he exhibited himself in the doorway, he posed and attitudinized all day long, and then we began to make it rather warm for Jobinard.

"Ah, M. Jobinard, if you were only a poor man, what a thing it would be for Art! Ah, if we only had you to sit to us in the nude. We are going to do Ajax defying the lightning next week. What an Ajax you would make, Jobinard!"

"You really ought to sacrifice yourself in the interests of Art," another would remark. "You'd ruin the professional model. You would indeed."

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," Jobinard would reply, his hairy, baboonlike face grinning with delight, "a too benevolent heaven has made me the man I am," and then he struck an attitude.

"What legs!" we all cried in a sort of chorus.

"Ah, M. Jobinard," I said pleadingly, "if you would only permit us to photograph your lower extremities."

"Never, gentlemen, never!" replied the infatuated Jobinard; "I care nothing for Art. Besides, it would be almost indecent; I could never look into a print shop without coming face to face with the evidences of my too fatal beauty."

From that day Jobinard ceased to wear his professional apron.

It was about a week after this that Daburon, I and another man presented ourselves at Jobinard's establishment. We raised our hats to Jobinard as one man, we smiled, and then we bowed.

The hairy little grocer seemed considerably astonished at our performance.

"M. Jobinard," said Daburon, who was our spokesman, "you see before you a deputation of three, representing the Art students of Paris, some 300 in number. We have come to beg a favor. We know, alas! too well, that it would be absolutely impossible to induce a man of your position in society to sit to us; but, M. Jobinard, a man possessing the lower extremities of a Hercules, a Farnese Hercules, M. Jobinard—and I need hardly remind you that Hercules was a demigod—has his duties as well as his privileges. Those magnificent lower extremities of his are not his own—they belong to the public.

"Such lower extremities as yours, monsieur, are not for an age, but for all time. They must be handed down in marble to posterity. The legs of Jobinard must become a household word in Art. To refuse our request, monsieur, would be a crime. You would retain the copyright of your own legs of course. They would be multiplied in plaster of paris and become a marketable commodity over the whole civilized world. Such limbs as these," said Daburon, respectfully prodding and patting the unfortunate Jobinard, "must not be lost to the artistic world. What a biceps, what a deltoid, my friends!" he continued. "What a magnificent development of the sternocleidomastoideus!"

The wretched Jobinard, blown out with pride, seemed like the frog in the fable, ready to burst. And then he proudly drew up the leg of his nether garment to the knee and exhibited a muscular brown limb as hairy as that of an ape.

"You will not refuse us!" we cried in chorus.

"You will not dare to refuse us," added Daburon.

"Gentlemen, I yield! I see that Art cannot get on without me. When would you like to begin?" said poor Jobinard.

"Tomorrow at noon," answered Daburon as he shook hands with the little grocer reverentially, and then we took our leave.

Next day a long procession filed into the shop.

"This way, gentlemen, this way, if you please," said M. Jobinard as he indicated the way to his back yard.

We must have been at least 30. Everybody brought something; there were four sacks of plaster, some paving stones, bits of broken iron, bricks and enough material to have walled up Jobinard alive. A great mass of mold plaster was prepared, the limbs that had become necessary to the world of Art were denuded of their covering and placed in the mold mass, then large quantities of the liquid plaster was poured on them, then the scraps of old iron, the bars, the paving stones and the bricks were carefully inserted and built up into the still soft mass, which was at least a yard high and a yard thick.

"Don't move, dear M. Jobinard," cried Daburon, "the plaster is about to set. We shall return in half an hour, by which time the molds will be complete."

M. Jobinard, seated in the center of his back yard, bolt upright, bowed as each of us as we passed out.

In about a quarter of an hour Jobinard began to feel distinctly uncomfortable. "The molds seem getting terribly heavy," he said to one of his assistants, who kept him company. "They seem on fire, and I can't move."

At that moment the procession, headed by Daburon, filed once more into the courtyard.

"It's getting painful, gentlemen," said Jobinard. "I feel as though I were being turned to stone."

"Try and bear it bravely. Nothing is attained in this world, dear enthusiast, without a certain amount of physical suffering. It will be all over in a few minutes. We will commence the necessary [illegible] for your release at once, Jobinard. [illegible] perfectly quiet till our return," said Daburon rather suavely.

And then we each of us kissed our finger tips solemnly to poor Jobinard, and we filed out once more. It was the last day of the term at the Art school, and we were all off for our holidays.

For two hours Jobinard waited for us in an agony of fear; then he sent for a stonemason, who dug him out. They had to get the plaster off with a hammer. We had, by the direction of the Demon Daburon, omitted to oil the shapely limbs of our victim.

Poor Jobinard!—Tit-bits.

The English Maid's Prerogative.

"My English maid," says a housekeeper, "is amusingly tenacious of her rights and her limitations alike. If a friend of hers rings at the front door, Bay is furious at the presumption. If the grocer comes to the kitchen door, she is equally vexed. She regards the side door as her prerogative and demands a summons from thence."—Philadelphia Press.

Man's Hard Lot.

Diagnosing an Illness.

It would seem to be simple enough to attribute the fever which ordinarily follows the fracture of a leg to the irritation which is set up in the limb by the accident, yet, in point of fact, that fever is not seldom the result of the sympathetic disturbance of nerve centers, as, for example, those of the stomach, and in treating it it becomes necessary to take those into consideration. I have selected this illustration, because the results of such an accident as the fracture of a leg would appear to be of all things the simplest to diagnose. When we approach such ailments as nervous diseases we find ourselves literally wandering in a maze through which there is no path. It is commonly enough known, even by those who have not studied medicine, that while each disease shows certain symptoms common to each recurrence of it, each case must be treated separately and allowance made for many things peculiar to the patient.

Among these are his or her occupation in life, habits, food, constitution or stamina, previous ailments and, above all, heredity or those tendencies which have come from his parents. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes in "Elsie Venner" makes the old family physician refer to the knowledge he has gained, during many years of practice, of the hereditary constitution of his patients, and the doctor adds that no school of science, no medical education can give this knowledge to his young competitors. All this is true, wonderfully true, and it is the lack of just this knowledge of the past which makes some cases of disease so terribly puzzling and which makes each case individual in itself.—Cyrus Edson, M. D., in North American Review.

THE CARE OF CHICKENS.

How to Induce Quick Maturing For Market or For Layers—Satisfactory Crosses.

To obtain profitable results judicious management from time of hatching to maturity is indispensable. And yet few farmers push their young stock with the proper food and frequent feedings absolutely necessary to make plump chickens for market. With proper management the cockerels should be marketable in three or four months, and in five to five and a half months the early pullets should be layers at a time when eggs are high in price. And such results should be obtained in many cases with food much of which would otherwise be wasted. Timely suggestions on this subject are given by Manager Gilbert of the poultry department of the Ottawa experimental farms in a recent report. Following is a brief recapitulation:

First—After hatching out, the chickens should remain undisturbed in the nest for 24 hours.

Second—Their first food should be stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed dry, and stale bread crumbs. This may be continued some days.

Third—Weather permitting, the hen and brood should be placed in a dry coop on the grass, where the chicks can get at grass and earth.

Fourth—If kept indoors, the chicks must be kept on earth or on boards covered with earth. If not so kept, disaster will follow.

Fifth—After being kept on the bread and milk diet for a week granulated oatmeal or small particles of cracked corn may be added. At the end of two weeks whole wheat may be fed, but not before.

Sixth—Care should be taken that the chicks are in no way stinted during the first five weeks of their existence. They should be pushed at all times, but require particular attention during the period named.

Seventh—Young stock requires frequent but light feeding. It must be remembered that a stinted chicken will never make a good market fowl.

Eighth—The earlier hatched the sooner will the pullets lay.

Ninth—The aim should be to have the pullets laying while the hens are molting. A supply of new laid eggs all the year round will so be secured.

One of the obstacles in the way of obtaining early chickens is the difficulty of obtaining early sitters. This may be overcome by the use of a good incubator. As artificial incubation becomes simplified and results more certain, so will it become more generally adopted. Again, if the farmer's hens laid as well during the winter season as they ought to do and will do if properly managed, there would be more early sitters.

The experience of the past five years shows that the Plymouth Rock cockerels make the most rapid growth of any breed so far tried. A cross of Brahma-Dorking during the past season grew quickly and attained large size, making four pounds in 4 months and 18 days.

The most satisfactory cross so far made at the Ottawa station is the Brahma-Dorking. The pullets of the White Leghorn-Brahma cross promise to make large fowls and excellent layers. The females of the White Leghorn-Plymouth Rock cross have proved hardy fowls and good winter layers.

Turnip Cultivation.

An English authority on this subject says that as a general way turnip seed should be got in at about a quarter of an inch deep, or a little deeper in the case of light soils, because it has been found that deep sowing, especially on an uneven and lumpy state of the drills, produces an irregular and weak braird. Rapid growth in the early stages of this crop is most advisable, and the plant then frequently passes through, with little damage, the attacks of its enemies. Another important point in reference to the growth of turnips is the distance to which they should be thinned. A farmer likes to see an even crop of large roots, as he believes it indicates a heavy yield as well as a favorable season and excellent cultivation, but from a practical and economic point of view the farmer need not desire to produce those enormous bulbs which one sees held up as specimens and examples for imitation.

From six to seven inches is quite enough to leave between the plants when they are thinned. The effect will be to produce a crop smaller in size than would be the case with a wider thinning, but the result will be that there will be a heavier feeding yield per acre than by the wider method. For instance, by the 6-inch thinning every yard gives six bulbs against only four when they are left nine inches apart. Large bulbs most frequently are found to be hollow hearted or spongy, and if not so they almost always contain a larger proportion of water than do the smaller roots. It has been calculated that large bulbs may contain 92 parts of water and 8 parts of solid nourishing matter, while smaller bulbs may contain 88 parts only of water and 12 of solid nourishing matter. The advantage of the latter is practically 50 per cent.

FODDER CORN.

Good From the Time It Tassels Out Until the Ears Form and the Kernels Glaze.

Fodder corn sown in drills three feet apart, or planted in hills three feet apart one way and two feet the other way, should be a regular crop with every farmer who keeps cows. If a dry season comes when the pastures do not furnish feed enough, it can be cut and fed green, though right here, says The American Cultivator, we will say that it is much better to allow a day or a day and night of wilting before it is given to the cows, particularly if not quite grown when fed out. In cloudy or rainy weather it is better even when cut longer than that. The wilting not only takes out some of the water and renders it less liable to cause indigestion, but it brings about a chemical change in it that makes it more valuable for milk production and for butter production. Probably the same increase in the solid matter of the milk would make it worth more for cheesemaking.

Any that is not used green can be saved for the silo or cured by drying for the winter feeding, and it is good either way, and good for milk cows, working oxen or growing young stock. It may be that some of the lately introduced foreign crops are better than our corn as fodder, but we shall continue to be very skeptical about them until experience has shown their results.

We know that we can grow more fodder to the acre from corn than from any crop we ever tried, and it will induce a larger flow of milk, and of milk that will be richer to eat and will make more butter than we ever could get from any other fodder, although good clover comes very near to it if cut just at the right time, but cut too early or too late the clover is not very good, while the corn fodder, whether sown expressly for that purpose or the stover from field corn or from the garden sweet corn, is good from the time it tassels out until the ears are formed and the kernels glazed.

Of Interest to Potato Growers.

From the Kansas station comes a bulletin giving results of experiments in the potato field that are of general interest. When the season is warm enough and rather long, the second growth of potatoes often appears in the fall from the few tubers that have been left in the ground after harvesting. In colder climates these potatoes often sprout up the next spring long before the regularly planted ones have been put in the ground. The freezing of the winter does not seem to affect their vitality, and when they have been allowed to grow they often produce better crops than the newly planted seed.

In the bulletin mentioned it says that the second crop of potatoes found in the fall in warm climates makes better seed for the next spring than the regular seed purchased or saved. They start earlier and yield a good crop some time ahead of the regular crop. They keep in the ground until spring without sprouting, and they are firm in texture and not shriveled. Where this second crop can be obtained the bulletin recommends the potatoes as seed in preference to others. In a trial of two years at the station these second crop potatoes used as seed gave an average gain of 48 per cent, and they were found to resist drought better, as well as to produce a finer and better potato.

Variability of Clovers.

Clover, though not usually so considered, is pronounced a most variable plant by The Rural New Yorker, which says the stems, flowers and leaves vary in color, size, pubescence and in power to withstand drought. Some are much earlier than others. Some are erect in habit; others sprawl over the ground. Our ordinary clover, Trifolium pratense, ought not to be called "medium" clover. That name should be given to the peavine, mammoth or giant clover, T. medium. This large clover is less hardy than the other, as it is more liable to heave in the spring (Beal, volume 1, page 246) and often grows so rank as to smother itself. It will give more pasture or hay, though of a coarser quality, and gives more seed. We know of no experiments which would settle the question as to which would "take" root more certainly, but would select the mammoth.

A Convenient Feedbox.

A cheap and very convenient feedbox for half grown chickens can be made in a few minutes by stretching wires over the top of a box of suitable size. Take stout galvanized wire and cut it in lengths about two inches longer than the length of the box. Bend the ends at right angles and drive them into the edges of the box, having first laid off the spaces evenly and made an awl hole for each end of the wire. This box must not be fed out in the rain without shelter, which is easily provided by driving four stakes in the ground and nailing a board over them.—Poultry World.

In the Vegetable Garden.

Frequent hoeings among cabbage and cauliflower plants to loosen the soil will make them grow faster.

If you have not already done so, sow cabbage, savoys and brussels sprouts for winter use.

Cucumbers for pickles are generally sown about the 1st of July.

Don't sow melons alongside of squashes or cucumbers.

There is no doubt but that larger crops of tomatoes can be grown by trellising or staking the vines.

In cultivating sweet potatoes give clean culture until the vines have wholly covered the ground. Then they will keep the weeds down themselves. Also keep the vines loose so that they will not take root.

Erect a pole 6 or 8 feet in height; attach a strong cord from 2 to 3 feet in length to the upper end; to this fasten a good sized piece of sheet tin. Wind and air will keep it in motion, more so if the pole is set slightly leaning. There is no crow in existence which can stand the flashes and bangs of the tin striking the pole, says a correspondent of The Country Gentleman.

The Steaming Process.

Two Detroit young ladies met at a dry goods counter and for a time blocked the channels of trade by an exchange of experiences.

"You are looking so transparent," said one. "Tell me, dearest, what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Steaming," answered dearest, with a self satisfied sigh. "It's tiresome and hot, but the end justifies the means. I don't use powder any more—the hot water has a better effect. I'm almost parboiled now. And you?"

"Do I look improved, dearest?"

"Oh, yes, yes. You are so spirituelle. Do you sit up all night?"

"No. I don't eat meat, and I pose. I just stare at nothing for hours and hours. That gives me the true Hindooistic expression of transcendentalism. Oh, dearest, it is so improving to look at nothing and think of nothing for a long time. It is like the Sphinx."

"Excuse me," answered dearest alangily. "If I went into such 'improvement,' the family would shut me up and feed me on bread and water. I steam my features on the sly as it is."

Then these souls in Mufti fell to buying dry goods like ordinary women who do not pose, neither do they steam.—Detroit Free Press.

A Favor In Buckingham Palace.

One's respect for the accommodations at Buckingham palace is considerably enhanced to read that over 200 women waiting to be presented to the queen were gathered in the apartment adjoining the throneroom on the last drawing room. When it is recalled that each of these women was accompanied by her court train, or rather that each accompanied her court train, it is seen how noble must be the dimensions of a room to accommodate 200 women and 200 court trains.—Exchange.

THE SUNDAY FAIR.

[illegible] that the edict of the board [illegible] of the Columbian exposition and the [illegible] of the courts do not [illegible] open fair on Sunday. The people [illegible] not willing to pay the [illegible] to Jackson Park. The [illegible] citizens and exhibitors [illegible] with ropes and [illegible] over the show cases with [illegible]. The Columbian guards explain [illegible] visitors "[illegible] is Sunday."

[illegible] building is the only building on the grounds which appears the same on Sunday as on other days. The United States building is locked and all the other [illegible]. The Canadian, English, Spanish, German and Austrian exhibits are [illegible] more money to have been gained for Sunday than if at [illegible] request a guard with [illegible] had been engaged to enforce the [illegible] of the day.

[illegible] shows that the observance of Sunday is not a matter of [illegible] but a matter of principle, and also [illegible] the allegation of a general disregard for the day by the nations of Europe. It shows to the visitors, who regard Sunday as a legitimate day for pleasure, that [illegible] men and nations [illegible] from them in their estimate, and they are likely to be more helped than injured by these Sunday-observance object [illegible].

The crowd is disappointing, the Sunday receipts are insufficient; and now the directors wish to make Sunday a half price day. But local patronage for an open fair has not had the anticipated effect upon the people, and the crowds [illegible] than before on Sunday. [illegible] religious conviction [illegible] one day in seven attested for a proper observance of Sunday more than the forty open gates make against it. In [illegible] of religion the force of example [illegible] the force of law.

DRUNK REDUCING.

Most of the petty crimes in every community are traceable to "drunks," and they and the community every year twice the amount the offenders are fined by the courts, for without them there would be little work for a police force to do. In most states the "drunks" are not fined for the first offense, and a large per cent. are for some reason concealed beneath complaints for breaches of the peace, so that the true number of drunks is never shown to the public.

In Massachusetts the people have concluded that "the locking up" and "letting go" policy does more harm than good, and this year have changed the law so that the first offense is not overlooked. The police have no authority to discharge a prisoner locked up for intoxication, but he may petition in writing to the judge or justice before whom he is to be arraigned for release, stating his name and address, whether married or single, how many persons are dependent upon him for support, and whether he has been arrested for drunkenness in a year. The officer may thereupon, at his discretion, hold or discharge the petitioner. After a second offense the prisoner must be sentenced to imprisonment, and may be held in prison for a term of two years. Such a stringent law as this ought to make public "drunks" unpopular. The quiet, in-door [illegible] is beyond the reach of the police, unless complaint is made against the offender by those whom he expects to screen him, and these may be expected to remain about as usual.

THE AD VALOREM FALLACY.

The committee of the New York republicans [illegible] been searching for the opinions of the makers of America, and democratic statesmen, upon the proposed ad valorem tariff, and President Joseph M. Deuel in presenting the report, quoted among others the following authorities against it, which are worthy of democratic consideration:

In 1795 Alexander Hamilton, then secretary of the treasury, said:

"In other nations, experience has led to [illegible] and more, the number of articles rated ad valorem, and, of course, [illegible] number of those rated specifically."

In 1801 Secretary of the Treasury Gallatin said:

"In order to guard, as far as possible, against the value of goods being underrated in the invoices, it would be eligible to lay specific duties on all such articles, now paying duties ad valorem, as may be susceptible of that alteration."

Senator Benton of Texas, who spoke of the ad-valorem features of the tariff of 1833 as "one of those refined subtleties, which, aiming at ideal perfection, overlooks the experience of ages, and disregards the warnings of reason."

"At the session of congress, 1839-40, President Van Buren forwarded a message covering the report of the secretary and comptroller of the treasury, with opinions of Attorneys Generals Butler and Grundy, and letters from collectors of customs in all the principal ports pertaining to the practical operation for about six years, of ad valorem duties. It was the unanimous judgment of these officers that the ad valorem system was 'unequal, uncertain, [illegible] in its construction, injurious to the revenue, open to unfair practices, and greatly expensive, from the number of persons required to execute it.'"

"In 1842 James Buchanan, on the floor of the senate, said:

"'I am not only opposed to any uniform scale of ad valorem duties, but to any and all ad valorem duties whatever, except where, from the nature of the article imported, it is not possible to subject it to a specific duty.'

In 1846 Daniel Webster, [illegible], in his argument to the senate, many instances of fraud under the ad valorem duties, said:

"'It has been the experience of this government always that the ad valorem system is open to innumerable frauds. What is the case with England? In her notions favorable to free trade has she rushed madly into a scheme of ad valorem duties? Sir, the system of ad valorem duties is not free trade, but fraudulent trade.'"

The democratic ad valorem tariff policy is not only a long step backwards, but a disregard of the experience and the wisdom of the leading statesmen of the country.

"THE SHERMAN LAW."

Senator Sherman represented the republican party when he assured President Cleveland and the secretary of the treasury that he should stand by them "for a sound and a safe currency." The republican party has always occupied that position, and were not the starters of the confidence destroying policy which brought the present financial crisis upon the country.

This bill, which is called the Sherman bill, for the repeal of which Senator Sherman frankly declares he would have voted any time since its passage in 1890, did not emanate from Mr. Sherman.

Congressman Walker in a recent history of the bill, says: "It is no more Sherman's measure than that of a whole lot of us fellows, who were at that time determined to hold the far western states in line at any cost short of the folly of free-coinage."

When the bill was passed the democrats in congress were contending for a free coinage silver bill; and the senate by a vote of 42 to 24 had passed a free coinage act, which was carried by twenty-eight democrats and fifteen republicans. Three democrats and twenty-one republicans opposed the bill.

The house rejected the senate free coinage bill and a conference committee substituted this bill which was reported in the senate by Mr. Sherman, who was the author of the two best features of the law, the stoppage of the coinage of light-weight dollars and the pledge of the government to maintain the parity of gold and silver.

The house was then made up of 118 democrats and 29 republicans for free coinage, and 120 republicans and 22 democrats "for a sound and a safe currency."

Although Senator Sherman was the author of the best features of the bill the democratic press has insisted upon saddling upon him and the republican party the full responsibility for the bill and its workings.

The republican party as a party is not responsible for this law, and the party stands today for its repeal and demand that "Every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the government shall be as good as any other dollar."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Boston Post celebrated the Fourth by issuing a red, white and blue edition and sending trains from Boston to the summit of Mt. Washington and to Provincetown, distributing free its twelve-page sheet for "glory" all the way. It was a rockety advertising scheme, and ought to result in something more golden than sparks!

The appointment of Charles McChesney of Norwich as a member of the board of county commissioners by Gov. Morris is very gratifying to Norwich democrats; and in the reappointment of Mr. Batty of Groton he retains a good and experienced republican who is satisfactory to his party in this county. Senator Crandall was for F. W. Tracy of Preston, and preferred him. Mr. McChesney has been upon the board and is familiar with the duties of the office. Probably Gov. Morris does not care whether Senator Crandall is satisfied or not!

The New York Tribune combating the ideas of ex-Senator Henderson of Missouri with reference to the disposition of the silver in the treasury says: "The fact is that the stock of silver held by the United States could not be sold at any price, and the actual loss is the entire amount which has been paid to acquire that useless bulk of silver. Even if the United States were to sell only a portion of its silver, say $50,000,000 in value at a time, it would quickly so depress the price and so gorge the markets of the world that it would become impossible to get a bid at any price for any more of the metal. Since the suspension of silver coinage in India the case is even clearer than it was before, but Germany learned to its cost the impracticability of selling any large amount of silver before the market had become demoralized."

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

A Wild Team!

Ex-President Harrison's remark that the repeal of the silver law depends upon Mr. Cleveland's ability "to drive his wild team" is a pretty pungent characterization of our democratic congress. It is true, all the same.—[Boston Journal.

Can't Help Coming!

Fourth of July cannot help coming once a year, and it is just as well. We can nerve ourselves to bear it when we have peace during 364 other days in which to prepare for and recover from the shock our nervous system has to endure.—[New Britain Herald.

Brought to Naught.

It has now been discovered that the deserters who are pensioned were men who were absent from their commands, and that some of them were unable to report by reason of wounds and were discharged from hospitals. Thus is the work of loud reformers brought to naught.—[Indianapolis Journal.

Keep Cool, Anyhow.

August is not a very comfortable month in Washington, but congressmen should make up their minds to keep cool anyhow, do what they are called together to do as speedily as possible and then go home.—[Springfield Union.

We're Not Proud of It.

One Yankee invention which nobody takes much pride in is the so-called dynamite cannon cracker. It is a terribly fatal toy, and it slaughters every Fourth of July about as many persons as fall in an average South American revolution.—[Boston Journal.

An Undeveloped Conundrum.

Money is tight, because it is locked up; a man is locked up because he is tight. This ought to make a good answer to some kind of a conundrum; but we haven't time to develop it.—[New York Tribune.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

Set Him Right.

Geo. Augustus Sala, the well known English writer, on his last Australian trip, wrote as follows to The London Daily Telegraph:

"I especially have a pleasant remembrance of the ship's doctor—a very experienced maritime medico indeed, who tended me most kindly during a horrible spell of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, provoked by the fog which had swooped down on us just after we left San Francisco. But the doctor's prescriptions and the increasing warmth of the temperature as we neared the Tropics, and, in particular, a couple of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS clapped on—one on the chest and another between the shoulder blades—soon set me right."

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to ensure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

For Over Fifty Years

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc. The long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are considerably weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

You toilers in works of necessity and mercy, who to the number of four thousand use the Electric cars on Sunday, (the Evening Record of May 15,) which, by the way, are cheerfully run every fifteen minutes in order to aid you in your good work. To you my sympathy goes out, for there is in our city one in suffering who imposes needless hardship on you. Heretofore I have made your labors comparatively easy by keeping your skins cool and tongues moist through the sultry summer Sundays. But, now, our City Attorney can by no manner of means allow me to refresh you with my innocuous and delicious beverage "On Sundays between Sunrise and Sunset."

So I sit on my little stool of repentance now Sundays and wonder why in the world I was allowed to be so wicked all these 15 years, and also why the people of every race and walk of life in town helped me break this law, for you know I could not break it alone.

De quarest 'ligion I ebber did hear
Is de 'ligion ob de abnostick.
He hain't like de ledges dat de virgins hab,
'Calse he can't show de littlest wick!
He nebber has sat on de mo'ners' bench
Nor listened fur der Spirit's call,
An de onliest preachin he ebber has done
Is, "I don't know nuttin at all!"

De quarest 'ligion I ebber did hear
Is de 'ligion ob de abnostick.
For he gets on [illegible] to smokin room
[illegible] help [illegible] de souls dat is sick!
He's a standin now; but, yo' take my word,
He'll drap 'pin de gospil wall;
If his heart don' thump at the judgment trump,
'Den I don' know nuttin at all!

MARRIAGE MAXIMS.

Never taunt with a past mistake.

Never allow a request to be repeated.

Never [illegible] be angry at the same time.

Never meet without a loving welcome.

Let self denial be the daily aim and practice of each.

Never [illegible] in company.

Never let the sun go down upon any anger or grievance.

Neglect the whole world besides rather than one another.

Let each one strive to yield obedience to the wishes of the other.

Never make a remark at the expense of the other—it is a meanness.

Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence.

Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed, and always speak lovingly.

The very nearest approach to domestic happiness on earth is in the cultivation on both sides of absolute unselfishness.

Never let any fault you have committed go by until you have frankly confessed it and asked forgiveness.—Boston Budget.

ARCHITECTURAL.

The pyramids of Egypt were begun about B. C. 1860.

The largest room in the world, unbroken by pillars, is a drill hall in St. Petersburg, 620 feet by 150.

There were over 100 colossal statues in the city of Rhodes besides the great bronze image that bestrode the harbor.

Solomon's temple was 107 feet long, 36 feet broad and 54 feet high. Though deemed a wonder of the world, it was not larger than many private houses of the present time.

The porcelain pagoda in China had nine stories of the combined height of 260 feet, and the pinnacle was 148 feet above the highest story. It derived its name from being covered with plates of porcelain. It cost 3,466,000 ounces of silver.

THE MOVING WORLD.

All twisted boring tools are of American invention.

Fourth of July Was Fast and Furious.

WHAT NEW YORKERS DID.

There Were Flag Raisings, Concerts, Speeches, Picnickings, Etc.

New York, July 4.—Joyously rang the chimes of Grace church as the Fourth of July, 1893, came in. Brightly blazed the bonfires over in rambling old Greenwich. Loudly sounded the cheers from [illegible] throats in the Perry Street Methodist Episcopal church when the "Watch Night of Liberty," conducted by the Washington Continental Guards, came to an end with the stroke of 12. And then, while [illegible] New Yorkers as were awake congratulated each other, fireworks in a noisy [illegible] up the whole west side, and the glorious Fourth could be said to have [illegible] started on its [illegible].

The day is being more generally observed in and around the city than ever before. There was a parade early this morning under the auspices of the Washington Continental Guards. Captain John G. Norman was grand marshal. Among the other organizations which paraded were the John Glasner association, the Mackey [illegible], the Cantoh Gesangverein, the Odd Fellows, the Bohemian Sick Benefit society, the Bohemian free schools, the John J. [illegible] association, employees of E. Jones, the [illegible] association, the [illegible] Pleasure club, the [illegible], the Steve Swett [illegible] association, the architectural iron workers and the [illegible] Pleasure club.

The [illegible] flag of the Continental Guards was hoisted over the old blockhouse in Central park at Fort [illegible] and at the [illegible]. [illegible] flag [illegible] the [illegible] at the Battery.

[illegible]

The Tammany Society of Columbian Order, while the guards were parading, began its celebration in the wigwam in East Fourteenth street. Bayne's Sixty-ninth Regiment band played national airs, [illegible] Sachem Thomas F. Gilroy made the address of welcome, after which the Tammany Glee club sang "The Land of the Free." Maurice F. Holahan read the Declaration of Independence, and there were "long talks" by Speaker Crisp, Representative John Allen of Mississippi, Colonel John R. Fellows and Benton McMillin of Tennessee. Among those who made "short talks" were [illegible] of Maryland, Governor MacCorkle of West Virginia, Representative Wells of Wisconsin, Meyer and [illegible] of Louisiana, [illegible] Clark of [illegible] York [illegible]. Every member of the federal government was invited to attend, and Secretary McGoldrick read an interesting batch of replies.

The Robert T. Lincoln club had a flag raising and [illegible] at the clubhouse, 183 East Eighty-fifth street.

The Republican organization of the Twenty-second district celebrated at Frauger's [illegible], Broad and [illegible] streets, where [illegible] Continental officers.

The New York Society of the Cincinnati held its annual meeting and elected officers.

There was [illegible] to St. Anthony's [illegible], which included a [illegible] service and a picnic.

At Sulzer's park, on the Harlem river, there was a festival in aid of the Odd Fellows' Home and Orphan asylum.

Progressive Painters' union, No. 1, held an afternoon and evening picnic at Brommer's park, One Hundred and Thirty-third street and Willis avenue.

The Orangemen of this city, Brooklyn and Jersey City picnicked in Forest View grove on the Hudson.

The Shandy Gaff club of the First ward gave a dinner to Leader Michael C. Murphy at Cusick's hotel, 13 [illegible].

The annual festival and [illegible] of the New York Letter Carriers' [illegible] were held as usual at Lion park, One Hundred and Eighth street and Ninth avenue. Handsome gold and silver [illegible] were competed for, and there was dancing in two pavilions. Charles [illegible] of Station F, who has been a letter carrier for 40 years, led the grand march.

Lymington P. [illegible] delivered an address at the David B. Hill club's house, in East One Hundred and Twenty-third street.

The Young Men's Christian association of Harlem held a celebration at their headquarters in the evening.

The police of this city did all they could to keep down the noise. Superintendent Byrnes told the captains to enforce the ordinance against fireworks in the streets. The captains of river front precincts detailed men to all the docks from which excursions left to see that good order was maintained.

Collector Hendricks, in compliance with instructions from Secretary Carlisle, issued orders to his subordinates to exercise great vigilance in counting the passengers on excursion steamers.

In Brooklyn and New Jersey.

The day was quietly celebrated in Brooklyn. There was no military parade. The state, city and county flags were raised on the city hall and other public buildings, but owing to the refusal of the board of aldermen in failing to make an appropriation for a more generous display the usual exhibition of bunting was not given.

W. W. Stephenson Post, No. [illegible], G. A. R., raised "Old Glory" on the flagpole of Fort Greene at sunrise. This is the first time that a Grand Army post has been placed in charge of this public function by special permission of the mayor.

Henry Ward Beecher society, which is composed of colored soldiers and sailors, celebrated the day at Canarsie grove, where they held a picnic.

There was no [illegible] the navy yard [illegible] enjoyed a holiday, for which they will be paid, in accordance with the custom of the government.

The warships at the yard were trimmed with flags. Salutes were fired in honor of Independence day at noon.

Elizabeth, N. J., celebrated the day more elaborately than usual. There was a parade of militia, veterans and civic organizations and a town meeting, presided over by Mayor Rankin. Charles H. Winfield, prosecutor of Hudson county, was the orator.

Mother and Child Killed.

Ottawa, July 4.—Mrs. Paul Martin, with her 5-year-old daughter, attempted to board a train while it was moving. The mother slipped and fell under the wheels, dragging the child with her. Both were instantly killed.

[illegible] Niagara In a Gale.

Niagara Falls, July 4.—Clifford Calverly, the young wire walker, crossed the Niagara gorge near the cantilever bridge in the face of a wind that was blowing a gale in the center of the gorge.

OUTLAWS CAPTURED.

The Leaders of the Celebrated Starr Gang Are at Last In Prison and Part of Their Plunder Recovered.

Fayetteville, Ark., July 4.—Information has been received from Colorado Springs that Henry Starr and Kid Wilson, two members of the notorious Starr gang of bank robbers, who robbed the Bentonville bank some weeks ago, have been arrested there. The men arrived at the Spaulding House at a late hour with Mrs. Starr.

They registered as Frank Johnson and John Wilson, Joplin, Mo. The officers, after learning who the two men were, were afraid to approach them outright, and attempted to get the outlaws in a position to shoot on sight, but they separated, Henry Starr going into a coffee restaurant. The police followed him, and Marshal Dana caught one arm and Mat Wright another. Detective Atkins covered him with a pair of six shooters. He gave in without a struggle, [illegible] to them, "It is a good thing you got the drop or there would have been corpses around here."

The officers then went to Colorado City and captured Kid Wilson, leader of the gang. He was armed with a 45 [illegible] gun and would have made desperate resistance if the officers had not first got the drop on him. The officers went to the Spaulding House and woke up the woman, who was registered as Mrs. Jackson, but who is really the wife of Henry Starr. She is about 20 years of age and rather pretty. She said she was married to Starr about six months ago. Her home is about 200 miles east of here.

Search of the room was made, and under the pillow was $1,460 in new gold pieces, and $900 in gold was found in a drawer. She carried a pearl handled revolver of 32 calibre. She was closely questioned and admitted that the men captured were Henry Starr and Kid Wilson. With the money which the marshals on them fully $6,000 was recovered.

AN EXCITING ROLL CALL.

A Camden Policeman Tried to Murder His Lieutenant In the Station.

Camden, N. J., July 4.—Patrick Clark, a Third ward policeman, made two attempts at roll call to murder Lieutenant John S. Smith.

Clark entered the station house under the influence of drink and proceeded to where the lieutenant stood. He pulled his revolver from his pocket and fired two shots, when Smith fell to the floor. As Clark raised his arm to shoot the third time Chief of Police Davis grabbed his arm. The bullet from the revolver was embedded in the floor.

The room was crowded with policemen at the time. The lieutenant had part of his ear shot away by the first bullet, and the second [illegible] grazed the skull above the ear. Clark was arrested and placed in a cell. He declared that he intended to kill Smith and was willing to hang if his aim had been successful.

Clark had a grievance against Smith, who had ordered him to appear before the chief for dereliction of duty.

ANOTHER BRIDGE JUMPER.

He Is the Fourteenth and Will Probably Not Live.

New York, July 4.—Edward McCarthy, aged 21, a bartender, jumped from the Brooklyn bridge and sustained injuries which will probably result in death. Judging from his last conversation before taking his leap, he was anxious to emulate the example of Steve Brodie and share in the bridge jumper's notoriety.

When taken from the river his side was black from foot to shoulder where he struck the water, his body resembling that of Gibbons, after the latter had taken his fatal jump. McCarthy suffered terribly from hemorrhages at the mouth for an hour after he was taken out of the water.

This is the fourteenth case of jumping from the Brooklyn bridge and the third in two weeks. McCarthy jumped through a greater space than any of his predecessors.

Tried to Kill the Family.

Jersey City, July 4.—Mrs. Golkus, a Polish Jewess, who keeps a boarding house at 412 Clinton street, has two daughters—Kate, aged 18, and Louisa, aged 16. Among her boarders was Isaac Leitschoftus. He asked Kate to go to the theater. She refused and a quarrel ensued, in which the whole family became involved. Leitschoftus finally became enraged with anger and drew a five chambered revolver, with which he shot Kate behind the ear. The second shot wounded Mrs. Golkus in the side. Leitschoftus then turned the pistol toward himself and put the remaining bullet into his right temple. The wounded were taken to St. Mary's hospital. Leitschoftus will die. The others will recover.

A Break In the Canal.

Rochester, July 4.—A break in the embankment of the Erie canal occurred at a point of the three mile level about three miles east of the city. It was occasioned by the starting out of a waste culvert which runs underneath the canal. The break continued to enlarge until about 80 feet of the embankment was carried away.

Outlaw Sontag Dies In Jail.

Fresno, Cal., July 4.—Outlaw John Sontag died in jail. He with his companion, Chris Evans, the bandit who so long evaded pursuers in the mountains near Visalia, were captured by a posse June 11 after a desperate battle in which both outlaws were wounded. Evans, whose arm was amputated, is slowly recovering.

Boy Burned In the Stable.

Camden, N. J., July 4.—The stable of William Mitchell was burned, and after the flames had been extinguished the charred body of 4-year-old Arthur Mitchell, the nephew of the owner of the building, was found in the ruins by the firemen.

The Reading Defaults Payment.

Philadelphia, July 4.—The Reading Railroad company has defaulted in the payment of both principal and interest of Lancaster and Quarryville bonds, which it guarantees, and which matured on Saturday.

Survived a Stroke of Lightning.

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 4.—During a terrible thunderstorm several barns were destroyed by lightning. An Italian employed at the Plattsburgh barracks was struck by lightning, but recovered from the shock.

A Free Coinage Convention.

Topeka, July 4.—A. C. Shinn, vice president for Kansas in the American Bimetallic league, has issued a call for a free coinage convention to be held in Topeka Thursday, July 20.

Sullivan Marries Rose Coughlan.

New York, July 4.—The report in theatrical circles that John T. Sullivan, the actor, had been married to Rose Coughlan was confirmed.

Two Incendiary Fires.

Fall River, Mass., July 4.—There were two incendiary fires, closely following each other, here. The first one was set in one of a long row of wooden stores on North Main street and caused a loss of $1,000. The second was in Cook, Borden & Co.'s [illegible]. This [illegible] was difficult to extinguish, and did damage amounting to $10,000.

[illegible] Post's [illegible] Appeal.

New York, July 4.—The committee of five of the disbanded Farnham post, G. A. R., are out with a lengthy report, setting forth the post's side of the now famous case, in which they were put out of the G. A. R. for passing the resolutions, condemning present pension practices.

Work For the Life Savers.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 4.—Life Savers Slover and Shible of the Asbury Park bathing grounds rescued two men from drowning. The first man was John Thorne, a cottager from New York, and the second man was Mr. Drew from San Francisco.

Stabbed by Her Jealous Husband.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 4.—Louis Massey, colored, in a fit of jealous rage, attacked his wife with a knife, stabbing her twice in the side. The woman's injuries are serious if not fatal. Massey disappeared.

Tried to Wreck a Royal Train.

Berlin, July 4.—It is reported that a futile attempt was made to wreck the train of the czarewitch, near Bubsburg, while he was on his way to London to attend the royal wedding.

Killed His Brother.

Philadelphia, July 4.—While carelessly handling a revolver, William Barthel, aged 19 years, shot and almost instantly killed his brother Harry, five years younger.

Murdered in the Milkhouse.

New York, July 4.—A murder, brought about by a drunken row, occurred in the milkhouse on the farm of William Ascher at East Meriditb, this state. Andrew Reynolds, better known as Doc Reynolds, shot and killed James Reynolds. The murderer fled, but was captured and lodged in the Delphi jail.

Governor Altgeld's Mother Dead.

Toledo, July 4.—Mrs. Peter Altgeld, mother of Governor Altgeld of Illinois, died at her home near Mansfield.

THE SUMMER GIRL.

The 18-year-old daughter of Mrs. Nellie Grant-Sartoris, Vivian May, is said to be devoting herself especially to the study of elocution.

Alice M. Cheney began business as an express messenger in Boston four years ago. She now has three offices and five teams in daily use.

Mrs. Molly E. N. Davis of New Orleans, a literary woman of some merit, has in that city the nearest approach it affords to a literary salon.

Mary Wales, an ancient Boston spinster who died recently, left her entire fortune, amounting to about $8,000, to her pet Thomas cat, called Otto.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton is nearly 77 years old, but in spite of her age her energy and hopefulness and interest in every phase of life and thought are unbounded.

So valuable are her jewels that Mrs. Potter Palmer never attends a ball or party of any kind to which she wears them without a private detective to form a part of her escort.

Brigham Young's first wife is described as a sweet, dignified woman of 72, of medium size, with a gentle face, kindly gray eyes and gray hair drawn back over either side of her temples.

The Princess Bismarck conducts her house on the most delightfully free and easy plan. Breakfast is served at all hours in the morning, each member of the family and each guest appearing only when ready.

Ellen Terry, whenever she signs her name in response to a request, adds a few words asking that a "few pence" be sent towards a free bed which she wishes to establish in a London hospital. It is to be known as the "autograph bed."

Mrs. A. B. Marshall of London is at the head of the largest cooking school in the world. She recently gave an object lesson in preparing a ball supper for 100 guests, preparing everything in the elaborate menu of 40 dishes herself.

The original of H. Rider Haggard's terrible and ageless beauty, "She who must be obeyed," is, or rather was, the first wife of the English novelist, who was divorced from him, and is now living with her third husband on the Pacific coast. She was a Miss Carroll of Baltimore.

Mrs. Daniel Lamont enjoys quite a reputation for originality of decorations. She does not depend entirely on floral decorations, but trusts for charming effects to the use of tapestries and even rugs, which are sometimes hung in the hall and along the stairway in a most unique manner.

FIN, FEATHER AND FUR.

A porcupine fish, having thorns instead of scales, was caught a few days ago in St. Andrew's bay, Florida.

Something strange lately affected the fish in Hong Kong waters. For many days they were in a state of stupor and allowed themselves to be caught by hand, making no effort to escape.

The Chinese have bred a whole colony of goldfish, each having two well developed tails and two sets of anal fins. Biologists say it would be equally easy to breed quadrupeds with eight legs.

The great gorilla at the Berlin aquarium is said to be very much of a gentleman. He takes a bath every morning, uses knife, fork and napkin in a becoming manner and in other respects conducts himself with propriety.

"As thick as the hair on a dog's back" expresses nothing in Mexico, for the Mexican dog is utterly devoid of hair on its back or anywhere else. The hot climate having rendered it superfluous, Mother Nature kindly divested him of it.

Birds with long legs always have short tails. Writers on the flight of birds have shown that the only use of a bird's tail is to serve as a rudder during the act of flight. When birds are provided with long legs these are stretched directly behind when the bird is flying and so act as a sort of rudder.

RAILWAY RUMBLES.

Pullman sleeping and dining cars are being used on all of the three railroads in South Africa.

J. J. Frey, new general manager of the Santa Fe, has issued stringent rules to the effect that all employees of the company must wear uniforms when on duty.

The completion of the Great Northern railway was celebrated at St. Paul recently by a general suspension of business, elaborate decorations and a long street parade.

The famous Khajak tunnel of India pierces the Khwaja Amran mountains about 60 miles north of Quetta at an elevation of 6,400 feet. It is 12,800 feet long and was constructed broad enough to carry a double line of rails.

An exhibition was made on the Central Railroad of New Jersey recently of a passenger car fitted with electric lights and apparatus for running them by means of gearing worked from the axles of the car. Two residents of Newark devised the plan, and it is stated that the experiment worked satisfactorily.

Dr. Klemperer of Berlin has become convinced by patient experiments and observation that proof against cholera infection can be best secured by the use of milk from an immunized goat.

To Whom it May Concern.

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED THAT at a meeting of the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich, held at the Council Chamber, July 3, A. D. 1893, the following ordinance was adopted.
Attest: ARCHIBALD S. SPALDING,
City Clerk and Clerk of the Court of Common Council.

AN ORDINANCE FOR THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH IN THE CITY OF NORWICH.

Be it ordained by the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich:

Section 1. The Health Committee of the City of Norwich shall have power to give orders to the person or persons owning or occupying any premises in said city on which is located any privy or cesspool which in the opinion of said committee, or a majority of them, is [illegible] to health, [illegible] the use of such privy or cesspool. [illegible] shall be in writing signed by said Health Committee, or a majority of them, a [illegible] of which the said committee or the [illegible] shall after [illegible] to such person or persons [illegible] the Clerk of the City Court of [illegible], and any person who shall after receiving such order, use or permit to be used said privy or cesspool, or permit any [illegible] of any kind to [illegible], shall be fined not less than [illegible] dollars, nor more than fifty [illegible] each offense.

Sec. 2. Every person who shall sell or offer to sell in the City of Norwich to any person [illegible] or other kind of [illegible] for use in the [illegible] of [illegible] of animal or [illegible] [illegible] from any [illegible] which any [illegible] or any [illegible] or the contents of any privy [illegible] or [illegible] any such part of any [illegible] water or [illegible] within [illegible] of the place where any sewer [illegible] or where any [illegible] of any privy are [illegible] [illegible] and every person who shall in said city [illegible] for the purpose of [illegible] any [illegible] or other kind of [illegible] for sale, shall be fined fifty dollars for each offense.

I hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

It is an old theory that new wood is entitled to three coats of paint, but many new houses have but two coats of Chilton Paint, and are then allowed to stand two or three years before they are painted again and then only one coat. Can you not profit by this suggestion? In painting your house this year get estimates on one, two and three coats. If the house is in fair condition and there is not too much difference between the shade you are to put on and the one on the house, probably one coat will suffice. If not one, two coats will surely answer. What is the use then of putting on three? We have had painters tell us that they had painted houses with Chilton Paint where the house looked better after two coats than three—upon being asked why then they put on three, they answered that they were obliged to as the contract called for three. Word your contracts so you can stop when you have gone far enough. Put Chilton Paint over a dry surface only.

Officer Toomey will probably be put on regular duty at Thamesville tonight.

A number of fire balloons crossed the upper part of the city Tuesday evening.

Dr. Faunce leaves the city this morning to be absent until the first week in September.

The steam yacht Cosette was bannered from stem to stern Tuesday in honor of the natal day of the republic.

The first issue of The Mid Ocean, a paper published during the summer season at Block Island, will be issued July 8.

Mr. George C. Raymond returned Tuesday from a week's inspection of the Wicker stock farm at Ticonderoga, N. Y.

Sword fish are reported to be numerous this season. The fishing crews along the coast have made large hauls the past week.

George F. Rice, formerly clerk on the boats of the Norwich & New York Transportation company, was in town on the Fourth.

Miss Mary E. Bidwell of the East Broad street school started Tuesday with a company of out-of-town friends for the World's fair.

A Stonington fisherman caught 190 bluefish during three days of the past week. He took the fish from the waters near Block Island.

The city missionary's office at 9 Washington street will be open through the months of July and August between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock a. m.

At 10.30 a. m. today at 9 Washington street, there will be a public meeting of the United Workers to accept the amendment of their charter passed by the last general assembly.

A giant cracker thrown by mischievous boys shattered two panes of glass and ripped great gaps in the door of Charles Wing's laundry on lower Broadway early Tuesday morning.

By the disagreeing of the two branches of the legislature at the close of the session the city of Willimantic, which begins its existence next November, will be without a city court.

There is being constructed at Palmer's shipyard, Noank, an immense railroad transfer float for the Lake Erie & Western railroad company. Its dimensions are 250 feet long, 34 feet wide and 9 feet high.

The Sunday schools of Christ and Trinity churches will picnic at Allyn's Point tomorrow. Special train leaves the foot of Ferry street at 10 a. m. and returns at 6 p. m. Tickets can be bought on the train.

The work of sinking an artesian well at Rocky Point has been commenced. The well will be sunk to a depth of about 250 feet, insuring a good supply of cool water for the thirsty visitors at that island this summer.

Tuesday Reid & Hughes exhibited in their window a good-sized representation of the Brooklyn bridge, done in red, white and blue cloth, with the model of a full-rigged, two masted schooner passing beneath it.

The strawberry crop from the west, but the supply is still equal to the demand. The crop of the present year, for quantity and quality, has never been exceeded within the memory of man, at least not in this section of the country.

Mrs. Joseph Hill of Cliff street has a bush that developed a novel rose malformation. When the rose had fully blossomed a perfect bud for a second rose formed in the heart of it. This is a freak not uncommon to some plants, but it does not often occur in the rose.

Frederick Allen Johnson's schooner yacht Monhegan has sailed from New London for Cape Cod and the east with Robert J. Cook and family on board. Captain Johnson left Tuesday for his Canadian club, where he will enjoy two weeks' fishing with his father and brother.

Henry B. Peckham, who died suddenly in Westerly Saturday, was a member of the Watch Hill life saving crew and had done good service in that position. At one time when a schooner caught fire off Watch Hill he was one of the number who rendered aid and saved the vessel.

Lawrence Riley, the truckman whose ankle was fractured Monday, was removed in the ambulance Tuesday from his home on North Main street to the Sheltering Arms. A remarkable coincidence is that Riley fell off his truck and was hurt exactly a year ago from the date of this latest accident.

The funeral of Miss Mary A. Roath took place from her late home on North Main street Tuesday morning. The Rev. R. H. Nelson of Christ church conducted the impressive services, and a choir, composed of Misses Colt and London and Messrs. Crocker and Converse, sang sweetly. The floral offerings were choice and many, testifying to the esteem and affection in which the deceased was held. The sepulture was in Yantic cemetery.

The steamer City of Richmond carried nearly five hundred excursionists to Rocky Point from this city Tuesday and as many more from New London. The vessel arrived home at midnight, and all the patrons spoke in complimentary terms of the trip. Two hours and a half were spent at Rocky Point, and the journey to and fro was delightful. The City of Richmond carries an excursion from Providence to New York Saturday night, and one from Hartford next week Tuesday.

Should Do Something.

If the Harvard boating authorities take The Boston Advertiser's advice, they will now look up the best professional coach in the market, offer him a big enough salary to command his services, send him across the Atlantic to study English strokes, and then put him in absolute charge of the young men who are to row at New London and require everybody else to keep hands off.

Shot While at Work.

While James Beswick was shingling on a building in Bozrahville on the Fourth, he was accidentally shot by a young man. The ball, 22-calibre in size, entered and passed through the thigh of Mr. Beswick, making a lodgment in the spinal column. Dr. Stark of this city was called and extracted the ball. Mr. Beswick will probably recover.

How the Chinese Use Firecrackers.

Fourth of July celebrations call to mind the manner in which the Chinese, the originators of gunpowder, make use of firecrackers in their celebrations. A number of large packs of the crackers are strung together, end to end, and the string thus made is hung from a rafter or from any horizontal piece of timber. When the lower pack is fired, the whole string is gradually ignited, and the result is a very noisy and brilliant one.

JOURNALISTIC OUTING.

Rhode Island Members of the Guild Will Spend a Week on Block Island.

The journalists from all over Rhode Island are going on an outing for one week to Block Island, beginning next Monday. The party will number about 200. President Irving Watson has arranged an excellent programme. Ex-Governor Ladd will address the members on Thursday evening, while Kate Field of Washington will speak on Friday night. The Hon. R. B. Herbert, president of the National Editorial association, and Prof. Buckley of Mystic will be the orators on Friday. Hops and bluefishing are also among the attractions.

BASE BALL.

Clippers Defeated by the Websters.

The Clippers went to Webster yesterday and were defeated by the team of that place by a score of 11 to 5. The Websters had Donahue, lately of the New Yorks, in the box. Driscoll and Moore, the two Clipper pitchers, had lame arms and were unable to pitch. Counihan filled in the gap for the Clippers and with good support the result would have been different. The features of the game were the batting of Driscoll for the Clippers and Whalen for Webster, also running catch by Fogarty. The score:

CHELSEA ON THE ROCKS.

The Norwich Propeller Grounds on Bartlett's Reef—Narrow Escape of the City of Lawrence.

The propeller Chelsea, Captain Smith, ran aground on Bartlett's reef, two miles west of New London, on the trip from New York city, at 1.30 o'clock Tuesday morning. The tide was running ebb at the time, and the vessel clung tenaciously to the reef.

An hour later the steamer City of Lawrence, Captain Gee, came bowling along, followed the course of the Chelsea and had grated on the rocks before the danger was discovered and averted. The officers of the Chelsea claim the Lawrence refused to render them assistance, while on the other side it is denied that a request was made.

At about 3 o'clock Mate Cox of the Chelsea took two deck hands, and started shoreward for help. The night was dark as the grave, and land was not reached till near 5 o'clock, when, at Pleasant Beach, Wrecker Scott of New London was summoned by telegraph. He arrived with a tug and lighter two hours later, but at 9.30, flood tide, the vessel floated without artificial appliances. She was not injured in the least by the mishap, and arrived at her dock in this city shortly before noon safe and sound.

It is said that the Bartlett's reef lightship bell was preserving absolute silence.

CASUALTIES ON THE FOURTH.

Manager Stannard Suffers Severe Injuries—Several Slight Accidents.

The experience of Mr. G. E. Stannard, the capable local manager for the Southern New England Telephone company, was one of the most serious of the Fourth of July accidents. While loading a heated cannon about 6.30 o'clock last night at his house on Park street, the piece exploded, filling the air with the flying metal. The little finger on Mr. Stannard's left hand was blown completely off, the two adjoining fingers were deprived of their ends, and he was painfully cut and bruised about the body. Night Telephone Operator John Cristinger was struck by one of the flying missiles in the leg, but no bones were broken. Dr. Almy attended the sufferers.

Fred, the 16 year-old son of Taxidermist Alonzo E. Hill, was badly burned on the left hand at noon at his home, 316 Franklin street, by the premature discharge of a cannon he was loading. Dr. Cassidy is in charge of the case.

Brakeman Henry Allen of the Norwich & Worcester railroad may lose the sight of an eye for holding a lighted giant firecracker in his hand. Dr. G. R. Harris is rendering all possible service.

Earl S. Conant had his right hand badly scorched early Tuesday morning by the explosion of a big cannon-cracker which he was holding. Dr. G. R. Harris is the attendant physician.

At 9.30 o'clock last night the eight-year-old son of Nicholas Tarrant had his face burned and filled with powder by a giant-cracker explosion. Dr. Cassidy attended the case.

Edwin, the ten-year-old son of Mr. E. S. Ely of Washington street, is lamenting his rash act of adding a lighted piece of punk to a pocketful of firecrackers. The explosion which ensued burned one side of his body painfully. Dr. Almy dressed the wounds.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

And They Were Quickly Attended to by the Department.

Independence day brought forth two small fires. Chief Engineer Greenberg was on duty constantly all day, ready to wage warfare against the fire fiend at a moment's notice.

Shortly before 9 a. m. flames were discovered on the roof of the house 36 Yantic street, owned by the Blackstone estate, and occupied by the gardener, Frederick Langenbach. An alarm was sounded, to which the firemen responded promptly. The blaze was extinguished by the William M. Williams hose. The loss is $150; insured. The origin is credited to Fourth of July pyrotechnics.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night the department was called to Greeneville by an alarm from box 27. The fire was located in a heap of wood against a Ninth street woodshed, and was quenched by the application of several pails of water. It was a needless alarm.

LAUREL HILL CELEBRATES.

Antiques and Horribles, Followed by Sunnyside Athletic Club Games.

On Laurel Hill the nation's birthday was appropriately commemorated. At 5 o'clock the Horribles made a parade to the bridge and return. Although fewer in numbers and not so gorgeously costumed as two years ago they were amusing, and drew out many spectators as they marched to the music of the band.

In the afternoon the Sunnyside Athletic club held a well-attended picnic in the beautiful Sunnyside grounds. The officers of the association are John Hagberg, president, and Otis Winchester, secretary and treasurer.

The results in the different events were as follows:

Running broad jump, D. Harrington 18 feet, 10½ inches; C. Hagberg, 16 feet, 8 inches.

High kick, C. Hagberg, 8 feet; J. Hagberg, 7 feet, 6 inches.

Fifty yards dash, Thos. Gleddenning, first prize; Wm. Skarstrom, second.

Putting 16-pound shot, J. A. Hagberg, 30 feet, 11 inches; Wm. Skarstrom, 30 feet 11 inches.

Pole vault, Thos. Gleddenning, 9 feet; Wm. Skarstrom, 8 feet, 9 inches—scratch.

Hop, step and jump, D. Harrington, 37 feet 9 inches; John Jencks, 36 feet, 9 inches.

Running high jump, J. A. Hagberg, 5 feet; William Skarstrom, 4 feet 9½ inches.

Standing broad jump, William Skarstrom, 9 feet 5½ inches; John Hagberg, 9 feet 5 inches.

Half mile run, Thomas Gleddenning, first prize; William Skarstrom, second.

Race for boys, Perry Corning, first prize; Eugene Saunders, second.

Girls' race, Annie Hagberg, first prize; Laura [illegible], second.

[illegible] race, Eugene Saunders, first prize, Harry Watrous, second.

Major Fox was judge at the start, and Mr. H. B. Hamilton judge at the finish. The record of events was efficiently kept by Mr. H. D. Brown and Mr. Frank Nichols. Handsome silver medals for first prizes, bronze medals for second, and ribbons for the races were awarded the victors. Light refreshments were provided, and a quiet social time was enjoyed by all.

Wm. Skarstrom who took one silver and five bronze medals, has done good work in the New York gymnasium and in the gymnasium at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn. An injury to his knee has kept him out of professional contests this season.

DIED.

WEBSTER—In Taftville, July 4, Isabella L., wife of Thomas H. Webster, aged 22 years and 4 months.

PANIC ON THE PLATFORM.

100 Persons Trampled Upon in the Scramble.

WERE VISITORS AT THE FAIR.

Employes Became Alarmed and Frightened the Crowd.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 5.—At the elevated station at the World's fair grounds last night there was a panic.

When the crush after the fireworks was greatest the elevated employes became alarmed at the size of the crowd gathered on the platform and stopped any more of them from coming up the steps, telling them it was not safe. This precipitated a panic on the platform, and in the scramble at least 100 people were trampled upon.

Fifteen persons were sent to the hospitals in ambulances when it was over. Nearly all of them had fainted, and nine of them were seriously injured.

BASE BALL.

Pittsburg 3, Baltimore 0.

PITTSBURG, July 5.—The Baltimores could not hit Killen timely today and were shut out. Mullane kept Pittsburg's hits well scattered. Jennings's errors were responsible for Pittsburg's two runs. Umpire McLaughlin had McGraw sent off the grounds and fined him $25 for back talk. Attendance 1,[illegible]. Score:

CLEVELAND, O., July 5.—The tie game of the Fourth of July morning was played off this afternoon and Cleveland won by better batting at the finish. Dailey made a home run drive. Attendance 1,800. Score:

Cleveland......0 [illegible]—9
Brooklyn.......0 [illegible]—7

Hits, Cleveland 12, Brooklyn 10; errors, Cleveland 4, Brooklyn 8; batteries, Young and Zimmer, Kennedy and Dailey.

Farmer Killed by the Cars.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 5.—Isaac R. Clark was struck by a train while driving a load of hay across the Main street crossing at Northampton this noon. The gates were up and no signal was given until the team was in front of the express train. Clark's injuries are probably fatal. A boy who was on the load of hay had several ribs broken.

Christian Endeavor Society Welcomed at Montreal.

MONTREAL, July 5.—A paper this evening said: "We welcome the Christian Endeavor society and we hope all its members will return to their homes satisfied with Catholic Montreal."

In five of the city churches tonight prayer meetings were held with addresses from some of the prominent Christian Endeavor delegates.

The congregations were large. At the St. James [illegible] church an address was made by the Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman of Albany, N. Y., on "Receiving the Holy Ghost for Power."

The Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler of Brooklyn spoke at the Erskine Presbyterian church. His theme was "The Prayer that hath Power."

At St. Matthew's Presbyterian church, "Some Pressing Needs and How to Supply Them" was the subject dealt with this evening.

At the American Presbyterian church, an individual consecration service for the delegates was conducted by Rev. H. G. Porter of Albany, N. Y.

A British Flag Raised at the Story Grammar School.

BOSTON, July 5.—An individual unknown crawled into the Story Grammar school building at Marblehead, yesterday, and hoisted a British flag to the pole. It was hauled down before the indignant populace had a chance to do it themselves.

1,000 Persons Drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—Advices from China state that one of the branches of the Welling river has overflowed in consequence of heavy rains. At Shaking and Woole, it is estimated over 1,000 persons were drowned, and as many left homeless. Incessant rains are the cause of the overflow. It is said that nearly 4,000 people have been crushed and drowned in the district covered by the flood.

Run on a Pueblo Bank.

PUEBLO, Col., July 5.—A run was started on the First National bank but it did not last long. The Central National, however, closed up at once and the Western National closed when an unusual number of callers for money appeared. These are all sound concerns. The Western National has deposits of over $1,000,000. The Central National has assets of $[illegible].

Will Assist the Strikers.

BOSTON, July 5.—The machinists' lodges and unions of Boston, also from the moulders', brass workers' and core makers' unions have decided to assist the Sturtevant Blower company's striking employes. Today the invitation extended to the strikers to return to work by Superintendent Foss was not accepted.

The Latin Union Interests to Be Protected.

ROME, July 5.—Negotiations are proceeding between the governments of Italy, France, Belgium and Switzerland, looking to the protection of the interests of the nations composing the Latin union, in consequence of the action of the government of India, in regard to the silver currency of India.

It is believed that none of the members of the union will withdraw from it. In Berne, the minting of one-half, one and two franc pieces has been almost suspended. A few franc pieces are still being coined.

Attempted Suicide in a Justice Court.

DEDHAM, Mass., July 5.—A sensational scene occurred in the office of Trial Justice Wakefield, when Charles Barron, a war veteran 63 years old, who had just been sentenced to three month's imprisonment for drunkenness, drew a razor across his throat making a terrible wound. Before he could make a second attempt to end his life, he was disarmed. A doctor was summoned and the man may recover.

704 Deaths from Cholera.

LONDON, July 5.—The Lancet says: There has been 704 deaths from cholera in the southern part of France since May, and during the last four weeks 198 deaths from the same disease in Marseilles, 88 in Cette and 31 in Toulon.

CONNECTICUT CASUALTIES.

Norwalk Girl Dies from Powder Burns.

NORWALK, Conn., July 5.—Edith Catherine Keith, the [illegible]-year-old stepdaughter of W. J. Finch of South Norwalk, died this morning from powder burns received yesterday afternoon.

Cannon Bursts at Durham.

DURHAM, Conn., July 6.—While the glorious Fourth was being celebrated here yesterday afternoon, a large cast-iron cannon exploded near the house of Professor Rockwell. A huge piece of the cannon, weighing thirty pounds, was hurled through the side of the house, tearing down the staircase and bannisters. Fortunately no one was injured.

Young Girl Fatally Burned at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., July 5.—Lottie Bernd, the 10-year-old daughter of Jeremiah Bernd, a well known commission merchant of this city, is dying from the effects of burns received yesterday afternoon. While sitting on the veranda of her home she discovered that her clothing was on fire. She ran into the back room screaming. Several members of the family rushed to her assistance and extinguished the flames, but she was terribly burned. The lower part of her body suffered most. The physicians gives no hope of her recovery.

Hand Shattered by a Dynamite Cracker.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, Conn., July 5.—Mrs. Gustave Krykander of Pleasant street mistook a dynamite cracker for a Roman candle last evening, and while holding it in her right hand it exploded. The hand was so shattered that Drs. Parker and Tinker were obliged to amputate above the wrist.

A PHYSICIAN IN TROUBLE.

Arrested on a Grave Charge—Death of Miss Nesbitt.

ANSONIA, Conn., July 5.—Nellie Nesbitt of West Ansonia died this morning at her mother's residence from a criminal operation alleged to have been performed by Dr. W. H. Pulford, a homeopathic physician of this place.

The story as far as [illegible] be learned from unwilling physicians [illegible] that a hack drove up to Mrs. Nesbitt's residence last evening and a woman, whose name was unknown, entered and told Mrs. Nesbitt that her daughter was in the hack, sick with a fever. Neighbors assisted in carrying the girl into the house, and the hack drove away. Mrs. Nesbitt sent for Dr. Wilmot, who saw at once that it was a desperate case, and he sent for Dr. Conklin, the medical examiner. The girl was informed of the danger of death, and made an ante-mortem statement which [illegible] implicated Dr. Pulford.

Coroner Mix of New Haven was summoned by telephone, and after hearing the statement of those interested, he ordered Dr. Pulford's arrest and that no one, not even his counsel be allowed to see him.

The girl left Ansonia June 27 for New Haven to visit friends for a week, as her mother supposed. The hack in which she was brought to the house came from New Haven, and it is reported that Dr. Pulford was seen in it as it passed an electric light.

Miss Nesbitt was 21 years of age and had been employed in some of the largest dry goods stores in New Haven. The Nesbitt girl left her home in Ansonia, where she lived with her widowed mother, a [illegible] yesterday in company with a young man ostensibly to attend the Yale-Harvard ball game. She did not return until last night, when she was taken to her mother's house in a hack. She had been staying at the house of a well-known nurse in New Haven.

She made an ante-mortem statement. The operation was performed in Ansonia almost two weeks ago.

The author of Miss Nesbitt's trouble is known to Coroner Mix, who is investigating.

Killed by the Cars.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 5.—On the afternoon of the Fourth, a train on the South Manchester road struck a man walking the track about half a mile above the depot. The engineer did not see him until very close, owing to a curve and he did not leave the track when the whistle blew. His skull was crushed and both legs broken. In the brief second from the time the engineer saw him until he was struck, the engineer says that he appeared to be walking with a staggering gait. The body was not identified until this morning, when acquaintances recognized it as that of Henry Howe, aged about 40, a single man, who lived in the Buckingham section of Glastonbury.

Steamer Strikes an Iceberg.

MONTREAL, July 5.—Information has been received here that the steamer Lake Nipegon of the Beaver line, which hailed from Montreal on Tuesday last, struck an iceberg on Saturday in the straits of Belle Isle and was beached in Port Aubay. No information as to the extent of the damage has yet been received.—There were two saloon and twelve intermediate passengers who are safe. The vessel also carried 3,[illegible] cattle.

Railroad Station at Torrington Destroyed.

CAMPVILLE STATION, Conn., July 5.—The Naugatuck railroad station at this point was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, caused by careless discharge of fireworks. The structure was a wooden one and had been condemned some time ago. It was of little value.

Sold Bonded Exhibits.

CHICAGO, July 5.—Ivan Samnloy Lovetts, in charge of the Russian Silversmith company at the World's fair, and Lee Gare Robins Rabinovz, employe, were held to the federal grand jury today for trial in October. It is said Lovetts sold bonded exhibits to visitors. The customs laws in regard to the sale of exhibits still under bond will hereafter be rigidly enforced.

The Musical Congress at Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 5.—At the musical congress here today, a paper on "Temperament as Governing Effect in Vocal Music" was read by Miss Clara Munger of Boston. Miss Alice C. Fletcher of the Peabody Museum, Harvard university, made an address on "Music as Found in Certain North American Tribes." Louis C. Elson, musical editor of The Boston Advertiser, spoke on "Early Phases of American Music."

Elections by the Reichstag.

BERLIN, July 5.—The reichstag by a large majority elected Herr Von Levetzow, conservative president; Baron Von Buol, clerical first vice-president and Herr Buerklin, national liberal second vice-president. The army bill will be introduced in the reichstag on Friday next.

Bridgeport Builder Disappears.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 5.—Michael Healy, builder and contractor of this city, has been missing for a week past. He failed a short time ago. His liabilities are not known, but there are no assets known. No traces of Healy can be found.

RESCUERS STILL AT WORK.

The Bodies of Eighty-eight Dead Miners Recovered.

SLOW PROGRESS MADE.

A Hope that Some of the Men Have Reached Places of Safety.

LONDON, July 5.—The work of rescuing the living miners and of recovering the bodies of the dead is being pushed as rapidly as possible in Ingram's colliery, Thorn Hill, Yorkshire, the scene of yesterday's disastrous explosion that entombed the day shift of 145 men.

Volunteers for the work of rescue are numerous and the miners are working their way into the furthermost workings of the pit as expeditiously as can be expected in view of the fact that they have to remove enormous quantities of debris from the galleries.

Little progress was made last night, as the inner workings were still full of gas and the rescuing party could get only a little distance from the shaft.

Thus far the bodies of 88 dead miners, some of them terribly burned or crushed, have been sent to the surface. Other bodies can be seen in different parts of the mine, but they are pinned down with rocks and timbers and it will require some time and skill to remove them.

The bodies of some of the men do not show a sign of how death was caused. These men escaped the effects of the explosion, but were killed by the choke-damp that filled the mine after the explosive gas had taken fire.

The air in the pit was comparatively good today, and this leads to the hope that some of the men may have reached places of safety, and are still alive. It also allows the rescuers to work more steadily than they could have done in gas-impregnated air.

Many women and children are lingering about the mouth of the pit, and many distressing scenes are witnessed as the bodies of the dead are brought up and exposed to identification.

It is believed that of the 145 men in the mine at the time of the explosion, at least 110 are dead.

Late this evening the rescuers had brought 88 bodies to the surface. Two men were brought up in an unconscious condition but still breathing. The physicians took them in charge and hopes are entertained that they will recover. Six other men and a boy who had sustained no injury, but had been imprisoned by a mass of debris, were dug out this evening.

MORE RIOTING AT PARIS.

The Republican Guards Charge the Mob—Rioters Killed and Wounded.

PARIS, July 5—Midnight.—At 9:30 tonight a mob in the Boulevard St. Michael assumed a threatening attitude and the police drove the rioters down to the Place Maubert. There the mob made a stand, throwing every kind of missile on the police. A hand to hand fight continued until the police were reinforced by a large force of republican guards. When the rioters were dispersed, police and guards [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in the vicinity of the labor exchange now occupied by troops.

At 11 o'clock there was a conflict on the Rue Dauphine. The republican guards charged upon a mob with drawn swords and the police opened fire with revolvers upon the rioters. One was killed by a cut from a sabre. Others were wounded. Another mob upset and burned a tram car on the Rue Monge.

An assistant brigadier of police was found drowned near the Grenelle bridge and is supposed to have been thrown into the water by the mob. Two hundred persons were arrested today for participating in the disturbances. The streets are now deserted. It is said three policemen were thrown into the Seine by the mob during the rioting today and drowned. Forty-two policemen and sixteen republican guards were wounded during the fighting today. Eighteen kiosks were burned and forty-five others ransacked. The government has ordered reinforcements to Paris from the garrisons at Versailles, Melun and other places.

EIGHT SORROWFUL YEARS.

After Bitter Experiences Miss Baldwin Returns to Her Home.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., July 5.—Miss Eliza Baldwin has just returned to her friends in this city after an absence of eight years. During that time she has passed through bitter experiences, on account of the perfidy of the man who induced her to leave her home and friends. When she left she was a pretty and attractive girl, and was employed by William Chapman, who kept a candy store on Main street.

Notwithstanding the fact that Chapman had a wife and two children, he persuaded Miss Baldwin to elope with him, since which time nothing has been heard of them until a few days ago, when Miss Baldwin's friends received word from an attache of a hospital in Toronto, Canada, informing them that she was an inmate of the institution, and advising them that if she could return home and be cared for by friends her chances of recovery were good.

She arrived here a few days ago, but does not look like the same Miss Baldwin of eight years ago. Her story is a sad one. She lived with the man who took her away from home until three children were born to her, and then she was abandoned by him. One of the little ones died, and according to the story of the unfortunate girl, she has no knowledge of the whereabouts of the remaining two.

When she found herself abandoned, her mind gradually gave way under the terrible strain, and she was finally placed in an asylum for treatment. No one knows where Chapman is.

Mrs. Chapman has successfully conducted the confectionery business her husband left her in this city.

A Salem Frenchman Insults the Stars and Stripes.

BOSTON, July 5.—Napoleon Thibeault, a Frenchman, insulted the American flag yesterday at Salem, and Marshal Hart of the police caused him to make amends before the sun set behind the hills.

Thibeault raised the French flag with the American flag union down next to it over his house.

There were four of each kind raised over his house in this manner, and the Americans who witnessed the sight were wrathy before the order of things were changed by the order of the police.

The Fourth at Rome.

ROME, July 5.—The Hon. William Potter, American minister to Italy, celebrated the 4th of July by giving a dinner and reception at his residence in the Antici Mattei palace last night. Besides a number of Italian officials, all the prominent members of the American colony were present.

OPERA HOUSE BURNED.

A $50,000 Fire at New Haven—$40,000 Insurance.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 5.—At 3:30 this morning fire broke out in the New Haven Opera house, and when the flames were subdued, nearly three hours later, the building was damaged to the extent of $50,000 and is practically ruined. The fire broke out on the stage and gained considerable headway before it was discovered. When the firemen arrived the flames were pouring from the rear end of the theater in volumes, and in five minutes the fire had eaten its way to the roof and was burning fiercely.

The building is practically ruined. What the fire has not destroyed is spoiled by water. The walls and front part of the structure remained standing, but will have to be torn down. The fire department officials think that the fire was caused by a candle or a lighted lamp left on the stage by the Hebrew Dramatic society which presented King Lear last night. There is no doubt that the fire started on the stage.

The property is owned by Dr. Paul C. Skiff, and was valued at $100,000. Originally it was a Baptist church, then a Universalist church, and in 1876 it was remodeled and opened as an opera house. The lessees of the house for the past three years have been Proctor & Turner, whose lease expires next year. Proctor & Turner sublet to J. H. Smith of Albany last year and he is now the lessee of the place. There is $40,000 insurance on the property.

The house will be rebuilt and improved in a thorough manner.

SEVERE HAIL STORMS.

Sections of Pennsylvania Visited on Wednesday Night.

PHILADELPHIA, July 5.—Probably the severest hail storm in this section for years passed over the northern part of Philadelphia this evening. Heavy rain accompanied it, flooding streets and cellars. Hail stones nearly an inch in diameter fell for fifteen minutes, breaking thousands of window panes and cutting trees and shrubbery to pieces. A gale blew and much damage was done to trees, insecure buildings and fences. Reports from points in the eastern portion of the state indicate that the storm did much damage.

READING, Pa., July 5.—This city was visited by a severe hail storm this evening. The streets were covered with hail stones and the sewers were too small to carry off one-tenth of the water. Grain, corn, oats, flower gardens, grapes and other fruits in this vicinity were stripped off like leaves.

The vineyards on Mount Penn are completely ruined. Much damage was wrought along the Schuylkill, south of Reading. The destruction to crops were great. In several places hail fell to the depth of three inches and was found piled up sometimes to the depth of a foot.

Young Girls Outraged and Murdered in Kentucky.

PADUCAH, Ky., July 5.—Early this morning, at Bardwell, Ky., two young girls named Ray, aged 16 and 12 years, were cruelly murdered, presumably by a tramp. The girls had left their homes in Bardwell to pick blackberries and were followed by an older brother in about two hours. He found them both dead with [illegible] [illegible] from ear to ear, [illegible] half [illegible] [illegible], and bearing evidence of having been outraged. The bodies were 50 feet apart and hid in the brush. There is no definite clue to the identity of the brute who committed the crime, but the manner of the work points to one man, and the use of a razor indicates a negro. There is great excitement and large posses are in the woods, and if the culprit is caught there will be a lynching.

Launch of an Unsinkable Steamer.

GLASGOW, July 5.—Denny Bros., ship builders at Dumbarton, launched at their yard at that place yesterday, a steel twin-screw cargo and passenger steamer of 10,000 tons, built for the American line. She is to ply between Liverpool and Philadelphia. Mrs. Griswold, wife of President Griswold of the American line, christened the new steamer the "Southwark." The vessel, it is claimed, is unsinkable. She has a double bottom, and her hull is divided by bulkheads into water-tight compartments.

The Silver Question in Spain.

MADRID, July 5.—In the cortes today, in response to a question asked by Senator Toca, who was one of the Spanish delegates to the recent international monetary conference held in Brussels, Senor Gamazo, minister of finance, said that Spain did not need to adopt special measures to meet the silver crisis. He added that he believed the present depression in silver would soon be remedied.

American National Bank Suspends.

PUEBLO, Col., July 5.—The American National bank has suspended. The assets are placed by the bank's officers at $1,250,000, and the liabilities at $625,000. It is believed that the bank will be able to resume shortly because its assets are in good shape.

Made His Last Ascension.

OMAHA, Neb., July 5.—Roy Elster, balloonist, aged twenty-four, made an ascension from Courtland beach on Cut Off lake here Tuesday evening. His parachute failed to work properly and he fell into the Missouri river. His body did not reappear.

U. S. Ship Monocacy on the Rocks.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 5.—The Japan Daily Advertiser, received by steamship Empress of China yesterday, contains a dispatch dated Hankow, as follows:

"The United States ship Monocacy went ashore Sunday on an island between Ichang and Hankow. Her forward part rests badly on the rocks. The damage is unknown."

No further particulars are obtainable.

A Hartford Man Missing.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 5.—Morris Levy, 36 years of age, married, with a family, who works for Armour's branch provision house in this city, went fishing alone in a boat on the Connecticut river yesterday, and has not returned; neither has the boat been found. It is feared that he was drowned. No other known reason exists for his disappearance.

Unlucky Silver for Silva.

BOSTON, July 5.—Judge Nelson in the United States district court today fined Joseph Silva $100 and sentenced him to three months in jail for passing silver half dollars which had been plugged with lead. The coins had been through the subtreasury as bad. It is not known how they came into the possession of Silva.

Steamer Bethel Burned.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 5.—The steamer Bethel, used as a lodging house for 200 poor people, was burned to the water's edge here tonight. Six lives at least were lost, and several persons are missing. Loss, $10,000.

MORMONS TO CORRUPT CONGRESS.

Large Sums of Money Raised in Utah for this Purpose

AGENTS IN WASHINGTON.

Statement of a Prominent Clergyman of Montana.

TOLEDO, July 5.—The Rev. J. Wesley Hill, a prominent clergyman of Helena, Mont., who is visiting here, makes the following statement:

"I was for some time pastor of the First Methodist church of Ogden, Utah, and connected with the university. Naturally I was thrown into contact with the Mormon element and appreciate the evils of that belief. These people have for some time appreciated the rapidly increasing power of the opposition to them, and also the fact that their tenure in their present location can be only temporary, unless they bring some powerful agency to bear.

"And this they have in the shape of money, which they are now preparing to use upon a gigantic scale. During the past year they have been raising among themselves, by assessment, $100,000, ostensibly for the purpose of completing their temple, upon which they have already expended $5,000,000, but which is designed for the purpose of buying a majority in the next congress to secure their fixed rights to their present location by securing the vested power of statehood.

"With this they would be beyond reach of interruption and opposition in the future. Their agents are even now at work in Washington, and have been for months, and the money is at their disposal, to use with unscrupulous freedom. The scheme has long been contemplated, and they have great hopes of its success, as it has been carried on with great secrecy. The mass of the people who contributed their money have been kept in ignorance of its object, in order that all danger of the secret being revealed might be removed. My information is obtained from the most indisputable sources."

Gunner from Governor's Island to be Courtmartialed for His Mistake.

NEW YORK, July 5.—A singular mistake, such as regular artillerymen are rarely guilty of, occurred during the firing of the salute at sunrise at the Battery yesterday morning.

A section of two guns, under Captain Van Ness of the First artillery, were brought from Governor's Island to the Battery, where the two guns were placed in position.

To the surprise of all, the gunner fired twenty-three shots, two more than the regular number. Captain Van Ness made a charge against the gunner for neglect of duty, and the man will be courtmartialed and probably severely punished.

Death of Commodore Lockwood.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Commodore Samuel Lockwood, U. S. navy, died this morning in Flushing, in his 90th year. He was born in Connecticut in 1803, and entered the navy when seventeen years old. In 1861-62 he had charge of the blockades of Wilmington, Beaufort, York River and Newport News. He also assisted in the capture of Fort Macon. He was retired October 1, 1864.

Boy Shot by a Saloon Keeper.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 5.—At New Britain last evening Henry Deering, a saloon keeper, shot Albert Meissner, 9 years old. Some small boys had annoyed Deering by letting off fireworks in front of his saloon. He drew a pistol and fired at them. The bullet went through the boy's left thigh and lodged in the right leg. It has not yet been extracted. Deering was not arrested.

Firemen Have a Narrow Escape at Pawtucket.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., July 5.—Chief Brierly of Pawtucket and several of his men had a narrow escape from death at a fire in that city this morning. The chief and a half dozen men were in the building when the floors gave way without warning and the entire building collapsed. The firemen were precipitated to the cellar, but singularly they all escaped with slight injury. The building belonged to a man named Emerson, and with its contents was valued at $5,[illegible]; insurance $3,700.

Time's Changes in Boat Race Records.

A correspondent of the Boston Transcript, who wants to give credit to the old Harvard oarsmen, has pointed out that Harvard is still three races ahead of Yale in the long total beginning with the six-oared race in 1859. Indeed, the old crews sent out by Harvard deserve to have their victories recalled, for in the long list of races down to the present year Harvard was far ahead of Yale. The authorities on gymnastics at Harvard would do well to find out why it is that from 1869 to 1886 Harvard won fourteen times to Yale's five, and why since 1882 Harvard has won but twice. A few more annual victories by Yale on the Thames and the races will become as uninteresting for what they represent regarding the two colleges as the races were from 1864 to 1880.

LETTER CARRIERS' ASSOCIATION.

Thomas B. Linton of This City [illegible] President of the Organization.

In response to a circular sent out by the local letter carriers' association, delegates from all the cities in the state assembled in Bridgeport Tuesday for the organization of a state association. The boys who wear the gray have very little time for holding meetings, their only day off being a holiday, hence the meeting of the date on the Fourth.

Permanent organization of the state association was effected, the following officers being elected: President, Thomas B. Linton of Norwich; vice-president, W. H. Schaffer of Hartford; secretary, Charles F. Meger of Danbury, treasurer, George W. Murphy of Stamford; sergeant-at-arms, H. O. Bailey of South Norwalk. John F. McElroy was elected delegate to the convention of the National Letter Carriers' association at Kansas City next September. Thomas B. Linton of this city was selected as Mr McElroy's alternate.

The objects of the association are good fellowship and the advancement of the interests of the carriers. The convention endorsed the action of the Massachusetts state association in demanding the establishment of the equitable payment system. Under the present system the pay of the carrier is regulated by the size of the city in which he works, $850 being the maximum permitted in a city of 50,000 people, while in larger cities the maximum is $1,000. The carriers believe that men doing an equal amount of work should receive an equal amount of pay and will endeavor to bring about the equalization of salaries at the national convention.

A SUNDAY IN NORTHFIELD.

Moody and Sankey—Prof. Towner and Wife and Dr. Faunce.

MR. EDITOR: Having joined the pilgrimage to the World's fair and having returned weary and worn, as pilgrims do, the bright idea of a Sunday at Northfield was acted upon, and as your old friend "Senex" is too modest to serve up the World's fair hot, he will give you a whiff or so for refreshment from the restfulness of Northfield and Berkshire hills and breezes.

Anyone who has been to Northfield need not be told how beautiful its location is, with its circling mountain tops and its finely arranged and well appointed buildings. Nature provides a location of which man has taken advantage and made good use. It is no wonder that a tide of summer visitors steadily sets in here, keeping the place full, and satisfying those who come with its beneficence. A Sunday here with Moody at home, Sankey for a guest and Prof. Towner and his wife to conduct the singing, is a Sunday to be remembered.

Sunday, July 2, was such a day. The village church was packed with students and visitors. This church had wide galleries on the sides, and rising back of the pulpit are seats for a large chorus choir. These seats were filled with young men, students and delegates from colleges attending the conference and their singing led by Prof. Towner was very good, and the hearty joining in with the chorus of the audience was grand. In the gallery opposite the pulpit was arranged a large choir of little ones from the Sunday school, who sang one piece very sweetly and very effectively, by request of Mr. Moody.

Mr. Moody had charge of the services, and had quite a number of hymns sung at the opening, with solos by Prof. Towner of New York; also one by Mr. Sankey. Mr. Moody then announced that the church had a legacy come to it and there was some arrangements to be made about it. The legacy was a widow with two girls, one ten, one thirteen, and a debt of $175 occasioned by the sickness and death of the husband. Mr. Moody said she was one of God's widows to be provided and cared for, and in the evening he should take a collection for that purpose. He wanted $275 for the debt and $1,000 for the widow and the children; the girls to be educated and cared for at the seminary. Mr. Moody said if the money was not raised at night he should have to call for checks in the morning to make it up, so they had better do it in the evening than to be called twice to do it, for it was going to be done, sure.

After calling a few incidents as Mr. Moody only can, he said the sermon of the morning would be delivered by Dr. Faunce of New York. Mr. Moody went down from the pulpit to a front seat.

Dr. Faunce began by saying he came to Northfield to hear and learn, but he, Moody, being an inexorable commander, he was preaching by order, not from inclination. Dr. Faunce is a very bright young man. When he was first settled in New York, he was called the boy preacher, but he is boy only in looks. In his maturity of thought and force of expression he shows much ability. His text was from Numbers—"The return of the spies with the fruits of the land," they being forerunners of the 600,000 behind; and the point, of course, was to the young men, that they were forerunners, and that time would show what men they were, and how they did their work.

The sermon was one to be remembered and enjoyed by every one, Mr. Moody occasionally expressing audible approval in a sort of Methodistic way. Those who heard Dr. Faunce will be glad to hear him again.

The church seats one thousand. The audience was estimated at eleven hundred, among it being people from almost every state in the land; and all seeming glad to be there.

In the afternoon at 4 o'clock an outdoor meeting was held on Round Top by Dr. Speer. This was largely attended. The hotel ran free busses back and forth for their guests.

In the evening Mr. Moody preached in State hall, especially to young men, the body of the hall being reserved for them. The hall seats about 700 and was crowded, fully 300 being present. Mr. Moody gave ten special points about prayer in a practical way to the young men; and his talk was full of interest. Most of the young men took notes.

The collection was taken for the widow and amounted to over $900, and the balance was promised.

The hall to close seemed too soon; but even Sunday at Northfield must have an end.

BEE LINERS.

Men who Make a Good Living Hunting Wild Honey.

There is a class of men in Eastern Connecticut who make a very good living for their families by hunting wild honey during the summer months. They are known as "bee liners" and are possessed of wonderful vision, being able to follow the course of a bee a long distance through the air.

Their method of working is peculiar. As soon as the clover begins to blossom the hunter goes into the fields and wanders around until he comes across a bee extracting the sweetness from a clover blossom. He stands by and watches it until the bee flies away, then follows it as far as he can with his eye. He waits for the return of the bee a reasonable length of time. Sometimes it happens that the bee does not return, but in most cases it comes back and is watched in its flight again by the hunter.

If in leaving the blossom the bee each time flies in the same direction, the hunter feels pretty sure that its home is on that line, and he goes to the nearest woodland toward which the bee has flown. He searches the woods for a tree that has the appearance of being hollow, and if he finds it he listens with his ear against the trunk for the hum of the bees inside.

A hunter usually has but little trouble in locating a swarm of bees in this way. Sometimes, however, he fails. Then he resorts to different tactics. He takes a piece of buttered bread with honey on it and puts it in a small box with a glass cover. When the bee returns to the blossom at which it has been working, he quickly shuts it into the box. The bee gets a taste of the honey, and when it has filled its "saddle bags" it is liberated. It returns to the box again, and while it is getting another cargo the hunter walks rapidly in the direction that it flew when liberated before. In this way the bee is gradually followed up until its home is found.

When a "honey tree" has been spotted a hole is cut into it at the bottom and a smudge placed in it. The smoke ascends through the opening, and the bees are suffocated or driven away. The tree is then chopped down and the honey taken out. Sometimes a hunter will get 800 pounds of honey in this way, and it readily sells at 16 cents a pound.

Favor Bartlett's Reef Lightship.

Pilots on Long Island sound are of the opinion that the lighthouse department erred in placing the electric fog horn at Cornfield, as it is confusing in a fog.

A better location, in their opinion, would have been Bartlett's reef lightship and the frequency of slight mishaps in that neighborhood seem to support their view. In coming into the sound or leaving it for New London harbor, Fishers Island sound, the Race, Plum Gut, or up sound, Bartlett's reef light, is the point of departure, and if a pilot gets started right he will go all right.

For that reason something better than the bell should be used on Bartlett's reef light. Something that can be heard a long distance and be distinguished easily from all other sounds from the various light stations which abound at this end of Long Island sound.

In the human body there is said to be more than 2,000,000 perspiration glands communicating with the surface by ducts, having a total length of some ten miles. The blood contains millions of millions of corpuscles, each a structure in itself. The number of rods in the retina, supposed to be the ultimate recipient of light, is estimated at 30,000,000. A German scientist has calculated that the gray matter of the brain is built of at least 600,000,000 cells.

STUDENT RIOTERS.

Vandalism Is Manifested by Them In Streets of Paris.

THE CITY OCCUPIED BY TROOPS.

One Policeman Killed and Forty Injured—The Situation Very Serious.

PARIS, July 5.—The morning newspapers give many instances of the perfect vandalism manifested by the student mobs. On the Boulevard St. Michael the rioters seized a block of tram cars. They compelled the passengers in the first car to alight, smashed the windows and window frames with iron bars, unhitched the horses and then turned the car upside down. The rioters near by were quick to follow this example, and within five minutes five other cars had been wrecked and upset. In Rue Eugene de la Croix 20 lads built a barricade of vehicles and paving stones. This barricade, like most of the others, impeded greatly the operations of the cavalry and was impregnable against the police. The Paris newspapers say that one policeman was killed and 30 or 40 policemen and 150 rioters were injured.

All the shops between the Rue des Fosses and the College de France were closed early last evening. The names of 20 men severely injured in the riots of the night have been reported. Twelve of the injured are in the hospitals. M. Lozé, prefect of police, tendered his resignation to the government yesterday, but the government declined to accept it until after the restoration of order.

At 1 o'clock this morning the report from the Latin quarter said that most of the windows were broken, the lamp posts were lying across the streets, and broken furniture and half smashed vehicles lay

Strewn Over the Pavements.

As the day wore on the rioters, hundreds of whom have no connection with the students, gathered in the vicinity of the markets and restarted the disturbances. Several conflicts occurred between the rioters on one side and the police and soldiers on the other. The crowd was composed of the riffraff of the city, a majority being men out of work and men who never work. The fighting was quite severe, and numbers on both sides were injured.

The affair has assumed such a serious aspect that the authorities who at first imagined that it was due entirely to the effervescence of the more mischievous of the students, determined to restore order at any cost. The disorderly elements in all parts of the city took advantage of the demonstration of the students to join in to create disorder, and now as a matter of fact, they and not the students as a body, are responsible for the rioting. Today almost the whole of Paris is occupied by troops, who are under orders to repress disorder with a strong hand. The government has not yet carried out its threat to close the Labor exchange. It was decided this morning to allow the building to remain open for a little while longer.

BURDEN ON GOVERNMENT.

Must Prove In Each Case the Killing at Ford's Theater.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—It is stated that the government must prove by sufficient evidence in each case that the victims of the Ford's theater disaster were killed by the collapse of the building before the grand jury will return indictments against Messrs. Ainsworth, Dant, Covert and Sasse, charged by the coroner's jury with responsibility for the affair, and witnesses must be produced that saw the dead man in the wreck or brought and placed in the patrol or other vehicle.

Another will give evidence showing that the deceased was removed to the morgue, where the third witness will be called upon to testify that he saw the dead body in the dead house, thus forming a chain of evidence commencing in the ruins of the old theater building and ending at the morgue.

A detective has been put to work hunting up the necessary witnesses, and it is said that the evidence will be completed by the end of the present week.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES.

Ryan of Toronto Will Not Compete for the Diamond Sculls.

LONDON, July 5.—The aquatic event next in importance to the Oxford-Cam bridge boat race, opened today. This was the Henley-on-Thames rowing regatta, for which there are more entries this year than ever before. Among the competitors are many foreigners, a large number being Frenchmen, who are members of the Union des Societes Francais de Sports Athletiques. Among the contestants entered for the diamond sculls was J. J. Ryan of the Argonaut Boat club of Toronto, but it is now announced that he will not start.

The first round in the various events were rowed today, and the second rounds will be rowed tomorrow. The finals will be rowed on Friday. In the first round for the grand challenge cup the Leander Rowing club beat the Magdalen College Rowing club by a length and a quarter.

The Thames Rowing club beat the crew of the Societe Nautique de la Basse Seine. The latter crew rowed splendidly until they were a quarter of a mile of the finish, when the Thames crew passed them and by entirely superior rowing defeated them by three-quarters of a length.

In the same event, the London Rowing club beat the First Trinity (Cambridge) crew by a length after a good race.

The Dublin University crew beat the Molesy Club crew. In this latter contest both crews rowed well together until close home. Here the Dublin crew spurted and crossed the line a length ahead of their opponents.

Ladies' Challenge Plate—First round: The Trinity College (Oxford) crew easily beat the crew of New College.

Diamond Sculls—First round: Wm. Boyd, Trinity College, Dublin, beat Hudson easily.

ROUGH ON PENA.

Cannot Organize a New Ministry and Must Therefore Resign.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The Herald's correspondent at Buenos Ayres telegraphs that the members of the cabinet have announced to President Saenz Peña that they intend to resign.

The president asked the cabinet to delay action a few days, and then invited Aristobulo del Valle to organize a new ministry. He declined to do so, and the president then appealed to Quintano to form a cabinet.

It is probable that Quintano will also decline to serve, and, if he does so, President Pena will be forced to resign.

Newspapers in Buenos Ayres declare that there are plenty of men who are able and willing to undertake the formation of a new government, and that the President is to be blamed for the present state of affairs.

Mrs. Blaine-Bull Plays Nurse.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Mrs. William T. Bull, who, until recently was Mrs. Marie Nevins Blaine, and who at one time had histrionic ambitions, has come out in a new role—that of sick nurse. While on their wedding tour on the steamer to Europe, Dr. Bull slipped and fell on the ship's stairway, rupturing a ligament and spraining his knee. His leg is in splints, and he has stayed a month at Hamburg.

The Deadlock Broken.

BIDDEFORD, Me., July 5.—The police commission have removed six members of the special force and appointed six officers, most of whom will go on regular duty. At a meeting of the Saco city council the appropriation bill, over which there has been a deadlock, was passed, the councilmen concurring with the aldermen in the passage of the original order.

Town Landmark Burned.

MANSFIELD, Mass., July 5.—The house and barn on the Lorenzo Cook estate at West Mansfield, occupied by John Cook, were burned to the ground yesterday. The flames caught from a fire cracker. The house was one of the landmarks of the town. The loss will be more than $5000. There was but little insurance.

Settled by Agreement.

BOSTON, July 5.—In the United States circuit court today the case of John R. Foster and others vs. the Northern Investment company, was settled by agreement and the bill was dismissed without prejudice and without costs. This was the proceedings in which the plaintiffs asked for a receiver for the company.

Shot Himself Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, July 5.—After kissing his sweetheart adieu shortly before midnight, Emil Goldsmith, 21 years old, walked around the corner to the step of the First Reformed Church and shot himself dead. Goldsmith had been reprimanded by his parents for squandering his money at Gloucester.

Royalty Present.

LONDON, July 5.—A gala performance was given in Covent Garden last evening. It was attended by the Duke of York, Princess May of Teck, the czarewitch, the Prince and Princess Waldemar of Denmark, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh and Prince and Princess Christian.

Gallagher's Cleverness.

DENVER, July 5.—Ed Smith attempted to knock out Reddy Gallagher in four rounds yesterday, but the cleverness of Gallagher and his sprinting abilities saved him. Smith could not get Gallagher, and under the conditions the latter wins the match.

Woman Fell Dead at the News.

LONDON, July 5.—There were terrible scenes of grief at the pit's mouth when the Toorahill manager announced the awful disaster. One woman fell dead when she learned that her husband had been killed.

To Settle With the Pope.

ROME, July 5.—President Saenz Pena of Argentina will send a special representative to settle with the pope all subjects at issue between the government and Rome concerning the church in the republic.

Won on a Foul.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 5.—Billy Forsyth of Danbury and Sammy Kelley of New York met in a finish fight yesterday. It took 16 rounds to decide the battle, and then it was won by Kelly on a foul.

A Wonderful Feat.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 5.—Fully 10,000 people saw Clifford Calverly perform on a wire stretched across the Niagara gorge yesterday. He broke all time records by running across the wire at full speed in 2m. 35 3-5s., which is one minute faster than the record established last summer by Dickson.

Electric Road Opened to the Public.

ROCKLAND, Me., July 5.—The Thomaston extension of the Rockland, Thomaston and Camden electric street railway has been opened to the public. The track is remarkably straight its entire length of three miles, with a natural grade.

Cheese Dealer Pressed.

TORONTO, July 5.—J. S. Thompson & Co. of Prescott, who for eight years past have been doing a business on nearly every cheese market between this city and Montreal, have assigned, and a large number of dealers will lose heavily.

Twenty Men Killed by a Landslide.

MONTREAL, July 5.—A newspaper publishes a letter from Schrieber, a small town at the head of Lake Superior, saying that on June 30, 20 Finlanders working on the line of the Canadian Pacific railway were killed near there by a landslide.

Her Injuries Fatal.

BOSTON, July 5.—Hulda Aalberg, who was so badly burned by the breaking of a kerosene lamp at her home, 10 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, Sunday night, died at the city hospital from the effects of her injuries.

Married Life Unhappy.

BUTTE, Mont., July 5.—Theodore Coombs, a miner, cut his wife's throat yesterday and then committed suicide by taking poison. Their married life had been unhappy.

Victims of the Plague.

CAIRO, July 5.—In Mecca 160 persons died of cholera yesterday; in Jeddah, 160.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

SERVANT GIRLS ARE SAID TO BE SCARCE IN NEW YORK.

Information Useful to the Housekeeper In [illegible]—[illegible] Hints as to Toys and [illegible]—Personal Paragraphs About Well Known Women.

The servant girl problem, which has been agitated from time immemorial, has now become more serious than ever. The scarcity of available girls is alarming, and what makes the situation more unpleasant is the fact that the many employment agencies throughout the city hold out very little hope of improvement until fall. The main reason for the present condition of affairs is the enormous number of girls who have gone to Chicago, where they hope to combine business with pleasure and see the World's fair.

One of the largest employment agencies in the city is on Forty-second street. To a reporter this morning the proprietor said: "Never in my 20 years' experience at this business have I seen girls—I mean good, general housework girls—so scarce. My reason for it? Well, there are two. One is the Chicago fair, and the other the many summer boarding houses and hotels that have begun to get ready. Why, there was one concern in this city that has sent over 800 girls on to Chicago for the new hotels. You may imagine what a hole that makes in the supply. But from what I hear most of the girls wish themselves back in New York city. They are finding out that Chicago is not the Eldorado they expected, and I expect a great many of them will return in a month or so sadder, but wiser, and, I might add, poorer women.

"Several of my best girls who went on there have written me that if I can place them they will return immediately. I couldn't get to the telegraph office quickly enough to tell them to come on. I expect them Monday, and they can have their choice from 60 applications for girls. Talk about your prima donna [illegible] her part, she ain't in it with the servant girl of the present day. Come around about October. I'll have plenty of girls then."

[illegible], the manager of the [illegible] Employment agency, in answer to the reporter's question said:

"Are servant girls scarce? Well, I should say they are, and what makes it more annoying is the fact that when a good girl [illegible] along she invariably wants to go to Chicago, where she can enjoy the World's fair. [illegible] When the large hotels and private families will do this summer for good housekeepers I cannot conjecture. Already their wages have jumped from $16 to $20, and they are hard to get at that. I am thinking that the thousands of girls who went to Chicago will wish that they had remained here. That city, I understand, is overcrowded with girls not from New York alone, but from all over the country. The result is, I think, that the [illegible]. The servant girl today is an [illegible] must be [illegible]. I really feel sorry for my best patrons, who [illegible], but what am I to do [illegible] to be had? But things will [illegible] to the fall, and the usual supply [illegible] for all who want them."

Probably one of the oldest employment agencies is [illegible] & Schaefer's. This firm supplies help to the Four Hundred, and so is in a position to know whereof [illegible]. Regarding the scarcity of girls, one of the firm said: "Yes, there is absolutely a dearth of good housework[illegible]. The demand is five times as great as the supply. The World's fair is not alone responsible for the scarcity of girls. [illegible] very [illegible] of late, and so we get most of our girls from that source [illegible]—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Woman [illegible]

Mrs. Theodore Sutro, the valedictorian of the first grade graduating class of the University of New York Law school, in commenting on The Recorder's special Borden jury, [illegible] Miss Lucy Stone, said:

"I do not know much about this one particular case, for I am not interested in criminal cases at all beyond seeing by the headlines in the papers what is going on in that line. But really I do not think women jurors would be just the thing. The selection must be made of women with very strong characters, great confidence in themselves and able to detach themselves from their surroundings in a greater or less degree, and that cannot always be done. It must be a wonderful woman who could stand out against 11 men."

"Don't you think it a good plan to have women jurors on cases when the prisoner is a woman?"

"No, I do not. Women are nearly always a woman's most severe critic, and she would fare very much better at the hands of 12 men jurors than from the other sex. The only time I really think a woman would be of any great use on the jury would be in a case of insanity. There I think her knowledge of her own sex and instincts would be invaluable. She would be able to tell in nine cases out of ten whether the woman were insane or not, whether she were shamming to escape punishment for a crime committed or whether it was really a case of temporary insanity."—New York Recorder.

The Growth of Women's Clubs.

The founders of Sorosis—such well known women as the poet Alice Carey, who was the first president, and her sister Phoebe, Mrs. Jennie June Croly, Kate Field, Mme. Demorest, Celia W. Burleigh and Ella Dietz Clymer—were caricatured in the public prints as sitting with their feet on tables in a cloud of tobacco smoke, with bottles and glasses conveniently near.

Fortunately, however, these women were as brave as they were clever. Firmly convinced of the value of "the club" idea for women, they persevered, undaunted, on their way.

For a dozen or 15 years these and similar organizations were still regarded with suspicion by both men and women. But the tide turned gradually as the use and beauty of organized work among women came to be known, and the club was finally adopted by women with the characteristic enthusiasm of their sex.

It is a noticeable fact that during the last year a score of women's clubs in the vicinity of Boston alone celebrated their tenth anniversary. It is now the easiest and simplest of matters to form a woman's club, while those already in existence find themselves popular, prosperous and influential.—Mrs. E. M. H. Merrill in Donahoe's Magazine.

Spanish Styles In Underwear.

Spanish women have not the same styles for underwear that we have. There are fewer pieces, and these are made long, flowing and graceful, like the [illegible] woman's wardrobes, not tight fitting, after the English mode. The chemisettes are combined with short skirts, and thus save the extra bagging of material about the waist. But a Spanish woman must have crape, gauze or silk for her underwear, else she is [illegible].

It is astonishing how these southern feminines love yellow and red for underclothing. This fancy rests with them alone, but the shades match well their luxurious, creamy tinted flesh, and one cannot blame them for choosing them.

Garters the Spanish women abhor, thinking that they spoil the superb curves of the knee and the upper part of the leg, but they compromise with the lovely braided ribbons, which are not tied tightly about the leg, but only folded many times and clasped in a bowknot in the center.

Eulalie, who is a true daughter of Spain, though having lived half her life in Paris and absorbed some of the Frenchwoman's daintiest ideas, still clings to Spanish ways of dressing, and her lingerie is in the most approved style of her native land.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Rare Rugs From Old Carpets.

Summer time, with its bare floors and colorless matting, is when rugs are most needed. Here, then, is a hint which some women may be able to use. It is more than probable the house holds an old, worn ingrain carpet rolled away somewhere. If this needs brushing, brush it; then cut it into strips an inch wide, being careful not to cut across the warp, backstitch the strips together and send them to a weaver of rag carpets with directions as to the lengths you desire woven and the injunction to use the best warp possible. If you think it too much trouble to cut and sew the strips, the weaver will doubtless do that work also for a trifle. You will receive some handsome, thick rugs, which those who do not know the secret will think closely allied to Turkish.

The effect, where the original carpet was of a bright color, is really charming, and you have the satisfaction of ordering just such lengths as suit your needs for a bay window or in front of a sofa or a bed. These rugs, which, by the way, will not answer for stair carpet, as they are too stiff and thick, will last indefinitely. Some have been in use four years and are still good.—Indianapolis News.

A Woman Carpenter.

The resident population of Chicago will shortly be augmented by the arrival of Miss Sophie Christensen, a self reliant young Danish woman, who bought to get along in the world. Her father was a captain in the Danish army, who had to live on his meager pay, so that his girl had no hope for a dower. Sophie resolved to be independent, and at the age of 20 she apprenticed herself, not without difficulty, owing to male prejudice, to a carpenter and joiner. She soon displayed great aptitude for the work, and having just completed her apprenticeship has been admitted as a full member of the Joiners' guild at Copenhagen by unanimous vote.

In accordance with the [illegible] custom which prevails in Denmark Miss Christensen had to submit a specimen of her own unaided work before being admitted to the complete honors of the guild. She made an artistic self closing bookcase, the beauty and finish of which extorted the admiration of every member of the guild. The young woman, who is now 24 years old, [illegible] Chicago will be the best place for her to make a living in, and thither she will start in a week or two.—Exchange.

Women Stenographers at the Fair.

At their last meeting the National Association of Women Stenographers elected officers for 1893 as follows: President, Miss H. A. Shian; first vice president, Miss Nettie McLaughlin; second vice president, Miss Mary Wilcox; recording secretary and treasurer, Miss M. W. Farmer; corresponding secretary, Miss Kate S. Holmes. The association is in its third year and very prosperous. Through the friendliness of the board of lady managers of the World's fair the whole of the southwest landing on the main stairs in the Woman's building has been donated to the association in which to make an exhibit of woman's work in this particular branch of industry.

Here will be conducted a woman's stenographic and typewriting office, where letters and all kinds of work will be done for hire, showing how woman has taken her place among the permanent institutions of the business and commercial world. Here also the visiting women stenographers are invited to make their headquarters and receive their mail. In July an international shorthand congress is to be held in Chicago.—Stenographic Magazine.

A Woman's System For Women Convicts.

Mrs. Ellen C. Johnson, superintendent of the Sherborn prison for women, is in Chicago to place a peculiar exhibit and see that it is arranged to the best advantage. In Sherborn for some time there has existed successfully a method of marking or grading the inmates. When they show evidences of a desire to reform, some improvement is made in their dress and environment. In this way, so to speak, they are educated back to life. In her exhibit Mrs. Johnson has materially expressed this grading system as well as the industrial.

A number of dolls are dressed in the costumes worn by the women in the various grades of the prison. Thus, a doll in the costume of her grade is represented as working at silk weaving. Another in the costume of her grade has her hat on and a pail in her hand, apparently in the act of going out to the dairy. Another is bending over a miniature tub. Others again are represented as ironing, baking, sewing, etc. The idea is original with Mrs. Johnson.—Boston Globe.

The Best Way to Get Rid of Flies.

"No, thank you, my dear. I do not want any fly papers or fixtures about my house. I learned a great many years ago that the more things we have to call flies the more will come. In a neighborhood where flies were simply a nuisance I lived almost unmolested by them because I never permitted a particle of stale food to accumulate about the premises," says a writer.

"Flies, like a good many other things, will never stay where they are in danger of starvation, and I never kept anything about the place to feed them with—not even fly paper. Everything that could not be burned was carried as far from the house as possible and buried. All garbage is valuable as a fertilizer, and I utilize it as such.

"It is my opinion that every form of fly paper, fly poison and fly trap, which is baited with any substance, is just so much inducement for them to stay around the house. They think—if flies think at all—that they are going to get something to eat, and therefore hang around. The best fly preventive is starvation."

The Old Sextoness.

The Prince of Wales will reopen the north transept of St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield, the famous church which few American travelers fail to visit. The restoration fund of St. Bartholomew's has just been augmented by the sum of $500 from, of all persons in the world, the little old woman who used to act as sexton and [illegible] round. She was apparently [illegible] than the shoes she stood in, but when she died a few months ago [illegible] valued at over $5,000, of which American visitors [illegible] a very large proportion, for few [illegible] any interest in the grand old church. The old sextoness had ample cause to love it, for she spent the greater part of her long life in and about it, and for many years past she had occupied a room in the old north transept, a part of which, as many Americans will remember, was also used for a blacksmith's forge.—Exchange.

A Light and Airy Trifle.

One of the trifles "light as air" which help in so large a measure to make one's home cosy and attractive is a bag of silk illusion filled with silk from milkweed pods. The length is generally four times that of the width. Fill each end nearly to the middle with [illegible] silk, [illegible] among the silk [illegible] with [illegible]. Tie around the middle with [illegible] and finish the [illegible] the same. This is a pretty souvenir for a friend in the country to send to some one less fortunate who may have had to remain all summer in the city. The creamy color of the silk showing through the filmy covering contrasts daintily with pink or pale green ribbons.—[illegible] Times.

Miss Clara Barton, president of the Society of the Red Cross, is spending a few days at Bedford, Ind. Miss Barton's [illegible] life, devoted to the relief of suffering humanity, entitles her to the reverence of the world. She has probably received more decorations and orders of merit than any living woman. She comes to Bedford to arrange for the acceptance of the large and valuable tract of land donated to the Red Cross society by Dr. Gardner, upon which it is the intention to establish a home to be controlled by Miss Barton for the society.—Bedford (Ind.) A Revival of Lace.

There has been a marked revival of late in the wearing of real lace, an article that at one time had scarcely any sale. Now women are bringing out to the light their treasures of [illegible] and point and valenciennes, which have been long laid away in the hope of just such a demand.—Philadelphia Press.

Decorations at Dinners.

Such strides have been made in confectionery of late that at any special dinner the cakes and bonbons, which help to garnish the table in their little silver dishes, are made of any tint desired and generally either match or are in accord with the floral decorations. The arrangement of the latter is still kept low, and the flowers should not be overcrowded in their silver receptacles. Except in the centerpiece, all flowers look better in groups of twos and threes, and quality rather than quantity is a rule particularly applicable to the floral decorations of a table.—Exchange.

The Fad For Antique Sashes.

Sashes are coming again and will be prominent features of the summer outing costumes. They will be made of all materials, with silk in the lead, and they will be worn on the side, with the long ends falling to the bottom of the skirt. Like all the season's fancies, they should be antique, and if you can find in old trunks or boxes the sashes your mother or grandmothers once wore you will be in the van of the August parade at Newport.—New York Letter.

GENIUS AND WEALTH.

BRIGHT MEN SOMETIMES MANAGE TO SAVE THEIR EARNINGS.

Members of the Literary Profession Are an Exception In the Great Field of Brain Workers, For Few Great Writers Have Ever Amassed Fortunes.

The accumulation of an estate of nearly $700,000 by the late Edwin Booth is suggestive of the large profits made by an actor of great eminence. It is also an indication that the popular impression that dramatic genius, and artistic genius generally, is incompatible with the keeping of money is not justified by the facts.

Mr. Booth's fortune must have been gathered almost wholly during the last 20 years of his life, or since the failure of the theater which he established for himself in 1869 at the corner of Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue. The circumstance that it consists of personal estate only, with the exception of a place at Newport, suggests also that it grew altogether out of his professional gains during that short period, and it indicates how great these were and how prudent he was in their management.

In his prudence, however, he was not extraordinary among actors. Edwin Forrest, with whom he competed for the popular favor at the beginning of his successful career, left a large fortune also when he died in 1872. Charlotte Cushman, whose dramatic career was [illegible], and who died in 1876, left a very handsome estate. Mr. Henry Irving, the distinguished English actor, is a man of fortune, and many of the men and women of the stage are now the possessors of wealth or of a competence which renders them peculiarly independent. The great mass may spend as they go along, taking no thought for the morrow or having no faculty for accumulation even when they have incomes large enough to afford an opportunity for its exercise, but it is the same with the run of other people, of men of [illegible].

The genius for making money and the genius for keeping it are apart and distinct. If they always went together, the decrease in the poverty of the world would be enormous, but people inevitably [illegible] united in men of [illegible] as often as in those without that [illegible] of poverty if not of [illegible]. Nearly all the artists of high distinction at this time, in music, painting, sculpture, architecture and the drama, have accumulated fortunes, which in many cases are large. They are receiving incomes which justify extravagance, but they are not wasting money more than other successful men, they are not more likely to acquire habits of dissipation, and apparently there is not less practical [illegible] among them.

An art which may not be so conducive to great material prosperity is the literary art. Very few writers, no matter how great their distinction, have ever got rich out of writing, and at the present day the number who have done so is so small that we could include them all in a short list. Fortunes like that of Edwin Booth and those of the illustrious painters, sculptors, musicians and architects of this time are almost unknown among the men of literature. The incomes of the great body of writers best known to the people are meager as compared with those of the others. They are much less than the incomes of lawyers and physicians of parallel professional influence.

As things are, if a man wants to get rich, literature alone offers him a poor chance for the gratification of his ambition. He may get along very comfortably, but the chances are against his accumulating a fortune like Mr. Booth's out of his professional gains, no matter how clever he is, how saving he may be and how extraordinary his business capacity. That is why Mr. Walter Besant and his colleagues are finding so much fault with the publishers. They think that the publishers are getting rich at their expense; that the author furnishes the fuel, and that the publisher warms himself by the fire while the author stays out in the cold. But what other remedy is there than that the author should be both the writer of the book and its manufacturer for the market?

He must unite both genius in himself and also for his manuscripts what the competition of trade will give him. If he have not a combination of qualities and aptitudes, enabling him to be both a man of business and a writer, he must pay for his defects. The picture is done when it is painted. The book requires the expenditure of labor, capital and enterprise before it [illegible] it has been written by the author, and without that expenditure it is worthless.

[illegible] fortune comes to literary men, outside of 10 or 15 in a generation, it comes to editors who get both the writing and a manufacturing profit, but these, too, are few. The capacity to make a successful newspaper is rare, and like all rare gifts it is sometimes richly rewarded.—New York Sun.

A Good Memory.

Mrs. Robinson, who keeps a cigar stand in the business part of Chicago, has a memory that would do credit to the best detective in the country. A year ago a fellow bought a few cigars from her and tendered a $20 bill in payment. She made the change, when he cleverly palmed a $10 bill and claimed that she had given him that much too little. She gave him the $10, but when she made up her cash she found that she was just that $10 short. A few days ago the same man came to her stand, and calling for a cigar laid down a $10 bill. She knew him at a glance, and promptly sweeping the bill into her cash drawer told him that they were even. He demanded an explanation, and she reminded him of the transaction of a year ago. He protested that it was a case of mistaken identity and threatened to call the police, but she was firm, and he went away and did not come back.—Charleston News and Courier.

LEGAL NOTICES.

To Whom It May Concern:

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED THAT at a meeting of the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich, held in the Council Chamber, July 3, A. D. 1893, the following ordinance was adopted.

Attest— ARCHIBALD S. SPALDING, City Clerk and Clerk of the Court of Common Council.

AN ORDINANCE FOR THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH IN THE CITY OF NORWICH.

Be it ordained by the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich:

Section 1. The Health Committee of the City of Norwich shall have power to give orders to the person or persons owning or occupying any premises in said city on which is located any privy or cesspool which in the opinion of said committee, or a majority of them, is injurious to health, forbidding the use of such privy or cesspool. Such order shall be in writing signed by said Health Committee or a majority of them, a [illegible] of which the said committee or the members who shall sign the same, shall after delivery of said order to such owner or person lodge with the Clerk of the City Court of said city, and any person who shall after receiving such order, use or permit to be used said privy or cesspool, or permit any filth of any kind to collect therein, shall be fined not less than thirty dollars, nor more than fifty dollars for each offense.

Sec. 2. Every person who shall sell or offer to sell in the City of Norwich to any dealer in meat or other kind of food for use in the packing or cold storage of meat or other food, any ice cut or taken from any pond or lake into which any sewer empties, or any sewage or the contents of any privy are discharged, or from any such part of any river or stream of water as is below and within two miles of the place where any sewer empties into the same, or where any sewage or the contents of any privy are discharged into it, and every person who shall so sell any ice knowingly [illegible] for the purpose of packing or cold storage of any meat or other kind of food kept for sale, shall be fined fifty dollars for each offense.

I hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest, ARCHIBALD S. SPALDING, City Clerk.

THE LAW THROTTLED HIM!

One of the pardoned Chicago anarchists, [illegible] Fielden, who formerly lived in the town, has learned something from [illegible], which he wanted throttled. Fielden is a well-informed, hard-headed workingman who thought free speech had no limit, and who had little conception of the [illegible] of exasperating language. At [illegible] meeting he said: "You have nothing more to do with the law except to lay hands upon it and throttle it [illegible]. Throttle it! [illegible] Do everything you can to wound it!" The riot, the bomb throwing and the killing of the policemen followed. Fielden was held as a party to the crime and lost his liberty for [illegible] for the indiscreet utterances of an unbridled tongue. He went to the Joliet prison where silence is the [illegible], and the law silenced him. In that [illegible], with little expectation of ever gaining his liberty, he has been converted to the fact that "silence is golden"; and [illegible] out with no desire to air his opinion of the law again. He has gone home to enjoy the rights of an American citizen and [illegible] quietly earn his living; and he does not disguise the fact that he has learned: "Unless a man can give wise and [illegible] counsel in times of public excitement he should keep his mouth shut." There are those who are not anarchists who [illegible] yet had an opportunity to learn to keep silent if they cannot speak for the benefit of their fellow men.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

The Christian Endeavor delegates and their friends left this region Wednesday morning for Montreal, where this week are to be assembled twenty-five thousand representatives of this great Christian organization. They will represent every state in the union, and most of the countries of this continent. It is one of the most practical and progressive branches of the church, and is growing so rapidly that it is hard to keep the annual convention reduced to a good-working and unembarrassing number. The representation had this year to be put on a different basis from last year, to keep the number of delegates down; and yet they will outnumber the entire population of Norwich by a third. As an army to be entertained this leads all modern organizations. These [illegible] quietly the Christian life and [illegible] actively to demonstrate it as a saving and joy promoting reality. Here are a million young people bound together to show the practical advantages of true Christian living, and their influence cannot fail to make a marked impression upon the future of the church and the country. They keep sectarianism under foot, and are "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

ECONOMY OF SPACE.

There is something surprising about the size of the house which is to shelter the Peary party in the Arctic regions for the next two years. The establishment is to be called Redcliffe, and the house will be 20x16 feet and 13½ feet high, to be [illegible] by a heavy stone-wall two feet thick and six feet high with roof of iron and glass; and this wall is to be banked up with snow. The width of the corridors is not stated. The little house is divided into nine rooms and a photograph gallery; and with the narrow walk or corridor, is calculated to accommodate eleven men and two women, two burros, a pack of Esquimaux dogs and a cote of twenty-eight homing pigeons for two years. The house is to be lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

The size of this establishment is less than that of a good-sized hennery; and it could be set up in the parlors of some of the mansions in this town. It illustrates the difference between the necessary space for a party of thirteen persons to live in comfortably and the space required for a couple of persons to live fashionably. The entire party will be in these quarters nearly half the time, and no doubt they will live enjoyably.

Meriden is to have a representative in the party, Hugh Lee, who for two years has been superintendent of the boys' home in the "Silver city." He is twenty-[illegible] years old and will serve in the surveying party.

EMPEROR WILHELM'S WAY.

Emperor Wilhelm read his speech to the government officials and the members of the newly elected reichstag on Tuesday as though he were giving orders to menials whose only duty it was to obey, delivering the war-lord's four-hundred ton "I's" with real, royal German emphasis. The socialists and the anti-semite representatives were conspicuous by their absence. The American press severely criticises Wilhelm's manner forgetting that it is the difference between royal manners and democratic manners which accounts for the self-assertive style of this decorative and permanently titled creature of an empire taht so disgusts all true Americans. It is not at all likely that the members of the reichstag will do exactly as they are told, although they have been trained to recognize as a divine plan the one-man-rule-way of running a nation. If they refuse to do as he directs he can send them home again and again, and order their constituents to correct their mistakes, for presumably Wilhelm never makes any mistakes; and by and by, if they do not recognize there is only one man in Germany who has the right to do right or to do wrong, he will turn the armed forces the people furnish him against them to coerce them to submit to be taxed and to be bullied by the boy who was born on purpose to boss them. It is quite likely that Count Caprivi will arrange the matter so that the military bill will pass; and by his diplomacy the nation may be spared the duty of showing Wilhelm that there is power in the people that can make thrones tremble and put an end to royal lines.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

President Cleveland spent the Fourth catching fish in Buzzard's bay.

David Bennett Hill doesn't know whether he is a silver grasshopper or state-bank water bug.

Rear Admiral Tryon's mistake cost the British four hundred lives and five millions in treasure.

Norwalk keeps in fashion. She has electric cars running and feels as gay as a young woman in a wedding bonnet!

The free trade nightmare has been relegated to the land of dreams. The sensible democrats have discovered that the party must ride a horse of another color.

O'Ferrall of Virginia is a congressman who thinks "any public action of President Cleveland should be endorsed!" We hope he doesn't think Cleveland is infallible!

A pavilion constructed entirely of American tin at the World's fair, is an object lesson which represents an industry the democratic party seeks to destroy and constantly lie about!

Ex-Speaker Crisp is getting in touch with the administration. He is conferring with Secretary Carlisle, and it is intimated that Cleveland is striving to fix things in the house so he can touch the button and Crisp will do the rest.

The people's party of Vermont is in favor of free silver. There were fifteen delegates in the state convention, and it cannot be told whence they trooped. Tramps and burglars have been in favor of free silver ever since the prisons began to fill up with them, and when once committed to the principle they seldom reform.

The New London Day has just passed its thirteenth birthday and naturally is exultant over its ability to keep so well nourished during this short period of time. The paper grows handsome with age, and we believe we see signs of an improvement in its manners. We hope The Day will always keep bright and sunny, and if we ever notice a rare butterfly on it—we shall not spare the fly if we spare The Day!

"The appointment of Senator Crandall, democrat, says The New London Day, as prosecuting attorney by a Norwich judge, who is a republican, causes THE BULLETIN considerable anguish. The time to check political deals is before they are consummated, not after." We are sorry The Day is so slow in offering advice. Making suggestions after the issue is dead and buried is not creditable to a paper in a town as slow as New London is known to be.

We regret to see The Windham County [illegible] publishing such a paragraph as this:—

"Silver is so low now that what passes for a dollar in this country is only worth 63½ cents. How honest our government is!"

The weight of the dollar, or its intrinsic value does not touch the honesty of the government. The intrinsic value of its paper bills and bonds is less than the value of a dime; but the government's stamp upon their face gives them value. When the government refuses to give a gold dollar or its equivalent for a silver one, we can question its honesty. As long as a silver dollar can be exchanged for a paper or gold one it is just as good.

STATE EDITORS' OPINIONS.

She Will Not!

It is announced that henceforth Barnum & Bailey's circus will boycott Norwich because this year the municipal authorities objected to the "unloading of circus paraphernalia on Sunday." This is of course very humiliating to Norwich, but according to the latest advices the Rose city had not decided to erase itself from the map.—[Waterbury Republican.

Un-American Manners.

Those few selfish cottagers at [illegible] Cove who want to send the five cent people through their back yards had the consolation on the Fourth of knowing that they could sit on their front porches without offending their eyes with a sight of the vulgar masses. But we think they have had the last Fourth of July of that kind. Freedom prevails in this country, and the people will have their rights.—[New Haven News.

Utterly Vain!

The third house had such prominence in Hartford that honest men must have been weary and disgusted. It is utterly vain to look for reform unless the popular taste can be educated to abhorrence of lobbyists. No matter how a man plans and works, he is powerless against a combination knowing how to reach the venal.—[New London Telegraph.

A Middletown Trust.

All the saloon men in town have united and formed a trust to prevent the conviction of their members who stand charged with violating the Sunday law. This they have a perfect right to do and the law abiding portion of the community have the same right to combine and see that justice is done.—[Middletown Herald.

Can't Afford to Forget.

In view of recent occurrences at Richmond, Va., and elsewhere, it is just as well that the country has been again and impressively reminded of what occurred at Gettysburg thirty years ago and what is signified. Forgiveness is one thing, forgetfulness is another. The United States of America cannot afford to forget.—[Hartford Courant.

Looks a Deal Like a Deal.

What defensible motive induced Judge Kellogg of Norwich to bounce from the city attorneyship a competent and honorable republican in order to provide a berth for Senator S. Ashbel Crandall, is not obvious at this distance. To lookers-on in Venice the performance looks a good deal like a deal that ought never to have been dealt. Senator Crandall is a walking magazine of partisanship and the effigy of a statesman. As a senator he appeared to many observers to be the wrong man in the right place. His strenuous opposition to the Hamersley corrupt practices bill was a foregone conclusion which, whether or not it conferred any credit on that measure, conferred none on Crandall. The interior history of the circumstances surrounding the appointment of Crandall to the city attorneyship would be a decidedly interesting contribution to the current political history of Connecticut.—Waterbury Republican.

The ARENA for July has timely papers upon "Bimetallic Parity," "The Money Question," "Our Foreign Policy," "Pure Democracy vs. Vicious Governmental Favoritism," "Women at the World's Congress of Religions," and "Women Wage-Earners," "The Realistic Trend of Modern German Literature," and "Christ and the Liquor Problem." The books of the day are reviewed and other matters of interest discussed. The Arena Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

The LADIES' HOME JOURNAL for July is full of light and entertaining reading and practical suggestions for its readers. The opening illustrated sketch is "The Story of Five Proposals." A prettily pictured article upon "Orchids and their Cultivation" follows. "Deenah O'Rourke," and "The Coast of Bohemia," are two neatly illustrated narratives. "Literary Women in Their Homes," "Clever Daughters of Clever Men," "Entertaining in the country," "Mr. Beecher's Unprinted Words," "The Girl Who Goes to College," and "The Country Girl," "Latest Designs in Dresses" and "Dressing Without the Corset," "Housekeeping in the Country," "Odds and Ends of a Wardrobe" and "The Ideal Summer Blouse," are among the edifying and practical topics. The Curtis Publishing company, Philadelphia.

The NEW PETERSON for August contains as leading features: "From the Atlantic to the Pacific," "California Women in the World's Fair" and "The Coming of John Sanderson," illustrated; "Her Magic; on Receiving Amelie Rives' Portrait," "Arkansas and the God," "Oumy Jim's Partner," and "A Noiseless Revolution," "Old Valenciennes Porcelain and Faience," is a splendidly illustrated paper. The departments "Under the Trees," and "Among the Books," are replete with good things. Peterson Magazine company, publishers, Philadelphia.

Big Dinners.

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation;
Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Eructation;
Gives healthy sleep; also aids digestion;
Without narcotic stupefaction.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

Smart weed and Belladonna, combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters, make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies [illegible] should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve [illegible].

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN

Has come not a little knowledge as to Cookery—what to do, as well as what not to do. Thus we have learned to use the most pure and perfect and popular cooking material for all frying and shortening purposes.

Cottolene

Progressive Cooking

is the natural outcome of the age, and it teaches us not to use lard, but rather the new shortening,

Cottolene,

which is far cleaner, and more digestible than any lard can be.

The success of COTTOLENE has called out worthless imitations under similar names. Look out for them! Ask your Grocer for COTTOLENE, and be sure you get it.

BETSEY BAKER.

[illegible]
Hard work my time employing,
How happily I spent each day,
Content and health enjoying!
The birds did sing and so did I
As I trudged o'er each acre,
I never knew what 't was to sigh
Till I saw Betsey Baker.

At church I met her, fair and neat,
One Sunday in hot weather,
With love I found my heart did beat,
And we sang psalms together.
When church was over, out she walked,
But I did overtake her,
Determined I should not be balked,
I spoke to Betsey Baker.

Her manners were genteel and cool,
And in her conversation
I found she had just left boarding school
And finished her education.
Yet love made me speak out quite free,
Said I: "I've many an acre.
Will you give me your company?"
"I won't," said Betsey Baker.

All my entreaties were in vain,
And I was forced to leave her.
I suffered a most intense pain,
For love brought on a fever.
The doctor came, he made his case,
With a long face like a Quaker.
Said he to me, "Where lies your pain?"
Said I, "In Betsey Baker."

[illegible] I was not bad enough
He dosed me and he pilled me,
And if I had taken half his stuff
I think it would have killed me.
So I put on [illegible] to all the [illegible]
[illegible] him and the undertaker,
And what do you think did save my life?
Why, thoughts of Betsey Baker.

I then again to Betsey went,
Once more with love attacked her,
But meantime she had [illegible]
With a [illegible]
If she would have him, [illegible]
A lady he would make her.
He [illegible] her to run away,
So I lost Betsey Baker.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings in Leading Securities in Boston and New York.

Boston, July 5.—In the [illegible] call money is quoted at [illegible] per cent and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

The market today has hardly recovered from the effects of the holiday, and in consequence the opening was of the dullest order. Few quotations show up of note, and with but few exceptions the prices of stocks were a fraction lower.

STONINGTON POINTS.

Hay Crop—Lawn Tennis—Other Crops—A Visiting Admiral.

Our farmers have commenced their haying, and a good crop is assured. Good weather to secure the same is now anxiously hoped for.

The lawn tennis court is now established in the Wadawanuck yard, and the sport incident to the game is being indulged in daily.

Work at the factory of the Atwood Machine company has been suspended for this week, to allow of making needed repairs to the engine, and taking account of stock.

The canker worms are making sad havoc with several orchards in this section. This will ruin the apple crop for this year.

The arrival of yachts in our harbor is now of daily occurrence. Several stopped over here on their way from the Yale-Harvard race.

The sword fish fleet did not meet with encouraging success last week. Warm or hot weather is needed to insure the capture of this wary fish.

Our lobster fishermen are meeting with good success. Early in the season only small catches rewarded the industry of fishermen for this crustaceous denizen of the deep.

Large quantities of coal have been arriving here of late. At this season of the year the bins of the railroad and steamboat companies are replenished.

Rear Admiral D. M. Fairfax, U. S. N., wife and daughter, of Hagerstown, Md., arrived here Saturday, to spend the summer at the Wilkins house, on Wadawanuck square. They are the most prominent guests that have been entertained here for several years.

SILVER DEFENDED.

Opening of Colorado Summer School of Science.

PROFESSOR ANDREWS' ADDRESS.

Attributes Our Depression to an Unjust [illegible]

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 5.—The Colorado Summer School of Science, Philosophy and Languages was formally opened yesterday afternoon by an address by Rev. Richard Montague of Colorado Springs, which was followed by an oration delivered by Professor E. B. Andrews, member of the International Monetary conference.

Professor Andrews [illegible] the ruinous effect of demonetization of silver in 1873 by Great Britain and Germany. This malign [illegible] the fall of prices and the rupture of the world of commerce into two hemispheres, between which trade can only go on only with great difficulty. The fall of prices brought with it two subordinate effects, each fearful in its way. One was injustice, dire, widespread and [illegible] every man who was in debt [illegible] when he paid, and so with every [illegible] in debt from that day to this. The other effect was the paralysis of productive industry and the tendency to turn banker and money lender.

If you engaged in industry your stock went downward in value while on your hands, if you had money its purchasing power increased on your hands while you slept, [illegible] I do not say that all the came from the fall in prices, but I firmly believe that this had more to do with it than any other single cause. The other main effect of demonetization was the rending of the world into a gold-using and silver-using hemisphere, with no par of exchange between.

Here in America the [illegible] of this than the fall in prices, but everything considered it is quite as great an event. There is no par of exchange any more between Mexico and the United States, between [illegible] Great Britain, between the United [illegible] and Japan, any more than there is between gold or iron, or between [illegible] and zinc. A Chinese wall is [illegible] between the gold world and the silver world worse than any [illegible] This is what has palsied England's trade with India and all the east, and led at last to the recent attempt to place India upon a gold basis.

Not only is trade between two parts of the world reduced to a gamble, but international lending and borrowing across the chasm of exchange is also painfully interfered with.

I propose to consider what is all [illegible] United States begin free coinage. [illegible] the first [illegible] accompanying the announcement of a free coinage policy a stringency arising from the fact that from circulation while silver would be coined to take its place, but slowly, our country would derive great advantage from siding with the silver states.

The [illegible] United States would take the place of the one great manufacturing nation of the silver world, and derive from that position the immense gains which England has hitherto reaped, but largely lost by the [illegible] silver. We should make [illegible] for Mexico, South America, China and Japan, and England, owing to lack of par of exchange with them, would lose most or all these markets.

No doubt there is a splendid chance. I do not wonder that the prospect carries away so many. [illegible] a glorious one. [illegible] the shadows after all, so dark that it is my belief that it is best not to attempt it now, but wait a little longer in our present unhappy and anomalous condition till we bring Great Britain to join us in remonetizing. But how can we [illegible] Great Britain [illegible] By [illegible] purchases silver and [illegible] a law [illegible] the secretary of the treasury to open our mints at any date when he is informed that England, Germany and the Latin Union, or any two of them, will do so.

To the Free Coinage of Silver

What would be the result of such a sound? It would probably make impossible the proposed introduction of the gold standard in India, leaving Indian exchange and the finances of the Indian government in a more unsound condition than ever. The Indian government proposes, by stopping the free coinage of silver, to treat the rupee as the equivalent of [illegible] gold cents, when the silver in it worth only about [illegible] cents.

It is doubtful if they can do this now, so slender is their stock of gold and so immense their supply of silver, but our act increasing the coinage and purchase of silver would depress the intrinsic value of their rupee still more, and at the same time make it harder for them to get gold. By dropping silver for the time being and joining the struggle for gold we shall perceptibly precipitate in Europe another fall of prices so aggravated that the most obdurate banker of Lombard street will have to admit that gold cannot be safely taken as the sole international money.

Opened For the Season.

WEIRS, N. H., July 5.—This popular summer resort was formally opened for the season yesterday and the attendance was estimated at 15,000 people, the largest number ever seen here on a similar occasion. Four bands and an orchestra furnished music. In addition to the concerts and dancing there were numerous excursions on the lake and pyrotechnic displays. The place was profusely decorated with national colors, not only in honor of the day but also in celebrating the adoption of a city charter by Laconia, of which Weirs constituted the first ward. The festivities closed with fireworks and illuminations.

Rung For the First Time.

TROY, N. Y., July 5.—The Columbian liberty bell was rung for the first time yesterday afternoon in this city, the ringing being controlled by electrical communication with Chicago. The statement from Chicago that the bell will be remelted and recast because of a flaw is denied. The casting was a perfect success, and the bell is one of the finest ever made.

Whole Family Drowned.

ST. PAUL, July 5.—Fred Denny, wife and two children of Minneapolis, were drowned yesterday while attempting to cross the river at Belle Prairie. A whirlwind capsized the boat.

Altgeld Admired.

CHICAGO, July 5.—The national conference of the Labor party adopted resolutions of admiration for Governor Altgeld for pardoning the anarchists.

Broke the "Safety" Record.

LONDON, July 5.—At Herne Hill, yesterday, L. J. M[illegible], the bicyclist, beat the "Safety" record by covering in one hour a distance of 26 miles 584 yards.

PEARY'S FALCON.

Viewed by Great Swarms of Sight-Seers in Boston.

BOSTON, July 5.—Swarms of sight-seers of both sexes, moved by curiosity crossed the gang-plank of Lieut. Peary's Falcon today and explored every nook and corner of the snug little barque. Likewise the [illegible] of silver quarters through the window of the little box office which has been temporarily established at Constitution Wharf was incessant, and must have made merry music in the ears of the bold explorer.

The Falcon, with her 300 tons, is not a [illegible] best, and today, crowded with boats and barrels of coal oil, dogs, donkeys and pigeons, bales of hay, snow shoes, [illegible] stores of every description, it was a long process to get [about her. Constitution wharf was hot, and the July heat made the temperature terrific. The perfume of the eternal coal oil caused visitors to cast a longing eye at the aerial crows' nest where the colors were [illegible] in the breeze which blew over the warehouses.

The Greenland dogs panted like so many steam engines and hung out their long, pink tongues. Their thick, busy coats were decidedly superfluous on a New England mid-summer day. Even the carrier pigeons sat in a semi-torpid state and the donkeys whisked their tails at the flies in a [illegible] perfunctory manner and consumed hay unceasingly.

The paraphernalia and equipment of the Falcon aroused the most intense interest, and the members of her company were plied with questions.

GUESTS ARRIVING.

Royalty Flocking to London to Attend Duke of York's Wedding.

LONDON, July 5.—Prince Henry of Prussia, a brother of Emperor William, who will represent his majesty at the wedding tomorrow of the Duke of York and Princess May of Teck, arrived in London today.

He was met at the Victoria station by members of the royal family and detachments of troops, and was at once escorted to Buckingham palace, where he will be the guest of her majesty during his sojourn in London.

Prince Henry is accompanied by his wife, Princess Irene.

All Due to a Woman.

BOSTON, July 5.—John Curran was arrested at [illegible] o'clock last night for an assault on James Hendrick, with a knife at [illegible] early in the evening. The [illegible] was the outcome of a quarrel over a woman, it is said. Hendrick was stabbed in the abdomen [illegible] and suffered much from loss of blood. His wounds are of a dangerous character and may cause his death.

Boom in Gold Properties.

NEW YORK, July 5.—A dispatch to The World from Prescott, Ariz., says: The low price of silver seems to have started a boom in gold properties. Several gold mines have been sold in the last month, and a [illegible] of promising claims were sold yesterday to eastern men for $100,000. Negotiations for the purchase of other claims are in progress.

Killed by a Toy Cannon.

BROOKLYN, July 5.—Edward Osborne, [illegible], had the top of his skull blown off by the explosion of a toy cannon shortly before noon yesterday. He had lighted the fuse of the cannon, and, having waited a minute without there being a report, he picked up the cannon to examine it. He was looking in the muzzle when it exploded.

To Appeal to the Grand Army.

ST. LOUIS, July 5.—The movement to secure funds with which to erect a monument to the memory of the late General W. T. Sherman had made slow progress. At a meeting of the committee having the matter in charge the chairman was authorized to issue a circular to the Grand Army posts for contributions to the fund.

New Hampshire Crook Caught.

BOSTON, July 5.—Officers of Division 1 yesterday afternoon arrested Frank Q. [illegible] in Keene, N. H., for the alleged larceny of a lot of gold pens, etc., from some person unknown. He was caught in the act of [illegible] the property, some of which is marked W. [illegible] Keene, N. H.

The Monocacy Aground.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 5.—The Japan advertiser, received by the Empress of China today, contains a dispatch, dated Hankow, as follows: United States ship Monocacy went ashore on Sunday on an island between [illegible] and Hankow. The forward part is badly on. Damage unknown.

Must Be Satisfactory to the Silverites.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—General J. A. Warner made the following statement yesterday: "A thorough poll of the silver forces establishes the fact that the Sherman law cannot be repealed without a substitute which will be satisfactory to the silverites."

Hotel Destroyed by Fire.

PORTLAND, Me., July 5.—Hotel Waldo, on Little Chebeague island, was destroyed by fire yesterday, none of the furniture being saved. All escaped without injury. Loss, $25,000.

ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY.

Proposition to Impeach President by the Ohio People's Party.

COLUMBUS, O., July 5.—The People's party of Ohio met in convention here yesterday.

The platform reaffirms the principles of the Omaha convention.

In refers to the tariff issue as a sham, denounces both of the old parties for surrendering to the British bankers and Wall street agents, and demands municipal ownership of street railways, water and gas plants and all similar franchises.

The ticket nominated is as follows: For governor, F. J. Bracken; lieutenant governor, Milton D. Cooley, Athens; treasurer, William H. Taylor; attorney general, Colonel J. S. Rhodes; judge of the supreme court, Captain C. T. Clarke; dairy and food commissioner, Thomas N. Hickman; member board of public works, Matthew Baber.

Just before adjournment a delegate created a sensation by introducing a resolution calling upon congress to impeach President Cleveland on the ground of high treason, in that he, as a representative of the British money power, is a traitor to this country.

The resolution was received with wild cheers and adopted by unanimous consent.

Ambassador Bayard's Reception.

LONDON, July 5.—Thomas F. Bayard, United States ambassador to Great Britain, gave a Fourth of July reception at the Buckingham Palace hotel yesterday. For two hours an unbroken procession of carriages moved up to the hotel entrance. Among those present were Lady Randolph Churchill, Lady Dilke and the most conspicuous members of the American colony in London.

His Last Celebration.

KEENE, N. H., July 5.—Charles Howard was run over at Troy yesterday by the afternoon passenger train for Boston, on the Fitchburg railroad. He was a laborer, aged [illegible]. He became intoxicated in celebrating the Fourth and lay down upon the track. His body was cut in two. It is not known where he belongs.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Full Flush of the Dairy Product is Now On.

MARKET GARDENERS' COMPLAINT.

Southern Truck is Keeping Down Prices of Home-Grown Truck.

BOSTON, July 5.—The butter business at Boston is growing larger and larger as the season advances. The full flush of the dairy products is now on and the liberal receipts tends to keep down the price. In quality the stock now on the market cannot be surpassed and this prime condition gives the cold storage people an opportunity to buy butter of the best quality at reasonable price. The money stress at the west has been a potent factor in the situation. The result is that the large receipts tend to a lowering of the prices.

June butter has been low-priced, and it is thought that if a financial ease does not soon come that July prices will be fully as low. At Boston, New York and Vermont dairy is bringing 18 to 20 cents while a few fine lots are worth 21 cents a pound.

Green Stuffs.

Boston market gardeners are complaining that southern truck is keeping down the price of the home grown article. The southern grower has certainly learnt a lesson in the packing of his vegetables which is a profitable one to him. Some prices now current are: Bunch beets, $2.50 to $3 per hundred bunches; parsley, $1 to $1.25 a box; cabbages, $1 to $1.50 a barrel; lettuce, 40 to 50 cents a box; rhubarb, $1 per hundred weight; new onions, $1.25 per hundred bunches; peas, $1.25 to $1.50 a box, string beans, $1.25 to $1.50 a bushel; cucumbers, $2.50 to $4 a hundred, and water cress 40 cents a dozen bunches. Norfolk potatoes are coming in large receipts and $3 a barrel is the ruling price.

The Berry Trade

is a lively feature of the fruit market. Strawberries are abundant and firm. The smaller grades are worth from 4 to 8 cents a box, while the fine, large native varieties bring as high as 15 cents a quart. North Carolina blueberries are bringing 10 to 17 cents a quart. Of the California fruit cherries are worth $1 to $1.25 a case, plums $4 to $4.50 a case and apricots $2.25 to $2.50 a crate. Native cherries are not yet very plentiful and bring from 8 to 10 cents a quart. New apples from Norfolk, warranted to produce the most dire colic pains, are costing 75 cents to $1 a crate, while russets and Baldwins of last year's growth are worth $2.50 to $4 a barrel.

Poultry.

A cool summer season has kept the poultry trade with the beach hotels almost at a standstill. Business is very dull at present, although just before the Fourth transactions were a little more than has been common of late. Spring chickens cost 25 cents a pound; broilers, 20 to 30 cents; turkey, 14 to 16 cents; ducks, 20 cents; pigeon, $2 to $2.50 a dozen, and squab, $3 a dozen.

The Quotations.

LAMBS AND MUTTONS—Trade was not quite up to expectations in muttons and lambs, though a fairly good one. Veals were in rather short supply, and cleaned up well at full quotations: Spring lambs, [illegible]; fall lambs, [illegible]; common to good, [illegible]; Chicago muttons, [illegible]; yearlings, [illegible]; choice heavy Brightons, [illegible]; choice eastern veals, [illegible]; common to good, [illegible]; Brighton and fancy, [illegible]

BEEF—In beef a good trade was reported. Prices are also claimed to be well sustained at: Choice to fancy steers, [illegible]; prime, [illegible]; good, [illegible]; light, [illegible]; extra heavy hinds, [illegible]; good, [illegible]; light, [illegible]; fores, [illegible]; light [illegible]; backs, [illegible]; rattles, [illegible]; chucks, [illegible]; rounds, [illegible]; rumps, [illegible]; rumps and loins, [illegible]; short ribs, [illegible]; loins [illegible]

BUTTER—The butter market is steady, with quotations at: Western creamery extra, [illegible]; firsts, [illegible]; imitation creamery, [illegible]; factory, [illegible]; northern creamery extra, [illegible]; eastern creamery extra, [illegible]. These are prices for round lots. Jobbing lots and fancy lots cost [illegible]

CHEESE—Cheese is steady, with the market at: Northern full creams, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; western, choice, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]. Liverpool is quoted at [illegible] on colored, and [illegible] on white.

EGGS—Eggs are steady, with the market at: Western, [illegible]; Michigan, [illegible]; island, [illegible]; eastern and northern, [illegible]

POTATOES—Potatoes are a little easier, under a pretty full supply: Norfolk, extras, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; reds, [illegible]

PORK—There were no new feature in the pork and lard markets. Trade is quiet. Quotations are unchanged.

Section Hand Killed.

HAVERHILL, Mass., July 5.—Morgan Shannon, aged 24, a section hand on the Boston and Maine railroad, was struck by the Bar Harbor express at 9 o'clock this morning and instantly killed. He was a new employe and did not belong in this vicinity. The accident took place at Atkinson, N. H., three miles north of Haverhill station.

Bank of England Notes Declined.

SIMLA, July 5.—In the legislative council, yesterday, Sir David Miller Barbour of the vice regal council said that under the new order sovereigns would be accepted to an unlimited extent by the Indian mints. Bank of England notes would not be so accepted. The silver now going to India would be taken only to avert a commercial panic.

Cannot Collect Bills.

PUEBLO, Col., July 5.—The effect of the silver trouble is already beginning to manifest itself in a startling manner in commercial circles. Collectors find it almost impossible to secure payment of even the smallest accounts, the stringency being far greater than has ever before been experienced in Pueblo.

Camperdown Reaches Malta.

VALETTA, Malta, July 5.—The battleship Camperdown, which ran into and sank the battleship Victoria during the recent maneuvers of the British Mediterranean squadron, off Tripoli, Syria, arrived here today. The full extent of the damage sustained by the Camperdown has not yet been made public.

Fight Ends in Murder.

LOUISVILLE, July 5.—John Marsa, James Francis and Dempsil Smith were killed in a fight at a picnic and dance near Woodbine yesterday. It is thought that Joe Mitchell fired the fatal shots. He has not been arrested.

Idle [illegible] Walk the Streets.

DENVER, July 5.—The mines of the state are practically closed and men who never before knew an idle moment are walking the streets. Some of the mines are still pumping, until it is seen what congress will do, for it would be expensive to let them fill up with water. This depression has affected all lines of business in the state.

The Deadly Electric.

BOSTON, July 5.—A boy only 4 years old attempted to cross the street in front of an electric car, and was crushed to death under its wheels. His name was Samuel Grogan and he lived at 8 Oneida street. The accident occurred at the corner of Washington and Cobb streets at 8:45 o'clock last evening.

CURIOUS CULLINGS.

A San Francisco copy reader "headed up" the account of the death of the chief of the fire department, "Gone to His Last Fire."

At Porthcawl, a Welsh watering place, a house owner only rents on condition that his tenants shall "draw no water from the pumps on Sunday."

In sawing a log at Beaver Dam mills, in Burke county, Ga., a snake was found in a knothole which, when the tree was standing, was 30 feet from the ground.

In accordance with an ancient family custom, when the late Lord Petre was buried 47 widows, one for each year of his lordship's life, received a loaf of bread and a newly minted shilling.

It is a serious matter in Armenia should a maiden attain her seventeenth year with no prospect of marriage, for when the festival of St. [illegible] she is obliged to fast three days and eat salt fish without quenching her thirst unless some kind swain promises to take her.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Madras curtains seem to go best with straw mattings in the summer home.

A teaspoonful of pulverized alum mixed with stove polish will give the stove a fine and lasting luster.

Hard water may be softened by boiling a small vial in a kettle of water. The carbonate of lime will become incrusted on the bottle.

The best way to clean wells and cisterns of foul air is to throw down a peck of unslacked lime. The heat so caused carries out the foul air with a rush.

Indelible ink stains on cotton or linen may be removed by saturating the spot with tincture of iodine and then washing the part with ammonia water.

PEARLINE.

Laid up for Repairs—the clothes that are washed without Pearline. The rubbing and scrubbing that's hard for you, is harder for them. Pearline washes clothes without scouring them to pieces. It gives no chance for harm, and it takes away half the work. It saves clothes and it saves strength. Pearline does away with the Rub, Rub, Rub. Get Pearline first, and you'll find it makes your clothes last.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door. First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. Pearline sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Lot 2—17 dozen White Lawn Waists, some plain, but mostly with colored edges, $1.00 each, same as have been sold all season for $1.50. Sizes 32 to 44. Everybody can get fitted from this lot.

Summer Shirts.

Unlaundered Shirts with colored bosoms—the tailiest Summer Shirt of the season. They launder beautifully. The bosoms are neat patterns and stylish colorings. Our price 49c each; [illegible], they usually sell everywhere for $1.

Ladies' Summer Underwear.

One case Ladies' Vests, low neck and sleeveless, pure Egyptian cotton, 15c each, 3 for 40c.

Compare this vest with what you have been buying for 25c, and you'll say they are the same. And they are, [illegible]. We sold the same quality earlier in the season for 25c.

Ladies' Combination Suits, short sleeves and knee lengths—Lisle finish—59c a suit. The regular value of these suits is $1.00.

Hosiery.

Three great Hosiery items.

Men, women and infants represented in this offering.

MEN'S—75 boxes men's "World's Fair" Seamless Half Hose—six pairs in a box, 69c a box. More than 100 boxes sold last Saturday.

WOMEN'S — Those Women's Fast Black Hose for 25c a pair, 3 for 65c, are still in the market. They are great value—full length, fine guage, high spliced heel, double soles. Try them.

INFANTS'—All sizes in Infants' Fine Imported Fast Black Ribbed Hose, 12½c a pair. Would actually be good value for 25c.

Junior vice commander of the Department of Connecticut G. A. R., John M. Brewer, was present during the latter part of the exercises.

Actor Richard Mansfield's yacht Royal Highness was given her trial trip on the Fourth and fulfilled the expectations of her builders in every respect. She sails beautifully and some of the former crack schooners will have to take her wake this summer. Mr. Mansfield took possession of the yacht at Groton Wednesday.

An express wagon collided with Dr. Cassidy's buggy, standing near Eaton, Chase & Co's on Water street, late Wednesday afternoon, overturning the vehicle. The horse took fright and ran swiftly through the thoroughfare to Market street, where he was stopped in front of Hirsch & Kronig's store. Dr. Cassidy's buggy was badly damaged.

The railroad companies operating in Connecticut have combined in an attempt to prevent the unnecessary detention of cars in loading and unloading freight. This abuse has grown to such an extent that serious loss and much inconvenience is continually caused to the railroad companies and to shippers who are often unable to procure cars.

William Clark of Mystic was the victim of a painful accident Monday afternoon. His horse was grazing on the roadside attached to a long rope, the end of which was held by Mr. Clark. The horse made a sudden start, throwing Mr. Clark down. Before he could release his hand from the rope the third and fourth fingers of his right hand were partially torn off.

The iron work on the Laurel Hill bridge will be finished Saturday, but it will probably be a fortnight before the stone work on the abutments is in condition for travel. Superintendent Palmer, who left town last week, has left the employ of the company after a creditable service of over ten years, and has retired to a well-earned rest at his home in Cleveland, O. Mr. Terry Kane succeeds to his position. But three of the original gang of thirteen bridge builders now remain in the city.

Some thirty years ago Judge S. T. Holbrook, Mr. Frank White, Dr. Routh, Dr. Allen, a former Norwich dentist, and Mr. Emmons, the artist, formed a social club, dining each 4th of July at Harmony grove, on the Gales Ferry road. Of the original members of the little society only Judge Holbrook and Mr. White survive, and they, cheered by the company of Judge Carter and Mr Chester W. Barnes, commemorated the Fourth at the usual place and in the usual manner on Tuesday.

Capt. Geer's Statement.

Captain Geer of the steamer City of Lawrence stated Wednesday to a representative of THE BULLETIN that he was not following in the wake of the steamer Chelsea when she went on Bartlett's reef. The Lawrence came along about an hour after the Chelsea went ashore, and hearing the whistles of distress approached within speaking distance. The Lawrence was in four fathoms of water. After learning there was no probability of danger to the boat or crew, the Lawrence proceeded to New London and notified Captain Scott of the Chelsea's predicament. Captain Geer of the Lawrence thought it would have been taking too many chances for him to have undertaken to haul the Chelsea off in the fog. He says he heard the lightboat bell ringing all right.

ENTERTAINED VISITORS.

Epworth League Reception in Central M. E. Church Vestry.

Notwithstanding the stormy weather Wednesday evening, a fair number gathered at the vestry of the Central Methodist Episcopal church, the occasion being an informal reception which was given by the Ladies' Aid society to Mrs. Frankie E. Hollingshead and Mrs. Fannie B. Naylor, both of whom were former members of the church, and also to Miss Chakrien Kingsley, daughter of the pastor, who has recently graduated at Mount Holyoke Female seminary and has just come to reside in this city. Mrs. J. M. Newton, the popular president of the Epworth league of the church, was present and gave an address of welcome in behalf of the society to the guests.

This address was full of impressive thought, beautifully and appropriately expressed, and called forth loud [illegible]. Miss Chakrien Kingsley replied [illegible] of the guests, in a humorous [illegible] appropriate address which [illegible] with the company. Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Naylor also gave [illegible] receiving applause. Remarks were then made by the Rev. J. Troland, the Rev. A. W. Kingsley, Mrs. A. W. Kingsley and C. E. Bromley. Prof. Balcom, the accomplished pianist, was present, and by request discoursed music of an elegant nature during the evening, winning the applause of the company.

The company broke up at 9 o'clock, all being well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

NORTH STONINGTON.

Personals—Visitors—Gold Watch Found.

At the Congregational church, Sunday, four persons were baptised and in the evening the installation of Deacons Benjamin Wheeler and Charles Edwin Williams took place. The exercises were conducted by the Rev. W. B. Carey, assisted by Mr. John D. Avery.

The Rev. Henry C. Randall of Essex visited his sister, Mrs. Ezra Wheeler, the past week.

The pulpit of the Second Baptist church was occupied Sunday by the Rev. Stephen Howell of Noank.

Mr. Frank Brown, a student of the Providence Business college, returned home for the vacation Monday.

Mrs. Tomlinson and sons John and Henry of Staten Island are visiting friends in the village.

Miss Lila Thompson is visiting her brother, Conductor Frank Thompson, at Hope Valley, R. I.

The Wheeler and Stanton steam mill has shut down for two months.

Mr. W. A. Clark, president of the Physicians' Financial association of New York, was in town a few days the guest of his parents, the Hon. and Mrs. Thomas Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace F. York are entertaining as guests Beatrice A. and Horace M. McCord, their grandchildren, of Suffield.

Miss [illegible] Babcock is visiting relatives at West Torrington, Conn.

Mr. Frank P. Larkham spent the [illegible] with his [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Larkham.

The gold watch lost by Miss Annie E. Main was found in a mysterious [illegible] after two weeks near the residence of Mr. John D. Avery by one of Mr. Avery's men. How it came there is a mystery.

Amasa D. Main was before George W. Edwards, justice, Monday, on a charge of burglary and theft. He was bound over to the September term of the superior court for trial.

STONINGTON.

Fourth of July Transformations—Swordfish—Police.

Moses A. Pendleton is having an addition built to his residence.

The schooner Gilbert Stancliff has arrived with a load of coal for the estate of Moses Pendleton.

Miss Belle Armstrong of the New Britain Normal school, is home on a short visit.

Saturday afternoon the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Pendleton gave an enjoyable lawn party at her residence on Main street, which was attended by about twenty-five guests.

William Miner of Ansonia is visiting friends and relatives here.

Saturday evening Frank Brown and Willard F. Pendleton were arrested by Constable W. J. [illegible] and Monday morning brought [illegible] the town court. They were charged with drunkenness and breach of the peace and resisting the officer. Both cases were adjourned till Wednesday.

Some very queer changes took place here during the night of July 3. When the people awoke on the morning of the Fourth it was hard to tell whether they were in their own houses or not. A down town grocery had suddenly been transformed into a boot and shoe store, a drug store had become a boat house, part of an uptown livery stable had been removed to the breakwater, numerous lobster pots, boats and well curbs adorned the park; gates were unhung and lay around the streets in every direction, fire alarms rung and everything was in general confusion, and no watchmen were appointed to keep order.

The sloop In Time arrived Sunday night from Block Island with four swordfish, and the schooner Mattie and Lena arrived Monday with six swordfish. All were shipped to Boston.

An immense strawberry crop has been harvested in this section. The berries have been of superior quality and sold at a reasonable price.

The Watch Hill hotels are receiving guests by nearly every train, and the prospect is bright for a prosperous season.

Miss Annie Broben of Hartford, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. O. Durgan, on Water street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Palmer are visiting relatives in Newport, R. I.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Drill Hall, Montreal, Filled with an Interested Audience.

SPEECH BY PRESIDENT CLARK.

Ovation to the Speaker—Prize Banners Awarded.

MONTREAL, Que., July 6.—Addresses of welcome were made this morning to the Christian Endeavor delegates by Rev. J. Macgillivray on behalf the city pastors, General Secretary Budge on behalf of the Y. M. C. A., and by Mr. A. A. Ayer on behalf of the general reception committee.

Rev. P. S. Henson, D. D., of Chicago, responded on behalf of the board of trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor and the delegates present.

The board of trustees of the United society met this afternoon and chose three new members. They were the Rev. Canon Richardson, London, Ont., representing the church of England in Canada; the Rev. J. M. Lowden, Boston, representing the Free Baptists of New England; and George Lewis Howe of Louisville, Ky., representing the southern Presbyterians. The trustees selected San Francisco as the meeting place for 1895.

This evening the Rev. Francis Clark, D.D., president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, addressed the assembly at Drill hall, as follows:

An old saying, has recently been applied with much force to the Christian Endeavor movement—saying to the effect that every new and successful organization must pass through three stages of development,—the "pooh pooh stage," the "bow-wow stage" and the "hear hear stage."

The society has passed through the "pooh pooh" and "bow-wow" stages and [illegible] them.

The "hear-hear" stage may be said to have ushered in two other developments, "the initiative" and the "grind-my axe" stage.

In [illegible] this last is perhaps the most dangerous of all; but with God's good grace, which has brought the movement through scores and growth to popularity and success, we believe it will survive this danger, too.

It has been said more than once during the past year by critics that the Christian Endeavor society must have a new [illegible], a crusade of its own, or else it was doomed to [illegible]. "Let it devote the energies of a million and a half of young people" they have said, "exclusively to one reform for only ten years, and the world will be [illegible]."

Now, with all due deference to those friends who would usher in this new crusade or fourth stage of development of the movement let me ask a few questions.

Is it nothing, O advocate of a new crusade, is it nothing that the society has created or revived and rejuvenated twenty-six thousand young people's prayer meetings?

Is it nothing that it has poured the warm life blood of the youthful enthusiasm into thousands of week-night prayer meetings?

Is it nothing that it has comforted and strengthened pastors in all their work, as [illegible] of them are ready to testify?

Is it nothing that [illegible] of young people it has solved the question of weekly amusements, not by preaching against their amusements or by raising [illegible] them, but by the higher [illegible] of [illegible], of overcoming evil with good?

Is it nothing that thousands of Sunday schools have been enlarged through the efforts of the Sunday school committee?

Is it nothing that tens of thousands of young strangers have been made to feel at home by the calling committee?

Is it nothing that a multitude of churches have been made bright with God's hand-painted pictures, the flowers, and that an equal multitude of hospitals have also [illegible] glowed with their radiance, the beautiful radiance that follows the footsteps of the flower and the sunshine committee?

Is it nothing that missionary meetings have been multiplied, that hundreds have given themselves to proclaim the good tidings, and that at least a hundred thousand dollars were given last year by the Christian Endeavor societies, in addition to what would otherwise have been given through the agency of the missionary committee?

Is it, above all, nothing that through the efforts of the Lookout and Allied committees, and of faithful helpers in every society scores of thousands of our associate members came into the evangelical churches, and came, not to be drones but to be working Christians?

I recount these things not to boast but simply that we may remind the good people who do not understand our purpose and methods, and who are crying out for a new crusade, that we have found our mission, and that mission is to promote in every way the spiritual life of young people; that we are waging a crusade, and that crusade is the upbuilding in all ways of the Church of Christ.

Let me go so far as to suggest two or three "larger things" for the year to come, which I believe may well occupy the thoughts, the prayers, the energies of all Endeavorers.

I.—One of the advance steps that we [illegible] take is the cultivation of a larger and more intelligent spirit of patriotism and good citizenship.

II.—Another important enlargement for the year to come is an enlargement and more practical exemplification of missionary spirit.

III.—One more definite, tangible, all-important purpose I would present to Endeavorers for the coming year—an enlargement and cementing of our interdenominational, international fellowship.

Ours has a spiritual union. It seeks no organic unity. It demands no uniformity of creed or polity. It means at no conscientious differences of opinion. It insists, first of all, on the uttermost loyalty of each society to its own church and denomination. It is a union in service; there is the "Endeavor." It is a union of spirit and fidelity to one Master; there is the "Christian." It is expressed by our name Christian Endeavor.

Secretary Baer's report showed the society had grown in 13 years, from a local society in Portland, Me., to 1,577,040 members with unions in every land, and 186,000 have been added to the churches.

Not counting the denominations outside of America, the denominational representation is as follows: The Presbyterians still lead with 5,411 societies; the Congregationalists have 4,651; the Baptists, 3,910; the Disciples of Christ, and Christians, 2,143. The Methodist Episcopal denomination has stood fourth, but, for reasons too well known to be [illegible] to again, has now taken fifth place, with 1,858.

In England with over 600 societies, Australia over 385; India, 71; Turkey, 1; poor persecuted Turkey, still has 42 societies; New Zealand, 36; Japan, 34; Madagascar, 29; Scotland, 30; Mexico, our neighbor, 23; West Indies, 19; Africa, 15; China, 14; Ireland, 10; France, 9; Samoa, 9; Sandwich Islands, 6; Bermuda, 3; Brazil, 2; Persia and Chile, Columbia, Norway and Spain each 1. In all nearly a thousand societies in foreign lands, making a grand total enrollment for the wide, wide world of 28,224 local societies, with a membership of 1,577,040.

The net gain in number of local societies in 1882 was 6; 1883, 49; 1884, 100; 1885, 271; 1886, 697; 1887, 1,444; 1888, 2,586; 1889, 2,783; 1890, 3,341; 1891, 5,261; 1892, 4,806; and 5,976 is the forward step this year. In other words, more societies have been organized since our New York convention than were organized during seven years of the societies' early history.

Dr. Clark after speaking in the hall went to the tent and repeated his address. He received an ovation. The prize banner for the greatest absolute gain in numbers for the year was awarded to the Pennsylvania delegation, which mustered 600 strong. New Mexico's delegates received the banner for the greatest proportionate gain in Christian Endeavor membership. Prize banners were also awarded to Illinois, New York and District of Columbia for increases in Junior society membership. The meetings were brought to a close in hall and tent by singing and a benediction.

THE HOME RULE BILL.

House of Commons Crowded to See the Bill Forced Through Committee.

LONDON, July 6.—The house of commons was crowded tonight to see clause 5 of the home rule bill forced through the committee. The committee worked steadily. Only an occasional ebullition of unionists' resentment or bitterness disturbed the proceedings. At 9.30 o'clock Mr. Balfour, leader of the unionists, began speaking. He was in the middle of a sentence when "Big Ben" struck 10 o'clock. He did not wait to finish it, but resumed his seat amid deafening opposition cheers and cries of "shame" and "gag." Almost instantly Chairman Mellor put the question of the last unionist's question. He spoke timidly and his voice was hardly audible in the din. Cheers and [illegible] Mr. Gladstone and [illegible] out into the division lobby. [illegible] They were [illegible] the waving of Irish hats. The amendment was lost by a vote of [illegible].

As the leaders [illegible] all the members were [illegible] them with cheers and [illegible] of hats. Clause five, [illegible] the Irish legislative [illegible], was then passed by a vote of [illegible]. Clause six, which provides for an Irish parliament with a legislative council of 48 members, was passed without debate. The vote was 318 to 290. Henry Labouchere, radical, John Burns, labor, Charles Conybear, radical, and Gavin Brown Clark, radical, went with the opposition in this division, so as to make known their disapproval of an Irish house of lords.

The conservatives howled and the Irish howled [illegible] while the liberals cheered with [illegible]. Chairman Mellor tried to [illegible] the attention of the house, but his voice was lost in the volume of [illegible]. Eventually the [illegible] of the [illegible] gave him an opportunity to put the question of clause 7, which provides for the constitution of the [illegible] assembly.

Sir James Fergusson, conservative, claimed there were blanks in this clause.

No question can be raised at this time, said Chairman Mellor. The clause was then carried by a vote of 285 to 260. The largeness of the majority evoked loud cheers which were arrested by the unionists.

Clause three, which contemplates cases of disagreement between the two houses of Irish legislature, was carried by a vote of 283 to 261. The abatement of the confusion left Mr. Gladstone an opportunity to move the committee report progress. The motion was carried before the conservatives fairly realized what was being done. Mr. Gladstone hastily gathered his papers and left the house. The opposition after denouncing the premier for his summary method of cutting off further discussion agreed to a motion to adjourn.

A page and a half of the bill was passed through the committee this evening. This is almost as much space as the house in committee had disposed of in all the previous sittings.

NATIONAL CYCLING ASSOCIATION.

The Brooklyn Branch Begins Its Season—Exciting Races.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 6.—The Brooklyn branch of the National Cycling association began its season today in the presence of 1,500 spectators. The races were all close and exciting. In the second race, P. J. Berlo of Boston and C. W. Dorntge of Buffalo, collided and were thrown over an embankment. Neither was badly hurt.

First race, quarter mile scratch. H. C. Wheeler 1, P. J. Berlo 2, H. G. Crocker, Newton, Mass., 3. Time, 34 1-3 seconds.

Second race, half mile handicap. H. G. Crocker, 70 yards, first; C. J. Appel, Rochester, 40 yards, second; H. C. Wheeler, scratch, third. Time, 1:10.

Third race, two mile scratch. Wheeler 1, Dorntge 2, Berlo 3, Crocker 4. Time, 4:5:45⅖.

Fourth race, five mile handicap. Dorntge, 250 yards, 1; C. Bechinger, 700 yards, 2; Berlo, 180 yards, 3. Time, 12:16 4-5.

THE ANSONIA CASE.

Dr. Pulford in New Haven Jail—Damaging Testimony.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 6.—Dr. W. A. Pulford of Ansonia is in the county jail here, held under a warrant charging him with the murder in the second degree of Helen Nesbitt of Ansonia, whose death occurred [illegible], resulting from a criminal [illegible] alleged to have been performed by the doctor.

A preliminary hearing will be held tomorrow morning at Ansonia. Coroner Mix has a great mass of testimony in his possession, said to be of a very damaging nature, so far as Dr. Pulford is concerned. The coroner knows the train on which the nurse in whose house in Westfield the unfortunate young woman died, and the facts attending her arrival and departure from New Haven. Rumor has it tonight that the young man who is alleged to be the author of Miss Nesbitt's downfall will appear in the case as the chief witness for the state.

THURSDAY'S BASE BALL GAMES.

Pittsburg Defeats Boston—Chicago Downs the Philadelphias.

PITTSBURG 10, BOSTON 6.

Wesleyan Whitewashed and Drops Out of the Race.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—Boston had today's game won to all appearances until the ninth inning, when Pittsburg got in a few hits. After two men were out, Boston got in a few errors and Umpire McLaughlin got in a few bad decisions and the result was five runs and a victory for Pittsburg. McLaughlin's work was poor all through the game and Boston did not want him to officiate, and they sent a second protest to President Young tonight. Attendance 2,100. Score:

STILL THE MOB.

Paris Police Have No Time to Do Anything But Fight.

PARIS, July 7.—A mob took possession of the Boulevard du Temple at 10.30 o'clock last night and began breaking windows. The [illegible] charged twice before they could force the rioters back. The police used revolvers and several rioters were shot. The rioters fired back but wounded only one policeman. The Figaro says that omnibuses were overturned and set afire by rioters in the Rue St. Maur and Rue Oberkampf. The republican guards charged the mobs in both streets. The mob fought stubbornly but were routed. Thirty rioters were arrested. About forty were wounded and were carried off by their friends.

The labor leader Allemane speaking at the Main exchange yesterday warned his hearers about opening a fight with the government. He said more than 25,000 troops had been brought from the provinces to Paris within the last few days. If the workmen should go into the streets to obtain their rights, they would be mowed down by the military. The country was not yet ripe for the revolution.

At 1.30 o'clock this morning the streets are quiet. The troops have been withdrawn from the neighborhood of the Labor exchange. Policemen guard the Place de la Republique, the Boulevard Voltaire and the Boulevard du Temple.

Fell from a Third-Story Window.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 6.—The two-year-old son of Patrick J. and Annie Hadigan of 19 Mechanic street fell from the third-story window at 7.30 last evening. He fortunately escaped without serious injury. The child was taken to the station house and examined by Dr. Root and Police Surgeon Olds. As it was severely bruised and internal injuries were feared, it was taken to the hospital. Today the house physician reported that the little one is doing well and will soon be out again as well as ever. No bones were broken. The accident is said to have resulted from the carelessness of the mother who was drunk at the time and was afterwards arrested.

Earthquake in Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 6.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt during the storm of last night throughout the towns in the Blackstone Valley, south of this city, including Millbury, Whitinsville and Uxbridge. Earth tremors were also experienced in Oxford and Webster.

Run on a Watertown, N. Y., Bank.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., July 6.—A run has been started on the Jefferson County savings bank in this city. Governor Flower was a witness of the run this morning, and in a speech gave assurance that the bank was entirely safe. The speech had an excellent effect.

Supt. Byrnes' Denial.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Superintendent Byrnes denies that he intends to prevent a meeting of anarchists in the Windsor theater tomorrow evening, but says he will have policemen at the meeting to see that the peace is not disturbed.

Burglary in Ansonia.

ANSONIA, Conn., July 6.—The grocery store of J. Burkhardt & Co., in Shelton, was robbed of $40, some cigars and other goods last night. Allingham & [illegible] store, in Ansonia, was also entered and a small quantity of goods taken.

COULD NOT GET HER BOY.

Mrs. McGowan Applies for the Custody of Her Son, But is Refused.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., July 6.—Mrs. Ann McGowan of Ware, Mass., today applied for the custody of her son James, known here as James Burke, the supposed son of Martin Burke of this city, who brought him up. The selectmen of the town petitioned the probate court for a statement from the guardian of the boy.

At a hearing today Mrs. McGowan claimed that the boy was kidnapped by his father thirteen years ago and that she found out last week where the boy was. The evidence tended to show that the boy's father, Thomas McGowan, left him with his brother-in-law, Martin Burke, claiming that the boy's mother was not a proper person to care for the child. James did not recognize his mother in court, and refused to go with her. Judge Tingier appointed Martin Burke guardian and an appeal was taken to the superior court.

New York Chamber of Commerce Consider the Country's Finances.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A special meeting of the chamber of commerce to consider the disturbed condition of the country's finances was held this afternoon and was largely attended.

Mr. John Claflin, the dry goods merchant, offered a resolution calling upon congress for the immediate repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

A committee of seven was appointed to co-operate with other commercial bodies representing similar interests of the chamber in Washington, with power to use all legitimate means for the prompt repeal of the Sherman law.

Case of Small-Pox at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 6.—A Russian Finn named "Fred," one of the crew of the three-masted schooner Harold C. Beecher, Captain Greenwin, which arrived at this port yesterday afternoon from Brunswick, Ga., loaded with lumber, was taken to the pest house this morning, as he was suffering with malignant small-pox.

Fortunately for the city, the quarantine regulations were so stringently enforced in this case by Health Officer Wright that little apprehension is felt about any case of the disease breaking out in the city. The Beecher had no sooner arrived in the harbor than Health Officer Wright boarded her. He found "Fred" sick with what the captain and crew considered malaria. He at once pronounced the man's ailment small-pox and quarantined the vessel.

If Health Officer Wright had been an hour later, the crew would have been paid off and gone ashore to carry the germs of the dreaded disease about the city and among the sailors' lodging houses, where the disease spreads rapidly.

Storm Damage at Norwalk.

NORWALK, Conn., July 5.—A heavy storm of thunder and lightning raged for about an hour last night; it was the heaviest experienced in years, and particularly severe in the Cranberry Plains district, where several large trees were uprooted. The roof of Charles Reynolds' house was carried away and John Tuber's barn was demolished, one horse being killed.

LATE AUSTRALIAN ADVICES.

Business at a Standstill—Tens of Thousands Out of Work.

EVERYBODY DISCOURAGED.

Many Persons Seeking a Chance to Reach the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—News brought by the steamer Mariposa today from Australia is of a discouraging nature. The closed banks are trying to resume and business is at a stand still.

Strikes are imminent and tens of thousands of people are out of work. A number of coal mines have shut down, wages of sailors are being reduced and omnibus drivers went on a strike because their wages were reduced.

The unemployed swarm along the docks, seeking a chance to stow away on vessels bound for the United States.

The Mariposa's second cabin and steerage were crowded. Nearly all those who came [illegible] men and women, who were once well to do.

The governments of Victoria, New South Wales and Queensland are doing all in their power to relieve the situation, with some degree of success. One of the measures adopted by the government of New South Wales is the establishment of a state bank.

WORK OF THE CYCLONE.

A Dwelling House Carried Into the Lake.

LAKEFIELD, Minn., July 6.—A cyclone struck here last night, doing considerable damage to buildings. The dwelling of Mr. Thompson, five miles west of here was carried into the lake and wrecked, [illegible] of the family being seriously injured. The dwelling of Andrew [illegible], three miles south was wrecked and [illegible] and one child were fatally injured. Several lives are reported to have been lost in the country near here.

[illegible] Injured in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 6.—It is reported here from [illegible], eight miles distant, that a cyclone struck Pomeroy early in the evening, [illegible] every half of the buildings in the town and injured a large number of people. Information is very meagre as no communication can be had with Pomeroy or other nearby towns. It is believed that Fonda and Manson also suffered from the storm. Pomeroy is a town of 1,000 inhabitants, on the Central railway. A railway message states that a special train bearing physicians has been sent from Fort Dodge to Pomeroy. The storm came from the northeast and devastated a wide territory.

Later—The operator at Tara, Iowa, telegraphs that one hundred are dead at Pomeroy and two hundred injured. Not a building is left standing in the town.

Fourteen Persons Killed by a Tornado.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 6.—Meagre reports just received indicate that a terrible tornado passed about four miles south of [illegible] between Aurelia and Newell. [illegible] damage was done to property. Fourteen persons are reported killed and a large number injured.

INQUEST AT NEWPORT.

Investigation Into Cause of Death by Exploding Gun-Cotton.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 6.—Upon request of the officers of the torpedo station Coroner Stanhope today opened an inquest into the cause of death of the three men killed by the explosion there last Monday during the burning of the gun cotton factory. The state officials have no rights upon the government reservation, but such as have been especially granted by the department at Washington. Those killed were all civilians and several years ago when two or three were killed by a torpedo explosion the state authorities were also asked to hold an investigation, according to their usual practice.

Commander Converse, Lieutenant Commander Bullung, Ensign Capehart and several employes at the station, including one of those whose duty was in the gun cotton factory and who discovered the fire, testified.

To sum up the testimony, it would appear that the fire either started from Dryer No. 1, or the picker. In either place was much dry cotton. The fire then rapidly extended to eight or ten large powder cans containing dry [illegible]. Ensign Capehart showed a [illegible] of metal taken from his chest, which [illegible] to be part of one of them. [illegible] who were killed were simply [illegible] their previous. Thus far there are no signs of any one being personally to blame for the loss of life.

An adjournment was made without date, but it is doubtful if much more testimony will be desired by the coroner to arrive at a decision.

A BANKRUPT DUKE.

His American Friends to [illegible] Subscriptions.

CHICAGO, July 6.—The friends and advisers of the Duke of Veragua in this country, having learned that his financial affairs in Spain are in such a condition as to threaten the loss of his entire estate, have decided to raise a considerable fund for the benefit of his family. Mr. Thos. W. Palmer has consented to act as chairman of a committee to receive subscriptions, not only in the United States but also in all the other American Republics and the West Indies.

The funds will be invested in United States securities and held in trust for the benefit of Don Cristoval Colon, the son, and Dona Maria Dolgado, the daughter of the duke. Letters from Madrid state that the beautiful residence of the duke in that city, with its entire furniture, many valuable works of art and the entire library were seized by his creditors while he was in Chicago as a guest of honor of the World's fair.

MATE DROOKER'S A CRUEL CHARGE.

Crew of the American Ship [illegible] Desert at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—The American ship Tam O'Shanter arrived from New York today. When the ship anchored the men deserted her and went to the office of the United States marshal. All were more or less bruised and cut and Henry Hill is in a frightful condition, owing to the cruelty of Second Mate Crocker. He had many wounds on his body. The mate is a giant and was the terror of the crew during the voyage. If the sailors did not move as quickly as possible they were beaten and they could hardly stand or move. Crocker was arrested charged with beating and wounding sailors on the high seas.

Large Hail [illegible] at Stamford.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 6.—A terrific electric storm raged here last evening. Hailstones as large as walnuts fell. The lightning was incessant for three hours and the thunder was terrific, like the continuous firing of musketry. Trees were blown down, roads washed out and cellars damaged. The rain and hail were so blinding that it was impossible to get [illegible]. It was the worst storm in this section for a long time.

To Restock With Black Bass.

There was a larger catch of shad in Connecticut this season than for many years. This is gratifying. Indications are that black bass are also going to be plenty this summer. There is no more "gamey" fish than the small mouth black bass. The New Haven Palladium thinks that our fish commissioners could not do better than to spend a portion of their increased appropriation in restocking our lakes and rivers with black bass. All that has been done of late years has been done by private persons out of their own pockets. This has been effective in several localities; but there are plenty of good opportunities left.

Captain Bowen May Stay.

Captain W. H. C. Bowen, U. S. A., now detailed on special duty in this state and attached to the staff of the governor as inspector and military instructor of the national guard, has been ordered by the war department to rejoin his company without delay. This is the result of his recent promotion to a captaincy. It is understood that a request has gone forward to the adjutant general of the United States army asking for an extension of Captain Bowen's detail to this state and a revocation of the order directing him to join his company.

A Cousin of Joe Johnston.

Mrs. Johnston of New Haven, 80 years old, has lately been the guest of her cousin, Dwight Gallup, of Ledyard. She was married when young to Mr. Johnston and went with him to Turkey, where they spent twenty years as missionaries, returning home before the war. Her husband was a southern man and a cousin of General Joe Johnston. They had one son who served as chaplain in the union army and one who was a chaplain in the confederate army. Mrs. Johnston is the author of a book entitled "The Young Chaplain."

A Family of Oarsmen.

The college men hereabouts are talking of the achievement of young Rogers in the Yale boat last Friday morning, since there had been whispered confidences a few days before the race that he was in danger of breaking down before the four miles had been pulled through. Now in those places where college athletes meet, there is more talk of Rogers' beautiful watermanship, and the apparent ease with which he pulled without flinching the stroke through to the finish than about any other feature of the race. These Rogers boys are marvels. They are the the sons of the sculptor Rogers, whose statuettes adorn so many libraries and parlors all over the United States. The oldest was a great and winning Yale oar, his fame being a tradition in Yale. The second was also a good oarsman, pulling a winning boat, and now the third, a youngster of 19, maintains the family name, while the fourth, who is preparing for college, is a great athlete and seems likely to take his brother's place when he, too, graduates.

A Norwich Boy in Australia.

News was received this week from Fred Rogers, the seventeen-year-old boy traveler, who was reported in Australia last March. He writes to a relative in this city that he intends to ship from Melbourne soon as cabin boy on some American ship and reach either Boston or New York. About a year ago young Rogers left Norwich, saying that he intended to visit his father in Brooklyn, N. Y. He remained with his parent a short time and then took passage on a ship that was about to leave the harbor. After that he was not heard of until a letter received by relatives here disclosed the fact that he was a genuine Australian bushwhacker. His last letter comes direct from that part of the island known as the "bush," and must possess a decidedly novel interest for its recipients.

Young Rogers was a resident of this city for several years, and received his early education in our schools.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

To be Held in the Broadway School House, August 5.

The regular semi-annual postal examination will be held Saturday, Aug. 5, at the Broadway school house, beginning at 9 a. m. Applications for this examination will be received up to the hour of closing business July 17. The age limitation for carrier is from 21 to 40 years of age and for clerk over 18 years. The civil service commission takes this opportunity of stating that the examinations are open to all reputable citizens who may desire to enter the postal service, without regard to their political affiliations.

All such citizens, whether democrats or republicans, or neither, are invited to apply. They shall be examined, graded and certified with entire impartiality and wholly without regard to their political views, or to any consideration save their efficiency, as shown by the grades they obtain in the examination. For application blanks, full instructions and information relative to the duties and salaries of the different positions, apply to the secretary of the board at the post office, Mr. Marshall Jewett.

NEW IDEAS IN LOBSTER BOATS.

Two Built at Noank Containing Auxiliary Steam Power.

The Morgan boat shop at Noank has turned out to the last stage of completion two lobster boats that are a novelty in their way and embrace some very clever ideas. The boats named respectively the Bo Peep and Mizpah, look like the ordinary thirty foot jib and mainsail lobsterman that sail from that place in pursuit of the palate-tickling shell fish, but differs from them especially when the wind abates, in the fact that they have a little boiler and engine in the cabin attached to a screw, which enables the little craft to defy what the seamen call "a white ash breeze." Smokestacks would be in the way, so the mast is made of steel and hollow, and through that the smoke from the fire finds its way up some twenty-five feet to the open air.

Anyone who has tried knows that pulling lobster pots by hand is pretty hard work. So the crew of this craft just connect the line attached to the pot to the engine, then it is simply press the button, the crew do the rest, until about two miles of line come up and finally the [illegible].

Blasted Beans—Lawn Party—School Meeting.

Blast has affected the beans in many sections. What the cause of it is we are unable to state.

John Collins and wife of Clark's Falls visited Shewville Monday.

Jacob Will, Jr., of Shewville caught a "pickerel" in the mill pond Sunday that tipped the scales at two pounds, nine ounces.

Mrs. Joseph Hall lies in a critical condition at her residence in Hallville. Dr. Paddock of Norwich is attending her.

The young ladies of the St. James parish, Poquetanuck, held a party on the lawn of Erastus Hewitt, Thursday evening, June 29. Strawberries, ice cream, cake, etc., were served in good style. There was a large attendance.

The Rev. R. H. Gidman of Preston City Congregational church held a short praise meeting at the residence of Misses Hannah and Eliza Witter, Thursday evening, the 29th. There was a small attendance.

The annual meeting of the Twelfth school district was held in the school house Thursday evening, June 29. The following officers were chosen for the year ensuing: Charles H. Clark, committee; Seth Main, treasurer and collector; Appleton Main, clerk.

SALEM.

The Glorious Fourth—A Wedding—A Barn Struck by Lightning.

The glorious Fourth was generally observed as a holiday by our citizens. The Devil's Hop Yard, Gardner's Lake and other resorts were well patronized.

A quiet wedding occurred at the home of Thomas Murry Thursday, June 29, the contracting parties being Miss Millie W. Sisson of this place, daughter of Mrs. Murry, and the Rev. C. A. Purdy of North Truro, Mass. Promptly at 8 p. m. the happy couple entered the parlor and took their position under a pretty floral arch. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jacob Betts of East Glastonbury, assisted by the Rev. E. W. Merritt of Salem. Master Gilbert J. Murry acted as best man. The bridesmaid was Miss Lila Purdy. Deacon Henry Marvin and family, Mrs. Wm. Patten and others of Colchester; Mr. Robert Murry and family of Meriden; the Rev. J. Betts and wife of East Glastonbury; the Rev. E. Merritt and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. N. Clark of Salem were present. Mr. McDonald of Chesterfield rendered several selections on Scotch bagpipes, which were a novelty to most of the party. After the ceremony a reception was held. The bride received many beautiful presents.

Friday Mr. and Mrs. Purdy started for their seaside home, where they were given a reception by the people of Mr. Purdy's parish.

During the thunder storm Wednesday evening a fire was observed at the westward, which proved to be the large stock barn of John Purcell on the Daniel Fuller farm, and which had been struck by lightning. A large quantity of hay and farming tools were consumed. There was no insurance on the property.

SPRAGUE.

Personal—Sunday School Picnic.

Mrs. Julia Kinney is visiting her brother in Malden, Mass.

Miss Delia Bulsey is visiting in Arcadia.

The Rev. Father J. Synnott has gone to Europe, and will be absent two months.

Mrs. Owen Stewart of Willimantic, who has been visiting at L. N. Stewart's returned home on Monday.

Miss Sadie Amedon of New Haven was at home on the Fourth.

The Baltic Methodist Episcopal Sunday school held its annual picnic on the grounds of A. G. Pember on the Fourth.

HANOVER.

Election of Officers—Visitors—Baptism.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E., the following officers were elected: President, Gould S. Higgins; vice president, Hattie B. Chapman; secretary and treasurer, Jennie C. Gallup; recording secretary, Margaret L. Allen.

E. A. Higgins and family of Plantsville, are spending a week at the parsonage.

Pryce Jones and family are at Mrs. E. Jones' for the summer vacation.

Miss Katie A. Breed is attending the International Christian Endeavor convention at Montreal.

In connection with the communion service last Sunday, Edith Ives Higgins, grandchild of the Rev. L. H. Higgins, was baptized by the pastor. Two members were also received into the church by profession.

It is proposed to unite the Sunday evening and the Y. P. S. C. E. service in one during the months of July and August.

Mr. J. L. Saxton and wife of Norwich Town were present at the Sunday morning service.

Webster Standish and wife returned from the Columbian fair Monday evening. He is enthusiastic in its praises.

Frank Jones of New York spent the Fourth here. He rode his cycle from New London.

CHAPLIN.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips Goes West—United With the Church.

The Rev. Milton S. Phillips left Monday for the state of Washington where he goes for improvement of health.

A large congregation was at church Sunday. Mr. George Howard and Willie Neff united with the church. Two little children of T. L. Neff were christened.

The meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. in the evening, fully attended and interesting, was led by Ulla G. Church. The Rev. Mr. Phillips spoke. About $170 was given the pastor, contributed by his Chaplin and North Windham parishioners.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips' family remain in the parsonage during his absence.

Walter Palmer of Plainfield, the veteran wool buyer, has bought the season's clip, paying 20 cents per pound. Mr. Palmer has also bought heavy beef cattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are entertaining a little son that arrived last Friday.

TALK OF TATTLERS

Prevents the Marriage of an Eastport Parson.

FLOCK READY TO GREET HIS WIFE.

The Rev. Mr. Day Went Forth to Bring Back His Bride—Came Home Alone.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Rev. E. E. Day, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Eastport, L. I., has informed his congregation that he was jilted on the evening of his expected marriage to Miss Fanchier, daughter of George N. Fanchier of New Canaan, Conn.

Mr. Day is a young man and very popular with his congregation. About three weeks ago he announced that he was going to be married, and expected to return home with his bride Thursday, June 29.

While the pastor was gone for his bride elaborate arrangements were made for the reception. Just as twilight set in on the eventful day Pastor Day put in an appearance.

He Was Alone.

He made no explanation to his friends, beyond stating that the marriage had not taken place.

All sorts of stories then began to circulate. On Sunday he arose in his pulpit and explained the whole matter to his congregation.

He said that when he arrived at the young lady's home he found several stories had been circulated against him. The minister denounced all the stories as false and malicious.

He declared that there had been no reconciliation between him and Miss Fanchier.

MAGAZINE BLOWN UP.

Lightning Strikes Powder—Nine Persons Are Severely Injured.

KINGSTON, N. Y., July 6.—One of the severest electric storms ever known in this section passed over this place last evening. It lasted for more than an hour, and during that time telegraph, telephone and electric light wires seemed ablaze with a bluish liquid fire. All electric lights were extinguished.

Vandusen Bros.' powder magazine, at Devil's lake, a small settlement on the outskirts of the city, was struck by lightning and completely demolished. There were about 25 kegs of powder in the magazine, and their explosion blew the brick structure to atoms, destroying several buildings near by, and injuring nine persons, two men and the other seven women and children. The terrible flash was followed by a dull roar, and many persons rushed from their houses in terror, thinking the city had been visited by an earthquake.

Anthony Prumuck, his wife and children were seriously cut and bruised by flying bricks, glass and other debris.

John Conaway, his wife and children were hurled from their chairs, knocked unconscious and severely cut and bruised by falling timbers.

George Sawolski and his family escaped with only a severe shaking up.

CAMPERDOWN'S INJURIES.

Destroyer of the Victoria Did Not Escape Herself.

VALETTA, Malta, July 6.—The British battleship Camperdown, which sank the Victoria, was placed on dock here today to undergo repairs.

As she came out of the water, it was seen that her stem had been broken off just under the torpedo tube, about nine feet down.

Her ram was bent over toward the port side, and six of her plates—three on each side—were damaged.

HUNDREDS ARE DYING.

Spanish Fever Killing Texas Cattle by Wholesale.

GUTHRIE, O. T., July 6.—Hundreds of Texas cattle which had been driven into the territory from Texas are dying of Spanish fever. Farmers are alarmed for the safety of their domestic stock and have appealed to the governor to stop the stockmen from bringing the diseased cattle into the territory.

An armed force has been organized to patrol the territorial line and shoot any cattle coming from the infected country.

FORMALLY PRESENTED.

President Montt Receives United States Minister Porter Cordially.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The Herald's Valparaiso correspondent [illegible] United States Minister Porter was formally presented on Tuesday to President Montt. He was met at the entrance to the Moneda by 200 officials of the government and warmly cheered.

In receiving Minister Porter, President Montt said that he regarded the national holiday of the United States as an auspicious time for the renewal of the friendship between Chili and the great republic of the north.

He asked the minister to inform President Cleveland and the people of the United States of the sincere desire of Chili and her citizens to regard them as friends. The first nation on the American continent to secure freedom from the oppressions of European rulers, was believed by Chili to be her truest friend.

He congratulated Chili upon being able to receive, and President Cleveland upon sending, so able a man as Mr. Porter as minister from the United States.

Mr. Porter's reply to the address of President Montt was well received by the Chilians. He said President Cleveland had instructed him to inform the Chilian people of his desire to draw closer the bonds of friendship. He hoped that former disagreements would be forgotten.

Patrick Egan then presented the letter recalling him to the United States. President Montt replied briefly, but without showing any friendship for the retiring minister.

When the new minister left the moneda the crowd in the street gave cheers for Minister Porter and President Cleveland.

CHINESE ROBBERS.

Two Fish-Laden Junks Are Attacked and Robbed by Pirates.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—The steamer Belgic arrived from Hong Kong and Yokohama yesterday, bringing the following advices:

A fish-laden junk, bound on a voyage from Ningpo to Chow Chow, recently, was attacked by a pirate junk. The crew made a desperate resistance, but was finally overpowered, losing two shot dead and five badly wounded with sword cuts.

None of the cargo was touched, but the pirates took away over $300, in silver and all the clothes of the passengers and crew.

About the middle of May officials of the Taiping custom house sent away a considerable quantity of money, collected as duty, to Canton. The money was intrusted to deputies, who embarked in a small boat and proceeded on their way escorted by three small river gunboats.

Some distance down the river they were attacked by several pirate boats, which rushed out of a small creek unexpectedly, and set upon the boat containing the treasure.

The soldiers on board the gunboats fought bravely, the struggle lasting several hours, but as there were nearly 60 pirates, both on boats and on the banks of the river, the soldiers were eventually worsted and put to flight, leaving many dead and wounded behind them, and the pirates succeeded in carrying off booty to the extent of about $30,000.

INCENDIARY'S WORK.

Lively Blaze in South Royalton Causes Some Damage.

SOUTH ROYALTON, VT., July 6.—A fire which was discovered here at 1 o'clock this morning caused a loss amounting to $4000. It was probably of incendiary origin.

The house and barn of Sarah Rowell and the barn of South Lamb, with their contents, were destroyed; the household goods of George Cotton were partly burned and the house and store of L. C. Dickerman were damaged. Sarah Rowell's loss is $2000, partly insured. The other losses by the fire are fully insured.

S. S. Houghton Dead.

MELROSE, Mass., July 6.—S. S. Houghton one of the members of the firm of Houghton & Dutton of Boston, died at his residence here this morning at [illegible] this morning, aged 63 years. His death was caused by paralysis, having had three shocks, the last one Monday night. Mr. Houghton was born in Oxford, N. H. At an early age he went to New York and engaged in the dry goods business there, and became one of the best known dry goods men in the country.

Assassin Was Overpowered.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 6.—An attempt was made yesterday to assassinate M. Pobiedonostzeff, a member of the council of the empire and of the supreme tribunal. An ex-seminarist, named Gilassintoff, tried to stab the minister with a dagger at the latter's residence at Zarskoe-Selo, but was overpowered and placed under arrest.

Lightning Strikes Buzzard's Bay.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 6.—Lightning struck the house of B. F. Bourne early this morning, setting it on fire. The blaze was not discovered until it had gotten under considerable headway, and the house was burned to the ground. Loss $6000.

RACING AT HENLEY.

Result of Second Rounds—Weather Fine and Water Good.

LONDON, July 6.—The boat racing was continued at Henley today. The weather was fine and the water in good condition. Results of second rounds follow:

Grand challenge cup—Leander Rowing club beat Dublin university by 2 1-4 lengths; London Rowing club defeated Thames Rowing club by 1 1-2 lengths.

Diamond sculls—W. M. Boyd of Trinity college, Dublin, beat Francis Nodin of the Societe d' Encouragement Sport Nautique, by half a length.

Ladies' challenge plate—Eton college crew beat the first Trinity crew by two lengths.

Stewards' cup—Magdalen college crew defeated Royal Chester crew.

Kay is Dead.

BOSTON, July 6.—It is declared in holy writ that "a living dog is better than a dead lion." President Cleveland's noble St. Bernard, Kay, is no better than a dead lion, unless the keeper at the gate of eternal dogland discriminates between the "King of the Forest" and the less vicious, but more intelligent canines which derive their general name from their ancient connection with an Alpine monastery. Kay is dead! Long live his successor!

Bad Wound in the Thigh.

MILFORD, Mass., July 6.—E. Carley of Milford, in the employ of W. A. Mathewson, a baker of Milford, was shot at Ashland yesterday. He received a bad wound in the thigh as the result of an altercation over a harness cutting affair, in which Carley claims he had no part. The indications are that it was an unprovoked affair, with probably liquor at the bottom of it, at least on the assailant's side. Officers are investigating the matter.

Not to Be Executed.

PARIS, TEX., July 6.—Secretary Smith of the interior department wired Colonel Faison, Indian inspector, yesterday, at Tuskahoma, to proceed to Wilburton at once and issue an order to the Choctaw authorities not to execute the six men sentenced to be shot next Friday. Colonel Faison went at once. The Jones faction are chagrined at the turn of affairs.

Blame the Police.

PARIS, July 6.—The municipal council held an excited meeting last night, at which resolutions were adopted to the effect that the prevailing disorders are due to the hostility of the police toward the citizens. The council throws the responsibility for the disturbances upon Prefect of Police Lozé and his hierarchal chief, Premier Dupuy.

Potter Exonerated.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The committee that has been investigating the charges against Rev. Dr. D. C. Potter of the Baptist Tabernacle, held its final meeting last evening and prepared its report. The report, it is said, exonerates Dr. Potter, and finds all the charges to be utterly without foundation.

Poor Way to Raise Money.

PORTLAND, July 6.—Edward T. Mallory was before United States Commissioner Fiske this forenoon charged with passing a $2 bill raised to a $5, and was held in $500 for further examination Saturday.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Nervous Prostration
And Dyspepsia in its worst form pulled me down until I could not eat nor sleep and felt if I did not soon get relief, I should surely die. As a drowning man catches at a straw, I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had used three bottles I had increased from 135 to 160 pounds, was able to work again and felt a thousand times better. My friends are surprised to see such a change. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine, and its praises are fully justified in my experience."

It is an old theory that new wood is entitled to three coats of paint, but many new houses have but two coats of Chilton Paint, and are then allowed to stand two or three years before they are painted again, and then only one coat. Can you not profit by this suggestion? In painting your house this year get estimates on one, two and three coats. If the house is in fair condition and there is not too much difference between the shade you are to put on and the one on the house, probably one coat will suffice. If not one, two coats will surely answer. What is the use then of putting on three? We have had painters tell us that they had painted houses with Chilton Paint where the house looked better after two coats than three—upon being asked why then they put on three, they answered that they were obliged to as the contract called for three. Word your contracts so you can stop when you have gone far enough. Put Chilton Paint over a dry surface only.

THE GOLDEN BEAN.

Not long ago it happened that I had two hours to wait for a train at Casa Grande station on the Southern Pacific railway. Stepping into a saloon near the track, I got into conversation with a shaggy looking native, who proved to be an old prospector somewhat the worse for wear. As he seemed communicative, and I was willing to listen to a yarn or two to kill time, I had the barkeeper place a black bottle and the requisite glasses on a card table near the stove, and with my new acquaintance as a vis-a-vis I listened to the following tale, which I have endeavored to write down as nearly in his own language as possible, merely omitting the numerous epigrams with which he interrupted his discourse:

"It was last fall that me and Bill Stump got acquainted up at Prescott. We'd both of us just quit work at the mines and had pretty near $100 apiece. We fooled around the saloons most of the evenin, takin a drink now and then and buckin a little at the faro game, and finally we made it up to be pards on a prospectin trip to find some new diggin's. Next day we bought four burros, two to ride and two to pack, loaded up with grub an things, and lit out.

"Next evenin we was camped at sundown about 20 miles west in a dark little piney canyon and was gettin supper. Bill was monkeyin round the campfire with the coffee and bacon, and I was sittin with my back against a pine tree and a sack of beans 'tween my knees, pickin some of 'em over to put on for breakfast. There was pretty plenty gravel and stones in the beans, an' I was cussin considerable, when I found somethin queer among 'em. It was a gold nugget, just the shape of a bean, only about four times as big. 'Bill,' says I, 'if here ain't a $5 nugget in these beans, I'll be blankety blanked!' Bill he comes up and grabs it and gets to studyin over it. 'Joe,' says he after a bit, 'Joe, I know just how that thar nugget got thar.' Poor Bill was always great on explainin things. 'Well, fire away,' says I. 'It's this way,' says Bill. 'I've been among the greasers considerable, and I know their ways. Them beans was raised by greasers, that's why they're so full of gravel and dirt. You see the greasers thrash out the beans right on the field where they growed, and winnow 'em by tossin 'em up in the air so the wind blows away the chaff. Then they shovel 'em into sacks right off the ground, takin up some gravel at the same time. Now that thar nugget proves that the ground where them beans was growed is good placer ground, and all we've got to do is to find out who raised 'em first and then find where his ranch is. When we find that bean patch, we'll find good pay dirt, sure, 'cos where nuggets like this are lyin round loose there's bound to be good diggin's.'

"Well, we was a good deal excited over it and lay awake most of the night talkin it over an makin plans. Next mornin we was packed up and started back for Prescott by daylight. Bill said we must not use the beans, but keep the sack just as it was so's the party that sold it would know it again. So we opened it up and took note of a queer mark on one side of it. It was [illegible] outline of a circle as big as my hand. We thought that would help us find the feller that sacked the beans, and sure enough it did.

"We hadn't bought the beans at a store, but from a freighter that was camped with his 4-horse team and two wagons in the corral where we got our burros, so when when we got to Prescott we went straight back to the corral. There we got our first setback. The freighter—his name was Pike—had left the day before for the Verde [illegible] mines to look for a load. It was 35 miles, and it's slow work travelin with donkeys, so we was the best part of two days gettin there, and found we was out o' luck again. Pike couldn't get any load there, so he had gone on down to Camp Verde, intendin to go over to Camp Apache, 200 miles further.

"Right there I wanted to give it up, but Bill wouldn't have it. 'Who cares for a few hundred miles, more or less,' says he, 'with all that gold piled up at the end of it. Why, next year we'll be ridin in our fine carriages in Frisco.' All the time I was with Bill I never could get the best of him in an argument, so I gave in. But if poor Bill could 'a' known that a tough tramp of 1,000 miles was in front of us, with grim death waitin for him at the other end, he wouldn't 'a' been so hot to go on.

"When we got down to Camp Verde, that pesky freighter was gone, of course, but we was gettin used to bein balked and didn't mind much. In pretty good spirits we started out on the long, lonely trip through the black pine forests of the Mogollon mountains. The next night we camped just under the 'rimrock,' and a mountain lion got away with our best burro. The poor donkey was hobbled and couldn't fight or protect himself, and we never knew it till next morning, when we found his body about half eaten up 200 yards from the campfire. This left us with only one saddle animal, and from that on we took turns riding. It was an awful tiresome road through those miles of timber, but we kept a-goin every day and only camped at night. Turkey was as thick as chickens in a barnyard, and now and then we jumped a bear. Deer was plenty, too, but we didn't stop to hunt. We had only one idea, and that was to catch up with that freighter if we had to follow him to Texas.

"A week later, near the head of Black river, we was jumped by Apaches and lost another burro. How was it? Well, it was like this: The sun was about two hours high when the trail went down into a deep, sandy canyon winding around between big bowlders of white granite that had rolled off the cliffs above. Some of 'em was more'n 15 feet high. I was afoot; Bill rode just ahead of me, and the two pack burros was peggin along in single file ahead of him. The canyon widened out by degrees into a broad, sandy wash, with mesquite trees and brush on the east side, while the trail hugged the west side close to the big bowlders. All at once—spat! spat! spat! come three bullets, flattenin themselves on the bowlders close to us. The three shots were fired at us from across the canyon, and we could see the smoke curlin up from a big bunch of brush over there. As I jumped forward to help Bill drive the donkeys under cover behind the rocks another volley came, and this time the saddle burro fell dead. Before they could fire again Bill had picked himself up, and we had our two pack animals safe behind the rocks.

"We found peep holes where we could look between the bowlders and get a good view across the canyon without being seen. It was a beautiful place, and we could have stood off 20 Injuns as easy as 3, for they could not get behind us, and our belts were full of cartridges. We knew we had the best of it, or anyway an even thing, for the bunch of brush where they were hid stood by itself, and they could not leave it without getting a shot from both of our winchesters. They would have to run about 30 feet further to the right or left to reach another bush, and behind them was a perpendicular cliff. Their cover was less than 100 yards from us, and their only chance to get away was to wait until dark; but we were also in the same fix.

"I tell you, stranger, we watched pretty close for those red devils to show themselves. We was mad about our dead donkey, and we was mad at bein stopped when we was in a hurry. Bill covered the right side of their bush with his gun, and I took the left. Our rifles was cocked and ready to speak, and just about that time no Injun had any business to get in front of them, for we was both good shots and didn't calculate to waste any cartridges. For near half an hour we watched, and then we saw somethin move on the sand at the right edge of the bush. It was the top of an Injun's head. He was lyin flat on the ground, behind cover, and shovin out his head to get a better view of our position. The next minute a head was shoved out the same way on the other side of the bush. 'Ready!' says Bill. 'Now!' and our rifles rang out together.

"The heads staid there, but we knew a rifle ball had crashed through each of them. The moment we shot the third red darted out on the north side and made a rush for a new cover only 10 yards away. He almost reached it—one more spring and he was safe—but Bill caught him on the fly. Crack! went his rifle, and Mr. Injun fell in a heap, never makin a kick.

"We waited awhile before we moved, to make sure they wasn't playin possum, but it was getting dark fast, so we slipped up careful from bush to bush. We had to make sure work of the killin, as it wouldn't do to have one of 'em get away and bring the whole tribe down on us. Well, they was dead enough to suit anybody, the last one killed being hardly more than a boy. He was the son of a chief, as we knew by his wearin white eagle feathers in his hair. He had an improved army rifle, and so did the other two.

"Weren't it a pity, stranger, that three of Uncle Sam's pets, out for a little fun, should 'a' got done up that way? They didn't have nothin we wanted, so we left 'em to the buzzards an coyotes and started down the canyon drivin our burros ahead. We traveled all night, for fear some prowlin Injun should find the dead bodies in the mornin and take our trail.

"A week later we got to Fort Apache, fagged out some and pretty near barefoot. We didn't say nothin about the killin, for fear of being arrested, but we rested up some on soldier whisky at the sutler's store and bought new shoes. We wasn't disappointed this time about our freighter. He was still on the move, just as we expected. He'd left for Wilcox on the railroad, three days before. Well, we had come 300 miles, and there was nothin else to do but to keep a-goin. It was only 120 miles further, and walkin was cheap.

"We tramped into Wilcox 10 days later, and there we found our man at last. We'd got so used to follerin him that I'll be blanked if we didn't feel sort a half disappointed when we had run him down. One of his wagons had broke, and he had to lay over to get it mended. Only for that the darned old road runner might 'a' been pikin along yet and we a-follering him, just two days behind him. He remembered sellin us the beans. He said he had bought the sack at a little store kept by a Mexican in Tucson just before he started for Prescott. We told him about findin the gold nugget and wanted him to join us huntin up the diggin's, as his teams might be useful startin up a new camp. He didn't care to go and said he didn't cotton much to gold diggin anyhow. I reckon he was too fond of travel to stay long in one place.

"Well, all we had to do was to light out for Tucson, another 120 miles, and we started along, feelin considerable cheered up. The donkeys was gettin poor, but we thought we were near the end of the trip, so we didn't worry. It took nearly two weeks to get to Tucson, but when we went to the little Mexican store the old man in charge remembered the bean sack very well and said he had [illegible] to Pike the freighter. He bought it and others from an old Mexican peddler who came over from Sonora and had gone to Phoenix. There was no help for it; we had to go there, too, fagged out as we were, and there we found our Mexican peddler, who told us he had bought the beans—several sacks of them—at a little roadside ranch down in Sonora, about 100 miles south of Tucson.

"Stranger, when we started back to Tucson the next mornin we wouldn't have sold our interest in that blasted bean ranch for $50,000 apiece. Yet, after all, poor Bill left his body there, and I got all broke up. Here's the way it happened: About three weeks afterward we was draggin along low and tired one afternoon when we come to the shanty where the peddler told us he got the beans. We knew it right off by the description. There was the little runnin stream, and on the other bank there was the very bean patch and the house at one end of it. We unpacked by the water, and Bill was for takin the gold pan and tryin for color right off, but I got him to wait till mornin, as we had to get supper before dark.

"I started gettin some sticks to build a fire, and Bill went to the packs for the coffeepot and fry pan, and just then three greasers on horseback rode by us and up to the door of the house, where they got off their horses. After a little palaver with an old hag that came to the door one of them came over to us and said 'Buenos noches' very polite. A greaser would be polite if he was goin to cut your throat the next minute. As he passed our [illegible] and looked at it pretty sharp, and I saw he was takin note of the bean sack. It was standin there with the queer mark in plain sight. [illegible] he pointed to the sack and asked where we got it and what was in it. I told him it was a sack of beans, and we bought it over the line in Arizona. Pretty soon he asked us to come up to the house and spend the evenin. We said we would after supper, and then he went off.

"Half an hour later, as we was squattin by the fire drinkin our coffee, all three of 'em come down and stood around. Swarthy faced, with mean lookin mustaches and murderous eyes, they looked equal to any deviltry, and I was just thinkin what a precious lookin set of rascals they was, when I quit thinkin altogether. I had to, 'cos I was stretched out on the ground unconscious. What I saw happened quicker'n I can tell it. The two near ones whipped out their 6-shooters and had us covered, and the other one grabbed the bean sack. Bill, always quicker than me, jumped up a-reachin behind him for his gun, but before he pulled it there was a report, and he fell forward on his face with a gurglin yell—a pistol ball in his throat. I made a jump to get up, but I felt a crushin blow on my head, and that's all I remember.

"When I come to myself, I was lyin on some blankets on the dirt floor of a doby shanty, with an old Mexican hag bendin over me. I beg her pardon for callin her a hag, for she saved my life, but when I woke up I [illegible] satan. She told me I had been crazy a week, and I reckon I must a had brain fever. I told the old woman all my story and all about the bullet, but she wouldn't talk about the [illegible] of my friend till three weeks after, when I was strong and well, and told her I was going back to Arizona. She up and told [illegible] mornin, [illegible] agree that me and Bill was two of the [illegible] livin. That very sack of beans we had been packin all over Arizona had nearly $5,000 worth of gold in it in dust and nuggets.

"The three greasers who attacked us were her nephews and [illegible] they looked so [illegible] did not say so. They had murdered a couple of miners [illegible] and robbed their camp of about 80 pounds of gold dust. Not wantin to [illegible] it till the affair blew over, they hid the dust in one of the sacks of beans. There were a dozen or more stacked [illegible] old woman's shed, and she had [illegible] them herself, with her grandson, a 15-year-old kid, to help her. They marked the sack, but did not tell her about the gold in it, and while they were off on some more deviltry the old woman sold all [illegible] peddler that happened to come by. When the robbers came back again, they missed the marked sack, but it was too late to get it, and they nearly beat the old woman to death.

"They'd forgot all about it by the time we came by, but they knew their [illegible] on the bank and saw it had not been opened, and the only wonder is that they didn't shoot us both down without askin any questions.

"My donkeys were feedin around the ranch yet, and I had my blankets. That was all they left me. I gave the old woman one donkey and saddled up the other and lit out for Tucson. But first I made a little wooden cross and cut Bill's name on it, and put it on his grave where the old woman had made [illegible] bury him close to the bean [illegible] he had hunted so long."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Hissing at Concerts.

Americans are the most tolerant of all people toward bad actors and singers, and they never hiss a performance. If they don't like it, they leave it, but hissing is occasionally heard now at concerts and miscellaneous entertainments. It is not directed against the singers, but against the [illegible] who with frantic uproar, tries to force every one of them to do his or her work two or three times over for his special benefit. As a rule the poorer the show the more emotional and persistent are the people who want everything repeated. In orchestral concerts it has become the rule to grant no encores, and the majority, which does not desire to be willing to forego them, reaches home at a reasonable hour.—New York Sun.

He Remembered the Pins.

Fritz had been ordered by his master to take four horses and a lurry—which is a sort of car much used by coal and [illegible] and others who have need of vehicles for the conveyance of very heavy articles—and fetch a steam boiler from a neighboring town. Just as he was about to start his master's wife called him and said: "Fritz, here's [illegible] I want you to bring me a packet of pins, and please don't forget it."

"No, ma'am," said Fritz, and off he started.

Some hours later Fritz came back, drove up to the house, unharnessed the horses, stepped into the house and delivered the small parcel of pins to the lady.

"I say, Fritz," said his master, who was standing at the window, "what have you done with the boiler?"

"Boiler, sir?" answered Fritz. "Donnerwetter, sir. I hope you won't be vexed, but I clean forgot it."—Harper's Young People.

Human Flesh Does Not Petrify.

Petrification is simply the substitution of inorganic for organic matter, atom by atom. This process of transformation is unthinkably slow. As a molecule of wood or bone decays a molecule of stone takes its place. This can only occur when the air, earth or water surrounding the organic substance in question holds in solution some mineral which is readily precipitated. In the case of either wood or bone, while decomposition is going on, there yet remains a framework or fiber, the interstices of which may gradually be filled by the mineral substance—with flesh, be it human or animal, no such framework exists. The very rapid decay of flesh also makes it impossible for the very slow process of petrifaction to have any effect in the way of making a transformation.

The stories of petrified bodies being found in graveyards are usually "faked up" by some imaginative reporter who wishes to lengthen his "string." It is true, however, that the bodies of human beings have been frequently found incrusted with a [illegible] substance so as to resemble real petrifactions in every particular.—St. Louis Republic.

A HISTORIC MARKET.

OLD CLOTHES IN LONDON ALL DRIFT TO A FAMOUS PLACE.

Old Clothes Mart In Houndsditch Attracts Hundreds of Thousands of People Who Want to Wear Expensive Apparel, but Can't Pay Very Much For It.

Down in the unsavory and ill favored quarter of Houndsditch, behind the area of the city where countless gold is made and turned over, there is an inclosed space, part of the so called Phil's buildings, which goes by the descriptive name of the Old Clothes Mart. Admission to it is obtained on payment of a penny as entrance fee, collected by a man standing at the barrier that divides the street from the emporium beyond. The general aspect is far from inviting, and a first cursory glance seems to reveal only a collection of rags and decrepitude. The floor is nothing more than the pavement. The roof is the sky, and in rain or sunshine the heaps of clothes are exposed without protection to the changes of the capricious London climate. On slushy days they present a lamentable appearance.

There are no benches or stalls, as in other markets, only lines of wooden railing running along the inclosure marked out in lengths and apportioned to the different venders. The goods are packed in sacks or bundles deposited on the floor, and at the open mouth or top of each is displayed a sample of its contents, which is also temptingly laid across the rail, whence depend the legs of trousers, the sleeves of dresses, the frills of petticoats, the soles of boots or the handles of sticks and umbrellas. The goods vary considerably in quality and aspect. Some are moldy, tattered or colorless; others are in fairly good condition, clean and serviceable.

Old Clothes Mart is victualed by hawkers who haunt certain suburban districts to purchase the cast off garments of the more modest inhabitants—those who do not disdain to discuss the conditions of the bargain in person at their front doors. The dealings are not carried on in cash. The hawkers, with astute knowledge of human nature, offer in exchange crockery, plaster figures or even flowers in pots, experience having successfully proved that a [illegible], a pair of vases or a water bottle [illegible] sixpence is infinitely more tempting than a shilling, and the [illegible] of the transaction [illegible] with [illegible] profit of 50 per cent.

When his original stock in trade is replaced by wearing apparel, the hawker adjourns to the neighborhood of the mart, where he finds a group of men calling themselves commission buyers [illegible] each other for the whole lot. The successful competitor forthwith distributes his bargains among the holders of the railed off compartments inside, who endeavor to retail them to the customers who have paid the entrance fee. The best of these customers are always Irish buyers. They carry off [illegible] quantities for Belfast, Dublin, Cork and other localities beyond the channel. Taking into consideration the [illegible] appearance of the [illegible], it is startling to learn on good authority that occasionally £50 and even £40 have been paid down in cash for one lot. Credit is never given, and payment precedes the delivery of the goods.

Hats, which, as a rule, are the most deplorable objects, fetch but little, yet are eagerly bought whatever their state. They are sent to Paris for the sake of the silk on them and there manufactured into new ones. Coats vary more in price than any other article; some go for a penny, some for sixpence and upward to £5. There was a legend on the mart that one coat was actually sold for a tenner.

Clothes that have been worn by the highest and richest in the land have found their downward way to Houndsditch, not excepting those once belonging to the Prince of Wales, not that the noble owners are a party to the desecration, but because the valets whose perquisites they become know of this way of realizing money for them. The bargains are advantageous to all parties. Some of the dealers, disreputable and poverty stricken looking railing holders at the mart, the men who haggle desperately over a sixpence, are said to be capitalists. One of them is the proprietor of several houses in a good quarter of London. Others have a large balance at the bank, and others still own considerable property in stocks and shares. They turn over thousands of pounds in the course of a year, which is not surprising, as the mart is opened every day and visited by 600 or 700 people on week days and by 4,000 or 5,000 on Sundays. A notable particularity is that while on week days the stalls are free and a charge is made for the admittance of the public on Sundays the stallholders pay a small fee and the customers enter gratuitously.

The mart is open from 11 to 6. It is a favorite lounge for the dwellers in the district, while those on business intent flock to it from great distances.

The old clothes mart of Houndsditch is not comprised in the list of the 100 markets mentioned in the report of the committee of public control, and it may therefore continue to exist with impunity. It has been in working order for about 60 years and is an important one in its line. Its trade extends to Spain and the Cape, whither go the renovated costumes and repaired goods. France and Scotland receive their consignments in their unregenerate state and treat them according to their own requirements.—London Cor. New York Sun.

Curious People In Russia.

"The Christs" are a curious sect in Russia. They worship each other! The chief ceremonies are a crazy species of dancing, yelling as loudly as possible and pounding stones with sticks.

The "Skoptsys" believe in self mutilation, but will not submit to amputation even though it would save life. Like the "Christs," they dance and yell for hours without intermission.—Philadelphia Press.

Not Entirely Definite.

James McCrabb, a resident of Fairbank, left a will when he died which was remarkably brief, but clear enough to avoid litigation. One bequest of $100 was left to "James Kelly of somewhere near New York." The master in ordinary has ordered to advertise and discover if possible the man for whom the money is intended.—Toronto Mail.

Old Friends at a Funeral.

"It's quite a mournful sight, and yet one that brings with it a crumb of comfort," said A. P. Haskell, "to see old friends gather about the corpse of one of their number. A few days since I attended the funeral of a prominent and aged citizen of Denver, a man who knew the thriving city as a mere village, and was with a number of others the founder of its present greatness. It was a beautiful morning of sunshine and pleasant breezes, and I'm sure the little old chapel never looked more blessed and peaceful than on the morning of my old friend's funeral. Some time before the long line of carriages wound over the hillside to the church, a crowd of his friends gathered about the church door. They were every one long past the middle of life, and hair that was a medium between silver and lamb's fleece predominated.

"The number of times that the members of the throng congratulated each other upon each other's youthful looks, and the often reiterated statement that 'You look younger than you did 10 years ago' became really humorous, though at a funeral. They speculated on the number of years each had to live and joined hands over the statement that 'We will soon go together, old boy,' and 'I think I'm next.' In all that sunlight and joyful atmosphere it really seemed good to know that the worn and emaciated frame, the great load of long standing and accumulated sorrow, might be placed in a beautiful receptacle and given to earth again while the soul betook itself to another condition, free perhaps to a measure from much of life's worry and no less of sunshine and friendship than was here on earth or ever will be."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The denuding of the mountains of France of their covering of trees has caused destructive torrents to sweep over the neighboring plains, laying waste rich agricultural lands and producing immense losses.

INTERNATIONAL YACHTING.

The [illegible] eyes of two worlds are upon the preparations for the international yachting events which are to take [illegible] and bid for the sailing supremacy and the possession of English and American cups.

[illegible] the yachting contests this season is [illegible], and since new [illegible] the [illegible] sailing fleet on both sides of the Atlantic. The new [illegible] give promise of the highest rate of speed ever attained by sailing craft. The four American cup-defenders have [illegible] a million dollars, although the [illegible] know, that with the progress [illegible] made in yacht-building, all of [illegible] that are likely to be out-built [illegible] year.

George A. Stewart, in The North American Review for July says: "The [illegible] boats have already had half a [illegible], and it is satisfactory to note that the 'Valkyrie' seems to be at or near the head of the fleet in speed." So far, the "Vigilant" and "Colonia," the two [illegible] boats, have justified the prediction of their designer that they would be about equal in speed, as each has won a [illegible] of races, and they usually have finished within a minute or two of each other.

[illegible] of the American cup-defenders have been tried under canvas. The "[illegible]" has been sailed, and with her [illegible] cannot fail to give a good account of herself in foreign waters. Our cup-defenders were all started so late that they will hardly be in form by the first of August.

[illegible] to be proven from the big [illegible] of 1893 are incalculable in their number and magnitude. In the case of the two Herreshoff cup defenders we have the experiment of sail plans which are enormous compared with that of the "Volunteer." The two Boston boats will have the possibilities of the fin-keel type—the form which gives the maximum of sail-carrying power to the minimum of displacement. The Paine boat will work out the problem in conjunction with big sail plan and a center-board, with moderate draught of fin, while the Stewart-Binney craft clings more closely to the original idea of the fin, namely, deep draught of fin-plate and moderately small sail-plan.

Besides the cruising races there will be, doubtless, other races off Newport, the cups for such races having been already offered by Mr. John Jacob Astor."

THE EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

President Cleveland has not the utmost faith in his democratic congress; and the recent attempts to discover how the congressmen stand upon the silver question have not proven very satisfactory to the country. It is to be an extraordinary session of congress; and the people may witness some extraordinary log-rolling when that August body assembles.

This is the twelfth extraordinary session of congress called in the history of the government. In the first part of this century special sessions were frequent because of threatening conditions between the United States and foreign powers. Jefferson and Madison each called congress together twice in extraordinary session; but the most important special session ever called in the history of the government was when Lincoln convened congress on July 4, 1861, to consider measures for putting down the rebellion in the southern states.

In view of the condition of the country it does seem as if congress ought to render speedy relief, but the widely differing opinions of many western and southern members from members in the east, with the strength shown by free-silver men in congress in the past, indicates a hard struggle. It is an issue in which the Sherman bill was presented as a compromise measure, and the result of that proves there should be no further compromise, but that the representatives of the people should stand united for a safe and sound currency—a position upon which the national honor depends.

THE CITIZEN WHO NEGLECTS TO VOTE.

It is an undisguised fact that the good citizen who ignores politics except on special occasions shares the responsibility for weak and corrupt government with the thugs and political buzzards whose energy and ambition inspire them to turn out in force from purely selfish motives. The Hon. James Bryce, writing of the indifferent citizen, in The Forum for July, says: "Indifference to public affairs shows itself not merely in a neglect to study them and fit one's self to give a judicious vote, but in apathy which does not give a vote when the time arrives. It is a serious evil already in some countries, serious in London, very serious in Italy, serious enough in the United States, not indeed at presidential, but at city and other local elections, for some reformer to have proposed to punish with a fine the citizen who neglects to vote, as in some old Greek city the law proclaimed penalties against the citizen who in a sedition stood aloof, taking neither one side or the other. For, unhappily, it is the respectable, well meaning, easy-going citizen, as well as the merely ignorant citizen, who is apt to be listless. Those who have had their private ends to serve, their axes to grind and logs to roll, are not indolent. Private interest spurs them on; and if the so-called "good citizen," who has no desire or aim except that good government which benefits him no more than every one else, does not bestir himself, the public funds may become the plunder, and the public interests the sports of unscrupulous adventurers."

UNION DESTROYING SENTIMENTS.

The residents of the East have only a faint idea of what the demonetization of silver means in the silver-producing states. When we read of mass meetings in favor of silver we do not realize that the people are beside themselves in their apprehension of the disaster which monetary reform means to them. In the town of Creede, Colorado, among a set of resolutions passed by a mass meeting of the citizens was the following:

> We call upon our representatives to demand of the congress of the United States the admission of an amendment to the constitution of this union which shall permit the peaceful loosening of the bond of confederation insomuch as shall permit the founding of the department of the east and the department of the west to legislate, each in its separate congress, in matters of finance and trade. Each department to have its separate House of Representatives, its president, vested with full appointing power, the two departments to be co-operative with a [illegible] as now constituted, and a president of the United States who shall be commander of the army and chief executive of the board of presidents.

In their frenzy, the citizens did not realize that this is an attempt to cut the union in two which must result in stronger feelings of alienation. "The loosened bond" would be a slow but sure way to the secession of the west from the east. This indicates the western feeling, and there must be wise management to harmonize the differences of these two great sections when congress comes together next month.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The treasury is improving—gold is drifting this way and the gold reserve has risen to [illegible] millions.

Boston has entertained the Russian naval officers and sent them off well impressed with New England's metropolis.

Twenty-three of South Carolina's counties have not complied with the provisions of the Tillman liquor law. The Charleston liquor dealers got rid of their stock by the ruinous process of a forced sale, and to read of the low prices at which twenty-year apple jack, prime old cognac and whiskey mellowed by age went off is enough to cause any old toper to wipe his mouth and envy the fortunate purchasers. They are determined to make Charleston the driest town on earth.

Prince George, Duke of York, married Victoria Mary Augusta Louise Olga Pauline Claudine Agnes Alexander, daughter of the Duke of Teck, Thursday. The prince is congratulated "upon having married a lady who has all the arts of a housewife at her command, and who, best of all, has always had the good sense to be proud of her practical education, experience and accomplishments." There are young women who are not princesses and who will marry America's independent sovereigns, who could follow this royal example without humiliating themselves.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

"If."

If it had been known a year ago that "tariff reform" involved heavily increased taxes on beer and whisky, some of the most ardent supporters of Mr. Cleveland's economic doctrine might have taken to the woods election day.—[Boston Journal.

Speaking of Confidence.

There is just as much confidence now as there was before Cleveland was elected, but it is of a different kind among business men. It is confidence now that it was a big mistake to elect the democratic candidate last fall.—[The Buffalo Commercial.

Broad-minded Men.

The banking officials of New York city seem to be pretty broad-minded men, and not afraid of a responsibility. They have done much more than the administration at Washington to promote confidence.—[Chicago Inter Ocean.

Gubernatorial Triplets.

Altgeld's anarchism, Pennoyer's impudence and Tillman's official demijohn make freakish gubernatorial triplets.—[New York Press.

One Cause.

If the provision of the Sherman act requiring our currency to be kept equal to gold had been obeyed by keeping the gold reserve intact, the distrust of our currency would never have reached the acute stage of the past month.—[Philadelphia Press.

The Cause of Distrust.

The currency question is of primary importance, but the business depression in the country is as much due to the threat of revolutionizing the tariff policy of the country as to the disturbed condition of the currency.—[Louisville Commercial.

Layin' Low!

What has become of the great tariff bill of the Reform club of New York, which [illegible] to increase imports about $150,000,000, taking that amount out of the pockets of American workmen? The Reform club, [illegible] Mr. Cleveland and Brer Fox, are "layin' low" these days.—[Albany Express.

A Good Thing to Cultivate.

The people of a number of states in this Union [illegible] largely to the crippled old soldiers on the pension rolls that they have now any lot or part in the flag of the stars and stripes and in the commemorations and inspirations of the Fourth of July. They should think of this occasionally, and cultivate a spirit of gratitude toward those who saved them from themselves and saved their country for them back there in the sixties.—[Hartford Courant.

Like "Zekle!"

What's the matter with "McKinley prices?" The democratic organs have entirely quit telling us how we are being bled to death by protection. It is the Sherman law that is bleeding us now. Like Lowell's "Zekle," the democrats stand first on one foot and then on the other, and can't tell which way they feel the worse.—[Springfield Union.

NEW MAGAZINES.

Following is the list of contents of the FORUM for July: "The Fourth of July," "The Grand Army as a Pension Agency," "Complete History of the Farnham Post Revolt," "What Are a Christian Minister's Functions?" "The Teaching of Civic Duty," "How the Fourth of July Should be Celebrated," "The World's Fair Balance Sheet," "Chicago's Sanitary Condition," "An Actor's Memory of Edwin Booth," "The Army as a Military Training School," "Why Theatrical Managers Reject Plays," "American Art Supreme in Colored Glass," and "The Russian Extradition Treaty: a Reply to Protests." Forum Publishing Company, Union Square, New York.

WORTHINGTON'S MAGAZINE for July maintains its reputation for brightness and beauty. "The Lighthouse System of the United States," "Bess's Hand's Decision," and "Some Phases of Life in the Tyrol," are profusely illustrated. The departments, of which there are a dozen, are filled with entertaining and instructive reading for old and young. A. D. Worthington & Co., publishers, Hartford, Conn.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS for July with a hundred timely illustrations and portraits, and 128 pages of matter upon world-topics of immediate interest, has among its forty-nine leading papers "Two Giants of the Electric Age: Edison and Thomson," "Electricity at the World's Fair" and "An Englishman's View of the Fair." In "The Progress of the World" department forty-eight topics are discussed. Published in New York, 13 Astor Place.

Big Dinners.

Every day in this city thousands of persons eat too much at dinner, and, in consequence, suffer from sour stomach, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc. If these will take just one of Carter's Little Liver Pills immediately after eating, they will be surprised by the entire absence of those unpleasant feelings which daily distress them, and may continue in their improper course of eating big dinners without fear. Only one little pill, remember.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth, send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

Smart weed and Belladonna, combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters, make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions, should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

Castoria.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Set Him Right.

Geo. Augustus Sala, the well known English writer, on his last Australian trip, wrote as follows to The London Daily Telegraph: "I especially have a pleasant remembrance of the ship's doctor—a very experienced maritime medico indeed, who tended me most kindly during a terrible spell of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, provoked by the sea fog which had swooped down on us just after we left San Francisco. But the doctor's prescriptions and the increasing warmth of the temperature as we neared the Tropics, and, in particular, a couple of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS clapped on—one on the chest and another between the shoulder blades—soon set me right."

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

A Retired Business Woman

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 589 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

Ladies' Waists.

There are [illegible] Ladies' Shirt Waists that are remarkable for one thing. It is this:

Our retail prices for these two lots are less than the makers' prices for hundred dozen lots at the beginning of the season.

Lot 1—Ladies' White Lawn Waists—trimmed with colored edges—[illegible] beauties—$1.25 each. Exactly the same Waist we have sold all season for $2.50.

Lot 2—15 dozen White Lawn Waists, some plain, but mostly with colored edges, $1.50 each, same as have been sold all season for $2.00. Sizes 32 to 44. Everybody can get fitted from this lot.

Summer Shirts.

Unlaundered Shirts with colored bosoms—the nattiest Summer Shirt of the season. They launder beautifully. The bosoms are neat patterns and stylish colorings. Our price 49c each; laundered, they are sold everywhere for $1.

Ladies' Summer Underwear.

One case Ladies' Vests, low neck and sleeveless, pure Egyptian cotton, 14c each, 3 for 40c.

Compare this vest with what you have been buying for 25c, and you'll say they are the same. And they are, too. We sold the same quality earlier in the season for 25c.

Ladies' Combination Suits, short sleeves and knee lengths—Lisle finish—69c a suit. The regular value of these suits is $1.00.

Hosiery.

Three great Hosiery items.

Men, women and infants represented in this offering.

MEN'S—75 boxes men's "World's Fair" Seamless Half Hose—six pairs in a box, 69c a box. More than 180 boxes sold last Saturday.

WOMEN'S — Those Women's Fast Black Hose for 20c a pair, 3 for 50c, are still in the market. They are great value—full length, fine gauge, high spliced heel, double soles. Try them.

INFANTS'—All sizes in Infants' Fine Imported Fast Black Ribbed Hose, 12½c a pair. Would actually be good value for 25c.

THE PROSE OF POETRY.

His poem had been writ
And brought him gold.
Filled full of lofty thought,
Of noble purpose and
Of brilliant wit,
Of sentiment and soul;
Of music, unstrained.
It turned the mystic key
That fits the lock of wealth.
It was a picture
Wrought in words;
A star plucked from
The sky of mind;
A white rose from
The garden of the heart.
And yet it was not these
To him—
Between its splendid lines
He found a suit of clothes,
Its periods rounded out to him
A plate of soup,
A roast of beef,
A piece of pie.
Its rhythmic flowing feet
Were shoes for him;
Its soul
Went to his stomach,
And its sentiment
Gave him a bed on which to sleep
And dream the poet's dream;
Its measure and its melody,
Its waking and its wretchedness.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings in Leading Securities in Boston and New York.

BOSTON, July 6.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 7 [illegible] per cent and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

The famous chapter on "snakes in Ireland" could be readily revised and applied to the present stock market. There is almost literally no stock market. Outsiders have as yet shown no disposition to buy, in face of the existing financial [illegible] and the uncertainty as to the action of the [illegible]. The result is that the traders will have it all to themselves and [illegible] up and down according as the demand for money [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] and also [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] is closed on account of the royal wedding, so that the market figures neither [illegible] ing our depressing factor, and the [illegible] Paris have put a [illegible] on [illegible] on the bourse there.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Duke of York and Princess Victoria Mary.

THREE PROCESSIONS OF ROYALTY.

Great Crowds Watch and Cheer the Royal Crowned Heads.

LONDON, July 6.—The marriage of the Duke of York (Prince George of Wales) and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, an event to which all England had been looking forward with deep interest, took place at 12:30 o'clock today in the Chapel Royal, St. James' palace.

The wedding was a brilliant function, and was attended by a large gathering of the members of the British royal family, continental sovereigns or their representatives, and many members of the highest nobility.

The weather was beautiful, and if there is any truth in the old proverb, "Happy is the bride whom the sun shines on," the Duchess of York will be exceedingly happy, for a more resplendent day has seldom been seen in London.

The occasion was made one of national rejoicing and a partial British holiday. Great crowds of people gathered along the line of the route from Buckingham palace, up Constitution hill, through Piccadilly, St. James street and Marlboro gate in the garden entrance to St. James' palace, which is situated on the north side of the mall.

The decorations along the line of the procession were profuse and beautiful. The roadway was kept open by the household troops in their glittering uniforms, detachments drawn from the military depots, the metropolitan volunteers and militia, Middlesex yeomanry and the police.

The scene was full of life and movement, and the ceremony

Enlivened in Pomp and Splendor

the [illegible] of state ceremonial in connection with the British court. The royal party party left Buckingham palace in four processions. The first conveyed the members of the household and distinguished guests; the next included the Duke of York and his supporters, the Prince of Wales and Duke of Edinburgh; the bride came in the third procession, accompanied by her father, the Duke of Teck; the last procession was that of the queen, who, accompanied by the Duchess of Teck, her youngest sons and the Grand Duke of Hesse, drove in state to the ceremonial.

Each procession was accompanied by a life guard escort, and in addition to this the queen had an escort of Indian native and Australian horse.

Her majesty rode in the handsome glass coach used at the opening of parliament and on other special occasions. The body of the carriage, which is of Irish manufacture, having been built in Dublin is painted a dark red color, and its richly gilt panels are adorned with the royal arms. The roof is surmounted by a crown and bordered with a wreath of gilt roses, thistles and shamrocks.

The cheering as the royal carriage drove forward was immense. The members of the royal family and guests, on alighting at St. James' Palace, walked to the state apartments and subsequently down the grand staircase and under the Color court [illegible] to the [illegible] reserved for them in the chapel.

Her majesty alighted in the ambassadors' court under a specially erected canopy over the glass doors of the passage leading to the chapel.

The chapel walked to the haut pas at the north end of the edifice which was beautifully adorned with palms and flowers from the royal conservatory and carpeted with crimson. Upon the same platform seats were provided for the Prince and Princess of Wales, the bride and the bridegroom, and the other members of the royal family and royal guests from abroad.

The members of the diplomatic body, including the members of the United States embassy, and the other invited guests, occupied special seats in the body of the chapel and in the royal and east galleries.

Drawing room dresses were worn by the ladies, the gentlemen appearing in full levee dress.

The Marriage Ceremony Opened

with the procession of the clergy into the chapel. This consisted of the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of London, the dean of the Chapel Royal, the sub-dean, the bishop of Rochester, Hon. and Rev. [illegible] Car-Glyn, vicar of Kensington; Canon Harvey, domestic chaplain to the Prince of Wales, and Canon Dalton, honorable chaplain to the Duke of York.

Handel's march from the "Occasional Overture" was played by the organist as the procession came forward.

While the archbishop and clergy were taking their places the music of the march in "Scipio" came from the organ; and immediately the front of the second procession, including the royal family and royal guests came in sight; and the members of it were conducted to their seats as they entered.

As the Queen's procession, which included the Duchess of Teck and Grand Duke of Hesse, walked up the aisle Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Imperial March" was played.

A march in G, composed by Smart, was played during the progress of the bridegroom's procession to the communion, and as the bride and her supporters passed up the aisle to the altar the organist played the march from "Lohengrin." The bride wore the veil which was worn by her mother on the occasion of her own marriage. Her wedding gown was of silver brocade in harmony with the bridesmaid's satin of white satin and silver lace. The bridesmaid's gowns were made with low bodices and neither hats, wreathes nor veils were worn, only a simple rose in the hair.

The bridesmaids were the Princess Victoria and Maud of Wales, Princess Victoria Alexandra and Beatrice of Edinburgh, Princess Margaret and Victoria Patricia of Connaught Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and Princess Eugenie of Battenburg.

The Archbishop of Canterbury assisted by the other clergy performed the ceremony, the bride being Given Away by Her Father.

The magnificent gilt sacramental plate, the central alms dish of which is said to have been manufactured in the reign of Charles I. and is valued at $50,000 was displayed upon the altar, which was decked with the choicest flowers.

The service began with the marriage choral, "Father of Life," specially composed by Dr. Creser for the occasion and sung by "the gentlemen and children of the chapel royal," as the members of the choir are styled.

In the middle of the service Sir Joseph Barnaby's "O Perfect Love," a choral sung at the marriage of the Duke and Duchess of Fife in Buckingham palace was given. The service concluded with the hymn, "Now Thank We All Our God."

Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played as the royal party left the chapel, the united processions of the bride and bridegroom leading to the throne room, where the registry of the marriage was attested by her majesty and the other members of the royal family and royal guests.

The dejeuner was served at Buckingham palace, the queen proposing the toast of the "Bride and Bridegroom," and the lord steward the toast of "The Queen."

After receiving congratulations the Duke and Duchess of York left Buckingham palace, driving through the Mall to the city, and thence proceeded by the Great Eastern railway from Liverpool street to Sandringham. The lord mayor and sheriffs met the newly wedded pair at St. Paul's cathedral, and their progress through the lavishly decorated and crowded street was a triumphal one.

To Enumerate the Bridal Gifts

and the names of the donors would require several columns of newspaper space. Presents were received from all parts of the British dominions.

The Duke of York's present to his bride consisted of an open-petalled rose in pearls and diamonds, and a five-row pearl necklace. The pearls are not exceptionally large, but they are perfectly pure in color and splendidly matched.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck gave to their daughter, a suite of jewels comprising tiara, necklet and brooch of turquoises and diamonds.

Much has been said regarding the opposition of the Princess of Wales to the marriage, it being stated that she did not approve of her son marrying the girl who had been engaged to his brother, even though that brother was dead.

The present given by the Princess of Wales should put to rest these rumors, for it is doubtful if a more valuable gift was ever given by any one on a similar occasion. It consisted mostly of jewelry and precious stones, the whole being valued at £250,000 ($1,250,000.)

RAINMAKERS RECEIVE CREDIT.

High Winds and Heavy Rains Do Damage to Crops and Buildings.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 6.—Heavy rains have fallen in portions of Minnesota and South Dakota. At Lake Benton, Minn., high wind did considerable damage to growing crops. At Highmore, S. D., several houses were unroofed and a number of stock barns totally demolished. A Mrs. Whipple was probably fatally injured.

At Blunt a two-story storage building was blown down and much minor damage caused. At Aberdeen, S. D., an inch of rain fell in an hour, for which the rainmakers are receiving the credit.

Piles of Lumber Destroyed.

STARK, N. H. July 6.—Fire was discovered at 8 o'clock this morning in the Stark mill, owned by F. H. Wright and leased to the Libbison lumber company, and before anything could be done it was burned to the ground. There were many thousands of feet of lumber in piles about the building, but the fire was confined to the mill, and no lumber was burned. The loss is fully $25,000; insured.

Armenians Pardoned.

LONDON, July 6.—The Daily News says it understands that, in response to the demands of Lord Rosebery, British minister of foreign affairs, the Sultan of Turkey has ordered the liberation of all persons convicted at Angora of sedition. Telegrams from Constantinople, however, only mention the pardoning of two of the prisoners.

Vice President Will Consult.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A special to The Times from Chicago says that Vice President Stevenson, who has been there for several days, will leave for Buzzard's Bay tonight to consult with the president over questions which may come up during the special session of congress.

Monocacy Little Injured.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Latest advices from Hankow report the U.S.S. Monocacy, which went ashore on Sunday island, not badly injured. The vessel lost three anchors before she got off. She is to be relieved on the Upper Yangtse by the Marian.

Cleveland at Gray Gables.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 6.—President Cleveland arrived at Gray Gables just before 11 o'clock last night, after five days of cruising and fishing between here and New York. He is in excellent health.

Walker for Governor.

CONCORD, N. H., July 6.—A move has been started here to present the name of J. B. Walker of Concord to the next Republican state convention as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. Maj. Walker is a gentleman of decided literary and historical acquirements, and is an able and polished speaker, a Yale graduate and a state senator.

Overrun With Toads.

COTTAGE CITY, Mass., July 6.—There is a great plethoric of toads on the island of Cuttyhunk, and the outermost land in the Elizabeth group. No one seems to be able to explain why the toads are so plentiful. The natives have begun to kill their unwelcome visitors, and the tally is now just under 2000.

Murdered by Political Enemy.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A special from the City of Mexico to the Times says: A dispatch was received here today (Wednesday), stating that Colonel Encarnacion Sibaja Jefe, Politico of Macurpana, had been shot and killed. It is supposed that the deed was committed by a political enemy.

Searching For Baylies.

COTTAGE CITY, Mass., July 6.—Parties were organized in Edgartown this morning to search for George J. Baylies, who disappeared from his residence in that town 10 days ago. It is thought that Mr. Baylies has committed suicide near the Beetle House in that section of the island.

Found Dead in the Woods.

LYNN, Mass., July 6.—A dead body was found in Lynn woods this morning and has been identified as F. O. Taylor, who left the Lynn almshouse April 18. The body was found under a rudely constructed hut in a crevice in the rocks and had evidently been there for weeks.

The Fitchburg Prize.

FITCHBURG, Mass., July 6.—Judge Gallagher of the police court began this morning to fine every "drunk" arrested $5, thus enforcing the new law, to the terror of the bibulous.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

There are now in the state of Pennsylvania something like 150 electric light plants.

High potential circuits or wires are terms including all wires arranged with the view of carrying currents of more than 300 volts difference of potential between two parts of the system.

A Memphis man has patented an "electrical vegetation exterminator," which is designed to kill the rank vegetation which grows along railroad beds and highways in tropical countries.

INHUMAN POLICE.

Break Into Paris Hospitals and Assault Surgeons.

A NOTED PHYSICIAN IS BEATEN.

Bitter Feeling Engendered Against the Police.

PARIS, July 6.—The action of the police in making the arrests at the Charity hospital yesterday, which brought forth a letter of protest from Professor Germain See, has caused the most intense anti-police agitation in professional and other circles. The first dispatches stating that the convalescent patients had hissed the police from the windows of the hospital and had been arrested for so doing were incorrect.

It transpires that Police Commissary Dhers, who was in charge of a body of gendarmes that had been struggling with the rioters in the vicinity of the hospital, heard somebody in the hospital hissing the police. He ordered the arrest of six house surgeons, but when his subordinates attempted to carry out the order the surgeons shut and locked the hospital doors.

They refused to open them when ordered to do so by the police and the latter, determined to make arrests and very angry because of the resistance of them, burst the doors in and who were standing in the vestibule. Two of the surgeons were placed in custody and taken to the prefecture, where M. Lone, the prefect of police, ordered that they be at once released.

This further angered the police, and shortly afterward several officers returned to the hospital and seized Professor Villejean, a noted physician and chemical analyst, and struck him violently. Several surgeons witnessing this entirely uncalled for assault, attempted to defend the professor. The police turned on them and handled them very roughly, inflicting serious injuries on three or four of them.

The hospital was in an uproar at this brutal manifestation of police spite, and the hospital staff determined to drive the police out of the building. Some of the surgeons produced revolvers, and at their muzzles

Compelled the Police to Withdraw.

This morning a number of high officials, deeply indignant at the police, intervened in the matter and demanded of the government that the hospital be protected against further intrusion by police endeavoring to repress personal grievances.

Quietness prevails throughout the city today, but there has been no diminution of the extremely bitter feeling entertained against the police. The authorities, civil and military, are on the qui vive, and the districts of the city in which further trouble may occur are closely patrolled.

SYSTEMATIC ROBBERY.

Conductors and Engineers Combine to Defraud a Railroad.

CINCINNATI, July 6.—Systematic plans for robbing the Cincinnati Southern railroad came to light yesterday. "Eighteen conductors and 18 engineers are involved. They would issue fraudulent time checks, which the bookkeeper, who was in on the deal, would accept and O. K., thus allowing the money to be drawn for services never rendered.

The time-keeper wanted more than his share of the money, and a misunderstanding arose, which led to the discovery of the scheme. It is said that the company has lost at least $60,000 by the job.

WRINKLING BROWS.

The best shot on earth is said to be Lieutenant Particle of Toledo. He has scored 80 bullseyes in succession.

Edwin Dun, the new United States minister to Japan, is a handsome man, tall, well proportioned and weighing 260 pounds.

Charles Revere Curtis, who is still hale and hearty at 90, lives at Rockland, N. Y., and is a great grandson of the immortal Paul Revere of the famous ride.

General Harrison has got his old pew again in the First Presbyterian church, Indianapolis. He gave $125 and a premium of $85 for it at the annual renting.

Representative Bailey of Texas will no longer be the "youngest man in congress." That distinction will be vested hereafter in Mr. Thomas Settle of North Carolina who is 28.

Thomas Condon, M. P., who sued a newspaper in Cork for £1,000 damages for intimating that he made a hiccupy speech when he was really too full for utterance, got an award of £5.

When Mr. Gladstone is about to make a great speech in the house of commons, somebody tidies him up, straightens his neckcloth, brushes his coat and puts a flower in his buttonhole.

D. Culpepper, cashier of the Citizens' bank of Thomasville, Ga., claims to be able to reproduce a signature at a single glance. He says the "knack" depends largely upon the handling of the pen like the original writer.

Earl Spencer, the new first lord of the British admiralty, is a great lover of books. At his family residence, Althorp park, are 14 rooms filled with choice volumes, the contents of one alone being valued at $80,000.

M. de Giers, the great Russian diplomatist and foreign minister, is now a bent old man, his pale, thin face surrounded by a beard of snowy whiteness. When he walks, he leans heavily on his secretary's arm and steps with the greatest care.

Seth Abbott, father of Emma Abbott, recently went through the south selling the life of his famous daughter. He enjoys a comfortable annuity, the legacy of his daughter, whose estate at the time of her death was worth about $300,000.

Secretary Carlisle's advisers are men of young years and of even younger appearance. Hamlin, first assistant secretary of the treasury, is 36 and looks 28; Eckels, comptroller of the treasury, is 34, smooth shaven and boyish, and W. E. Curtis, the other assistant secretary, is 38.

Baron Nathaniel de Rothschild, who has just made a gift of his fine chateau and grounds, valued at over $3,000,000, at Reichenau in the Styrian Alps, for a consumptives' hospital, is the elder brother of Baron Ferdinand and senior member of the Vienna branch of the Rothschild family.

The pressman who printed the first copy of the Philadelphia Ledger is still living and is hale and hearty. His name is James Hagan, and he boasts that in his long lifetime he worked for but two establishments. He had worked for The Ledger 48 years when in 1881 he was retired on a pension.

Denison, Tex., claims to have discovered a 6-year-old boy who "has been a tramp for two years, plays poker, drinks whisky, can swear like a pirate and is an expert with the pistol."

Two boys about 13 years of age are running a dairy in south Atchison, Kan. They started two years ago with one cow and a milk can. Now they have four or five cows and a horse and wagon.

A 12-year-old negro boy living near Dublin, Tenn., was born with only one eye, there being no trace of another. His body is covered with a growth of small hairs resembling wool, giving him the appearance of a brute animal.

In Belfast, Me., two boys started a brush fire which got beyond their control. "Oh, Lee," said one, "why don't you ask God to help us?" "Get out," said Lee; "I don't believe he'd help us if we did, and I'm going to fight it myself." And he did till the neighbors came.

In Princeton, Ky., the 3-year-old baby of Godfrey Stevens fell into a cistern. There was no rope handy, but Mrs. Stevens' 10-year-old son volunteered to be lowered down by a twisted window curtain. It broke, and the poor fellow was drowned. He was found with the baby in his arms.—New York Recorder.

WAVES OF WATER.

The highest falls in the world are the Ribbon falls of the Yosemite—3,300 feet.

The oldest artesian well in Europe is found at Lillers, France. From its mouth water has flowed uninterruptedly for 746 years.

It is estimated that the Mississippi river annually discharges into the gulf of Mexico 19,500,000,000,000 cubic feet of water. Of this prodigious quantity 1-2900 part will be sediment.

The river Alde in Suffolk runs parallel with the coast for some miles, only separated from the sea by a narrow shingle bank, which, when the tide is exceptionally high, is covered by the waves.

In the bay of Fundy the tide rises 120 feet. A ship struck and remained on a rock there after dark, and at daybreak the crew were astonished to find themselves looking down a precipice into water far below.

A special train will leave the Ferry street station at 9.45 this morning, with the East Main street Sunday school excursion.

The Putnam ball nine, who meet the Clippers tomorrow, are negotiating with O'Brien, considered the best pitcher in Worcester.

Chief Stenenburg made a tour of inspection of the fire alarm boxes yesterday, with a view to ascertaining possible damage by Wednesday evening's storm.

Albert Loomis of Plainville received a serious injury to his eyes by an explosion of gunpowder on the Fourth. It is now feared that he will lose his sight.

Charles F. Noyes and William [illegible] Betts contested three half-mile bicycle heats at the fair grounds the other day. Noyes took two heats out of three; best time 1.40.

Mrs. O. W. Scott of Willimantic, editor of The Heathen Children's Friend, has been invited to address the religious congress to be held in Chicago in September.

The roadbed beneath the electric car track in the vicinity of Thames street was relaid Thursday. Consequently the cars could not pass along the track at that point.

The steamer City of Lawrence goes on the dry dock in New York tonight, and will be provided with a new condenser. The City of New York goes on the line in her stead.

New native potatoes are in the market. The tubers this year promise to yield a large harvest, and the quality of those at present in the market is satisfactory to the purchasers.

There was a serious break in the Asylum street water main, near the Maple farm, last night. Superintendent Bartlett of the water works was prompt and efficient in repairing the damage.

A farmer says that the continued dry weather in June will cause the crop of hay to be lighter in this state even than last year. Corn and potatoes are backward, many fields not having been hoed the first time.

The New London board of trade boat race committee is winding up the business connected with the visits of the crews. New London's investment did not bring back as profitable returns as was expected owing to the race being rowed in the morning.

H. C. Johnson of Uncasville has purchased the sloop yacht "Ferguson." She is a comfortable, roomy boat and a good sailer, ready for a trial of speed with any of her class. On the Fourth she made the trip from New London to Fort Pond, Montauk, in two hours.

Any member of the Connecticut National Guard wishing his discharge under the new militia law must apply for it over his own signature. The new law allows any man who enlisted for five years under the old law, and has served three years on his enlistment, to secure his discharge.

Miss Jennie D. Fellows, assistant secretary of the Norwich Free Academy Alumni association, is sending out circulars to representative members of each class, requesting corrections to date in the list of each year's graduates. Under Miss Fellows' careful supervision an accurate catalogue is assured.

The report that the Rev. William Coburn, the evangelist, is to serve at the Willimantic camp ground this year, is without foundation. The Rev. I. T. Johnson, the same evangelist that was present last year, is to serve this. This statement is on the authority of the Rev. E. Tirrell, presiding elder.

A Sunday School Picnic.

About 150 members of the Sunday schools of Christ and Trinity churches picnicked in the pleasant grove at Allyn's Point, Thursday. Various games and social diversions, in which members of both schools participated, made the day pass enjoyably for all present.

The groves along the eastern bank of the Thames are in demand as picnic grounds this summer, and no cooler or more agreeable spot can be found in this vicinity.

One of the Handsomest.

Yesterday the workmen on the Laurel Hill bridge began the work of covering the solid layer of concrete with a fine quality of Trinidad asphalt.

The first work on the bridge was done on April 21st, and in all probability another fortnight, or July 21st will see the structure completed. Both the public and the bridge builders have patiently borne with each other during the three months, and as a result of their mutual trials the city will soon have one of the handsomest bridges in the state.

NOT KNOWN IN NORWICH.

An Impostor in Ansonia Who [illegible] a Residence in This City.

On June 4, a mild-mannered and middle aged man applied for board at an Ansonia boarding house, giving as reference Peter Tomlinson, one of Ansonia's best business men. He gave his name as J. C. Brown and residence Norwich. He sought Tomlinson and said he wanted to purchase timber to fill large contracts and gave a check for a lot that he contracted for. He then visited R. R. Hoadley of Seymour and made another purchase.

On leaving he asked for Mr. Hoadley's address for future use and got it in Hoadley's writing. Brown then drew a check for $885 on it above Hoadley's name. With this check Brown went to Tomlinson and asked him to go with him to the bank and identify him. Cashier Drew protested against cashing the check until he receive advices from the Second National bank, so Brown gave another check for $1,600 on that bank and said it was simply a transfer of his deposit for use in his lumber business. The checks were held and Brown said he would call again, but skipped from town, leaving an unpaid board bill. He was seen to take the train for Waterbury.

Cashier Drew telephoned to this city and was informed that Brown not only had no account, but was unknown. He is probably the man wanted in Millerton, N. Y., for working the same scheme. Brown is about 45 years old, with rosy cheeks, is five feet ten inches in height and weighs 180. He wears a sandy moustache, gray suit and straw hat.

THE HOME RULE FUND.

Norwich Contribution Sent Through the National Federation of America.

When the Irish envoys were in this country, a meeting was held in Breed opera house on the evening of November 19, 1890, under the auspices of the Irish-Americans of the city, and about $1,300 was raised and placed in the hands of Dr. James Duggan. Owing to the turn affairs took, the committee in charge decided to postpone the sending of the money. A short time ago, it was voted to send the sum to the treasurer of the parliamentary fund in the old country.

The money will be transmitted through the treasurer of the National Federation of America, organized to aid the home rule movement in Ireland, and the necessary correspondence has been performed faithfully by Dr. Duggan. The treasurer's receipt and a handsome letter of acknowledgement were received yesterday. The sum total, with accrued interest, was $1,445.96.

Secretary Joseph P. Ryan, in the course of correspondence, wrote: "I would suggest that a number of persons from each of the Norwich societies form a branch of the Federation. This home rule fight is not yet won nor will it be without another and very severe struggle with all the forces that the tories can bring to their assistance. Take out a charter as a branch, and then you will be ready to act with the other branches in your state, when necessity calls for it. I believe we are approaching the end of this struggle, and it [illegible] honor that comes to this generation, that it should be reserved to be in at the death of the Landlord and Tory rule in Ireland, and to aid in placing our country in a position where there is a future [illegible] the workhouse and the emigrant ship."

The list of Norwich subscribers will be published in The Federation Bulletin.

JEWETT CITY BLEACHERY.

Description of the [illegible] the Aspinook Company Are [illegible].

The Aspinook company is hurrying their new bleachery at Jewett City to completion. During the past week there have been about two hundred and twenty-five men employed about the premises, and this number has been considerably increased this week. Twenty-three double teams have been brought into service, also two hand and three steam derricks, and one steam drill. A steam pump will soon be placed in position capable of throwing five hundred gallons of water per minute if necessary.

The dam, which is already quite far advanced, is being put in by a New Hampshire firm, who have their foreman, a Mr. Wells of Maine, in charge. The dam will have a rollway of 300 feet, with 115 feet of wasteway in the canal which will be used only in case of very high water. It is being built of lumber riveted to a bed of rock and again riveted, piece by piece, at right angles. Filled in between are tons of stones. The dam will be planked up on the sides and on top, and be graveled on the backside. The work is being done in a most thorough manner, and cannot fail to stand for centuries. The dam will have a fall of twenty feet, and it is estimated that about 1,300 horse power will be obtained. A canal is being dug 275 feet long, and near where the floodgates will be placed it will be necessary to cut through some ten or twelve feet of solid rock.

The buildings will all be of brick. The main structure will be 60x400 feet, two stories, and will be located some two hundred feet below the dam, on the east side of the river. Near by will be a one-story bleachery structure 38x300 feet, a dye-house 38x150 feet, and a boiler room 60x80 feet. Back of the main building there will be an annex 42x360 feet, one story high. The foundation of the machine and carpentry shop, 50x120 feet, is already in position, the machinery for the [illegible] purchased, and it is hoped to have this department ready for business in about five weeks. A coal shed [illegible] will be put up, also a boiler [illegible]. The main building and annex will be so built that they may be [illegible] at any time without difficulty. An electric light plant will be put into the basement of the main building, by which to furnish light for the entire establishment.

It is proposed to put in a siding track for convenience in shipping goods. The dam will flow back the water to Packerville, a distance of five miles, and trees and brush on both sides of the stream as far as the company's property extends, are being cut, the rubbish being carefully burned. It is expected that the capacity of the bleachery will be 1,000,000 yards per month. Employment will be given to about three hundred hands, mostly men.

A TIE-UP THREATENED

On the Danbury & Norwalk Branch of the Consolidated.

WAGES REDUCED.

Men are Determined and Will Not Accept a Compromise.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., July 7.—Unless Superintendent Paine accedes to their demand, all the freight brakemen on the Danbury & Norwalk division of the Consolidated will strike at noon tomorrow. About a month ago the men who were working in two shifts of twelve hours each and receiving $15 [illegible] as one week's pay, were divided into three shifts when eight hours constituted a day's work, and their salary was reduced to $10 25 per week.

This created dissatisfaction and considerable grumbling has been heard ever since.

Yesterday the brakemen decided to lay their grievances before Superintendent Paine, but that gentleman, after listening to what they had to say, informed them that they must wait. They asked for $1.90 per day, the rate adopted on the company's main line, but this was refused.

Another meeting behind closed doors is known to have been held late tonight and it has leaked out that unless the company is willing to make concessions the men will stop work.

There may be a general tie up on every line operated by the company as the men are members of the Brotherhood of Trainmen.

The strikers may be assisted by the firemen and engineers.

Mr. Paine will come to the city from his home in Danbury tomorrow.

It is learned that the men are determined to carry their point and that no compromise will be accepted.

WARDEN CHAMBERLAIN RESIGNS.

Gen. Haven Will Continue to Act as Warden for the Present.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 7.—The state prison directors held a session at the prison today. No action was taken in regard to the election of a warden. The chief business was with reference to the retirement of Gen. Chamberlain. President Bollman and Secretary Chapin had two interviews with the general, on the prison grounds during the forenoon.

At first General Chamberlain was disposed to insist on a reinstatement prior to his resignation. But it was afterwards arranged that he should resign without reinstatement.

At the afternoon session of the board the resignation of Gen. Chamberlain was received, taking effect August 1. This was without solicitation on the part of the directors.

In the meantime General Haven will be continued in the position to which he was assigned by the governor's orders in April.

While the resignation of General Chamberlain was anticipated before the 1st of August, his [illegible] this afternoon was unexpected. The course of the general is the best one that he could adopt under the circumstances. The way is now open for the speedy solution of the entire prison problem.

BOUND FOR STATE PRISON.

Forgery on a Large Scale by a Boston Real Estate Dealer.

BOSTON, July 7.—[illegible] O. Bowen, of the real estate firm of Bowen & Merrill, 223 Washington street, put his razor, revolver and a few other articles into a handbag, [illegible] his wife that he had [illegible] to go to state prison, left the [illegible] since which time nothing has been heard from him.

Since his departure more than half a dozen notes with forged signatures have turned up, and it is believed that there are yet many others to be heard from. His partner, Edward F. Merrill, of Portland, who was induced to engage in business with him through an advertisement and who was to receive one-half the commission of the firm, has received no share of the commission, Bowen telling him that he had himself received no money from the sales.

Bowen mortgaged his household furniture to no less than six persons, and on fourth of July a wagon drove up to his residence in Charlestown and all the furniture was removed, leaving Mrs. Bowen and her son without any household goods whatever. Mrs. Bowen was given shelter by a friend until such time as she can support herself and child. Bowen is said to have been in trouble once before for which he was placed in Charles street jail for a time, being released after a satisfactory agreement had been reached with his creditors.

Excitement at Naugatuck.

NAUGATUCK, Conn., July 7.—This town is greatly excited over a criminal assault made on Minnie White, a 15 year-old girl living on the New Haven turnpike, about two miles out of town. As the girl was on her way home, about 8.30 last night, she was intercepted by a young man who was concealed behind a fence. He threw her violently to the ground and a desperate struggle took place.

The girl's assailant, David Connors, was held in $5,000 bonds.

Missing from Hartford.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 7.—W. E. Becker, an architect, has been missing since Monday. He has a wife and child in this city. It is said he owes a number of debts.

Morris Levy, Hartford's other missing man, who it was supposed had been drowned on July 4, is supposed to be in New York. It was reported that he was in Meriden Tuesday night.

Failures for the Week.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Bradstreet's reports 319 failures in the United States this week against 152 in the like week of last year, and 29 failures in Canada against 30 in the week a year ago.

An Exciting Rumor.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—It is rumored here that a revolution has broken out in Australia and that independence has been declared. The rumor created considerable excitement for a time. Little credence, however, was given the rumor.

NEW MATRON AT WETHERSFIELD.

New and Satisfactory Improvements Already Introduced.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 7.—The new matron at the prison is Miss Marville M. Lee, who has spent five years in the Massachusetts state primary school at Munson. She was appointed by General Haven, who received high recommendations in her favor from Massachusetts authorities.

Miss Lee is a native of Bangor, N. Y., and was formerly a teacher in the public schools of that state. She is familiar with methods of prison or reformatory discipline and has marked executive ability. In the special work of the woman's department in the prison, Miss Lee has introduced several improvements. One is the method of drying the prison washing. Heretofore the clothes have been dried inside the prison walls; now arrangements have been made for drying them in the open air. The result is very satisfactory.

TOLEDO 'CYCLING CLUB.

Magnificent Race Between Johnson and Sanger.

TOLEDO, O., July 7.—Three thousand people saw the first day's racing of the Toledo 'Cycling club and the opening of the new one-third mile track at the exposition grounds, this afternoon. The weather was very warm and the track fairly fast.

The principal event was the mile open race, in which Johnson, Sanger, McDuffee and Biles were the principal riders. Sanger went off with a big lead, and at the end of the first lap was over 75 yards ahead of the field. In the second lap he slowed down to let Johnson get even with him and then started a magnificent race between the two, Johnson winning by a yard and a half in 2.32.

Summoned to Buzzard's Bay.

OMAHA, Neb., July 7.—The departure of Mrs. W. T. Hoyt of Beatrice for Buzzard's Bay to see her brother, the president, has aroused fears that his illness is more serious than is admitted by his physicians. Mrs. Hoyt had just returned home and had no intention of going east until she was called by a dispatch by Mrs. Cleveland.

Confidential Clerk Missing.

NEW YORK, July 7.—James H. Daley, confidential clerk and manager of Frank B. Smith's machine oils and machinery supplies concern at No. 40 Day street, is missing, and it is alleged that he has swindled a number of merchants in the neighborhood out of several thousands of dollars by falsely endorsing checks.

Sugar Laden Ship Ashore.

ST. JOHNS, July 7.—The British ship John E. Sayre of St. John, N. B., laden with 2,400 tons of raw sugar from the Philippines for Montreal, went ashore yesterday near Channel, Newfoundland, in a dense fog. The ship will prove a total loss. Residents along shore are saving uninjured cargo for salvage.

Farwell—Wright.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 7.—Jules E. Farwell, M. D., of Boston, and Miss Helen C. Wright, only daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. E. Emery Wright, were married at Whitinsville this afternoon.

Spanish Steamer Burned.

MANILA, July [illegible]—The Spanish steamer Don Juan, before reported [illegible] at sea off Union, has been [illegible] in Manila and [illegible]. One [illegible] forty-five Chinese passengers [illegible] lost. The vessel was gutted by [illegible].

Leather Firm Assigned.

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—Patrick Reilly & Sons, the leather firm reported to be in financial trouble a week ago, assigned today. Assets $148,875.

Hotel Burned on the World's Fair Grounds.

CHICAGO, July 7.—The Hotel Lincoln on the World's fair grounds was damaged by fire today. Five persons were injured. Loss $7,000.

Lynched in Kentucky.

PADUCAH, Ky., July 7.—Charles Miller, the negro who assaulted and then murdered the Ray sisters, Thursday, was hanged by a mob at 3.30 this afternoon.

Home Again.

MADRID, July 7.—The Infanta Eulalie arrived here today.

Women have abandoned upon collecting for silver hat pins.

In the middle ages pepper was by no means a thing to be sneezed at, although, doubtless, people were sometimes taken that way on making too close an acquaintance with what was then a very costly condiment. Indeed, so greatly was it valued, that a small packet was considered a suitable present for a noted person on his marriage or some other great occasion.

In 1863 a uniform three cent letter postage was fixed by the United States.

Paris has twelve more dailies than London, New York, Philadelphia and Boston combined.

The perfectly round pearls are the most valuable; next come the pear-shaped and lastly the egg shaped.

An axe once used by William E. Gladstone will shortly be exhibited in the forestry building at the World's fair.

During sea voyages all dogs lose their "game sense."

In ten years the descendants of two rabbits will number 70,000,000.

The ancient ell, a measure, was the length of the arm of Henry I.

It is asserted that the oldest building in the world is the tower of London.

A new and important industry is the production of soap from cottonseed oil.

The New York clearing house was established in 1853; that of Boston in 1856.

In Spain, once upon a time, no man might ride a horse which the king had mounted. One day when Phillip IV was going to church in a procession, the duke of Modena offered to present him with a beautiful steed belonging to him and accounted the finest in Madrid. The king declined the gift, saying he should regret to render so noble an animal ever after useless.

A story has been circulating that the czar of Russia recently sent to the sultan of Turkey, as a present, an album of paintings by first-rate artists of all the war ships of the Russian Black sea fleet. In some quarters the reported act is thought a piece of fine humor, while in others, it is considered an insult to which a reparation in kind would not be difficult.

James Hamill, best known as the [illegible] of the Bulkeley school ball nine, has obtained a situation with the New London Steamboat company, at the Block Island end of the route, where he is to receive and look out for the business of the steamer Block Island, a sort of general freight and steamboat agent, as it were.

THE CARAVELS AT CHICAGO.

Welcomed by Booming of Cannon and Waving of Flags.

TOWED INTO PORT

By the Man-of-War Michigan, Escorted by Steamers and Yachts.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Amid the booming of cannon, the waving of a multitude of flags and the shouts of a hundred thousand people the Spanish caravels were today welcomed to the World's fair.

The caravels completed their long journey at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when they cast anchor in the harbor of the exposition grounds.

They were slowly towed into port by the United States man-of-war Michigan, with an escort of half a hundred or more gaily decorated steamers, yachts and pleasure boats.

When the welcoming uproar had ceased the officers and crews that manned the caravels were taken on shore where they were met by a guard of honor and bands of music.

Death of Associate Justice Blatchford.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 7.—Associate Justice Blatchford passed quietly and [illegible] from earth at 7.30 this evening. He retained consciousness until an hour or two before his death. There was no sudden change in his condition, simply the gradual slipping away which has been taking place for the last week. The arrangements for the funeral are not yet completed, but the body will probably be taken to Washington for interment. For many seasons he has been a quiet visitor [illegible] the summer season, residing in his own cottage on Greenough place, and [illegible] not greatly given to society [illegible] he was frequently entertained in the first families.

Christian Endeavorers at Montreal.

MONTREAL, July 7.—There were five prayer meetings in five churches this morning, conducted on behalf of the visiting Christian Endeavor delegates.

At 10 o'clock a meeting was held at Drill hall, the subject of discussion being: "The Four Essentials of a Christian Endeavor Society." An evangelistic meeting was also held in the tent.

At an evening session in the hall the city of Cleveland, O., was advocated as the next place of meeting.

Above Quiet at Paris.

PARIS, July 7.—Though the district in the vicinity of the Place de la Republique remained quiet throughout the day, this evening infantry and cavalry took possession of the place to guard against a recurrence of the disorderly scenes that have taken place there. The Boulevard St. Martin, Boulevard du Temple, Boulevard Voltaire, the Avenue de la Republique and the [illegible], all of which open into the Place de la Republique, are patrolled by a strong military force.

Fighting Continued at Paris.

PARIS, July 8.—The fighting between rioters and the military at the Place de La Republique and in the nearby streets continued till 1 o'clock this morning.

The feeling of the workingmen against the students who refuse to participate in the riots, is very bitter.

It is feared that on Tuesday the anarchists will celebrate the anniversary of the death of Ravachol and trouble will ensue.

A Deputy Sheriff Breaks His Leg.

GARDNER, Mass., July 7.—This noon Deputy Sheriff Henry A. Turner of Gardner was taking a man from Hubbardston to the asylum at Worcester by train, and two miles east of Hubbardston the insane man jumped from the train while it was under full headway. Turner followed and broke his right leg at the knee.

Gardner Lodge No. 46, K. of P.

At a regular session of Gardner Lodge held Friday evening, the following officers were duly installed by D. D., A. B. Hill: C. C., Geo. E. Angell; V. C., E. A. Hill; P., David A. Gilmour; M. of A., Thos. Hargraves; Master of Work, J. W. St. John; I. G. John G. Hill; O. G., L. Harris.

TAFTVILLE.

A large number attended the funeral of Mrs. Thomas Webster Friday afternoon. The flowers were numerous and handsome. The Rev. G. H. Kellogg officiated, and the quartette sang two hymns. The bearers were G. H. Bendow, James Graham, William Sanderson, and John Ginkey.

Mrs. George Thompson has gone to Maine for a visit.

Mrs. Godfrey Dawson and daughter Bertha have returned from a visit to Providence.

HORSES
TREATED FOR ALL DISEASES,
At Gardner's Stable, Chestnut St by the new Veterinary, DR. E. L. TOWER, graduate from Ontario Veterinary College. may4d

SICKNESS IS SIN.

Rev. Father A. Ouellet Speaks for the Public's Benefit.

The question of protection against contagious and infectious diseases has always been of the most vital importance.

Modern medicine lays stress not so much on disinfectants and deodorizers as on fortifying the body against disease germs. We all encounter every day disease germs enough to kill us; but while the body is robust, we throw them off; it's only when the system is sufficiently weakened and depressed that these deadly germs gain lodgment and the power of doing harm.

The Rev. A. Ouellet is one of the most popular and greatly respected priests in the lower provinces. His parish is in New Brunswick.

Like thousands of others he tried the great modern remedy first prescribed by Prof. Phelps of Dartmouth, the remedy that gives proper nourishment to the ill-fed nerves; that procures the sleep that makes brain and nerves play their parts calmly and harmoniously; that drives the poison germs of deep-seated disease from the blood; that gives tone to the system, and consequent buoyancy of spirit and happiness. He writes:

"Of Paine's celery compound I can speak from experience. I had been laid up with fever and rheumatic gout from Jan. 5 till the middle of June; hence my system was fearfully run down. I was very thin and so feeble that for several weeks I could not move along without help. I then began to take Paine's celery compound according to prescription, and today I am as lusty and strong as I was ten years ago.

"I do not say that I am radically cured as yet of my gout, but the attacks are much less frequent, in fact, I have not been one single day prevented from attending to my usual work since that time. I therefore take pleasure in certifying to the wonderful efficacy of that marvellous preparation.

"As a blood purifier it has no equal, and its beneficial influence on the digestive system cannot be questioned. In view of the facts I do not hesitate to advise sick persons to give Paine's Celery Compound a fair trial in the various ailments for which it is recommended."

Paine's Celery Compound is unquestionably the greatest remedy of modern times. It is the result of the most recent medical thought and investigation concerning dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia, rheumatism, kidney troubles, and nervous diseases. jy6d

Ladies, don't let the idea run away with you that the season for wearing summer hats has gone by. The summer is young yet, and before the 20th of September you will have plenty of chances to wear your light hats and gowns. And speaking of summer hats, T. E. McClenathan calls your attention to a line in his store that he is almost giving away. Just read it and note prices.

The great clearing sale season has arrived and Reid & Hughes open the ball with an announcement of bargains in every department. The sale begins today and will last one week, and it is safe to admonish those who are apt to think that "tomorrow will do just as well" that if they procrastinate in this case they will get left. The bargains are great and the goods will be pushed just as hard as they can be to clear them out in the six days the sale lasts. See advertisement.

Porteous & Mitchell will open their regular midsummer sale of staple and summer goods today, and will continue it for one week. The sale is to clean up the surplus summer merchandise, thus avoiding the necessity of putting them away till next spring. They want a clean sweep; they want room; they want the money; and they want to see the smiles on the faces of their patrons, brought there by the big bargains they are enabled to offer them at a small price. NORWICH AND VICINITY.

City Court—Kellogg, Judge.

Francis O'Donnell, 60 years old, was in the city court Friday morning to answer to a charge of disturbing the peace. Suspension of judgment for sixty days was granted, and O'Donnell gave a bond of $25.

J. Cantwell paid $8.10 for drunkenness, and Owen Curry $6.48 for the same offence.

M. J. Kelly was presented for breach of the peace. He was found guilty and fined $5 and costs—$14.13.

Timothy Reardon, who didn't go home Thursday night when Officer Hastings told him to, was fined $3 and costs—$9.52. Reardon went up on the hill.

Installation of Officers.

At the regular meeting of Germania lodge, No. 11, O. D. H. S., Thursday evening, Deputy L. Haack installed the following officers: President, John Halbel; vice-president, Christian Dostach; first secretary, Emil Gozywacz; second secretary, Paul Grzywacz; treasurer, Julius Wuttkey; trustee for eighteen months, F. Dearing; warden, Paul Roeder; inside guard, Fr. Mitterer; outside guard, L. Greiner; G. Hatsch, H. Appeldorn, George Seidel, committee of finance.

First Willimantic Newspaper.

Those having in charge the preparation of the historical article for the Windham bi-centennial souvenir have found No. 3 of The Windham Gazette, the first newspaper published in Willimantic. Its date is December 12, 1828, so the paper was started December 5th of that year. D. St. James Howard was editor at the time and he was a rather foppish specimen of the early journalistic fraternity, as the way his name is parted indicates and as old inhabitants remember him. This and later copies of the same paper, from the estate of the late Solomon Loring of Lebanon, are now in the possession of Elisha Avery.

The Norwich Indian Club.

The Indian club of Norwich has recently made a very graceful acknowledgment of its affection for its late president, Miss Laura Marsh. Miss Marsh organized the club, which is composed of the young ladies of the town, and to the day of her death inspired it to good works. The club has now authorized the purchase of a fine Webster's unabridged dictionary, with a solid iron standard for the same, for the use of the young people at our mission home at Rose Fork. The dictionary will have on its cover, in gold lettering, the following inscription:

Presented by the Indian Club of Norwich, Conn.,
to the Connecticut Mission Home,
[illegible]
LAURA LOUISE MARSH.
"Her works do follow her."

THE EXAMINING BOARD.

Programme of its Meetings—Col. Tyler Added to the List.

Colonel Augustus C. Tyler of the Third regiment has been appointed a member of the military examining board in the place of Captain Wm. H. C. Bowen. Colonel Tyler is a graduate of West Point and a thorough tactician. The appointment is regarded as a good one.

The board will convene at the capitol on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. On Monday the officers of the brigade staff, Second Separate Company, Machine Gun Battery, and the First regiment, will be examined by General Haven and Colonel Charles L. Burdett of the First regiment. On Tuesday the officers of the Second regiment will be examined, Col. John B. Doherty of that regiment taking the place of Colonel Burdett. The officers of the Third regiment will be examined on Wednesday by Colonel Haven and Colonel Tyler. On Thursday, when the officers of the Fourth regiment are examined, Colonel Frost of that regiment will be added to the board. This gives the colonel of each regiment a place in the board while the officers of his regiment are being examined.

MEDICAL PRACTICE ACT.

Changes Ordered Under its Provisions by the State Board of Health.

At the annual meeting of the State board of health, Thursday, the board decided to notify all physicians in the state that they must fill out a registration blank and file it before October, under the new medical practice act. All physicians failing to register by the date named will be compelled to undergo an examination in medicine before a committee of one of the three state medical societies—Connecticut Medical, Homeopathic or Eclectic, and if they fail to pass, the State board is empowered to debar them from practice. The same power is vested in the state board in cases where the delinquents refuse to be examined.

Secretary Lindsley was instructed to notify all the undertakers by printed circular that the bodies of all persons who die of contagious diseases must be wrapped in several folds of cloth, saturated with bichloride of mercury or carbolic acid, and must be buried in air-tight coffins. The bodies may be buried any hour of the day or night. The law goes into effect on July 30, and the state board of health will strive to enforce it in all cases.

The board had its annual election of officers. Professor Brewer was elected president, and Dr. Lindsley was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

By law, the committee on county homes consists of the commissioners of each county, one member of the state board of charities and members of the state board of health for the various counties. The state board elected Dr. Worden of Bridgeport for Fairfield county, George P. Ingersoll of New Haven for Tolland and Windham counties, Dr. Wilson of Meriden for Middlesex and New London counties, Dr. Goodwin of Thomaston for Litchfield county, and Dr. C. A. Lindsley of New Haven for Hartford and New Haven counties.

NEW MAGAZINES.

McClure's Magazine for July continues the feature of portraits at different ages of famous men. This month, thus pictured, are Thomas A. Edison, Edward Everett Hale, De Blowitz, and Daniel Vierge Urrabieta. The frontispiece is the latest portrait of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Contents: "An Afternoon with Dr. Holmes," "A Ballad of the Sea," "In the Name of the Law," "Training Wild Beasts," "On the Track of the Reviewer," "De Blowitz," and "The Race to the North Pole," with the story of three expeditions, illustrated. L. L. McClure, publisher, 743 and 745 Broadway, New York.

REICHSTAG MEETS.

Von Caprivi Introduces the Army Bill.

HE ALSO MAKES A LONG SPEECH.

Three Hundred and Ninety-Seven Members Present.

BERLIN, July 7.—When the new reichstag met today for the first time for the consideration of regular parliamentary business, nearly all the 397 members were in their places, for it was known that the government would at once introduce the amended army bill.

Immediately after the formal opening of the house, Chancellor Von Caprivi ascended the tribune, and in a long speech introduced the amended measure. He stated that the present form of the bill represented the minimum that the government would accept in men or money. The government's demands were the lowest possible consistent with the safety of the empire.

The previous bill had been before parliament and the country for nine months, and everybody understood what the government wanted. It was, therefore, needless to repeat the argument that had heretofore been advanced in favor of the measure.

During the delivery of his speech the chancellor was frequently interrupted by applause.

The key note of his speech was that foreign countries, not knowing intimately the German character, had been led to believe that Germany had lost confidence in herself and that the countries composing the German empire were no longer united. This, the chancellor declared, was an erroneous impression, which ought to be quickly dispelled by the speedy adoption of the new bill.

Herr Payer, a member of the volkspartei, followed the chancellor. He declared it was not true that the country had pronounced for, nor did a majority of the house support the army bill. Such small majority as the government might obtain would only be secured through diplomacy.

Freiherr von Manteuffel, a Conservative, and an active supporter of the government, said he regretted that the government had abandoned the own bill for the Huene compromise. It was impossible for Germany to be too strong.

THE FINAL ROUNDS.

Rowed at Henley and Prizes Awarded to Successful Oarsmen.

LONDON, July 7.—This was the last day of the Henley regatta. The final rounds in the different events were rowed today and the prizes awarded to the successful competitors.

In the final round for the Steward's cup the crew of the Magdalen College Rowing club beat the crew of the Thames Rowing club by a length and a quarter.

For the Grand Challenge cup the crew of the Leander Rowing club were pitted against the London Rowing club's crew. The London crew finished a length and three-quarters astern of the Leanders.

G. B. Kennedy of the Kingston Rowing club and F. Biddington of the Thames Rowing club were matched against each other in the final round for the Diamond sculls. Kennedy showed himself the superior oarsman and won the race as he pleased.

POLICE INVESTIGATING.

Body of Popular French Canadian Found in the Merrimac.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 7.—The body of Joseph [illegible] Nirois, who has been missing from the city since the Fourth of July, was found in the Merrimac this morning at the entrance to the canal. There was a bad wound in the forehead, and it is thought that he was stunned when he fell into the water.

He was at Lake Massabesic the Fourth and it is claimed became intoxicated and failed to leave the train when it reached this city. Whether he fell or jumped from the train between here and Hooksett or was thrown off is now a matter of inquiry on the part of the police. He was 38, unmarried, and very popular in French Canadian circles.

BLAINE-NEVINS MARRIAGE.

The Celebrated Letter of Fr. Ducey to Secretary Blaine Made Public.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Attention is again called to the marriage of James G. Blaine, Jr., to Marie Nevins by Fr. Ducey, by the publication in the Herald of what is alleged to be a true story of the affair.

The article shows that Fr. Ducey attempted to dissuade the young couple from marriage, and went so far as to tell the young woman that young Blaine was not worthy of her. He afterwards explained his connection with the marriage to Walker Blaine who told James G. Blaine the whole story. It is alleged that the ex-secretary knew all the facts when he wrote his extraordinary letter.

The much discussed letter written by Fr. Ducey and which he challenged Mr. Blaine to print following the appearance of Mr. Blaine's strictures, was as follows:

MY DEAR SIR,—I have received your letter, fully weighed its contents, and deeply appreciate the sentiment under which it was written.

In answer I have simply to say that the facts and circumstances leading to the marriage of your son fully justified the performance of the ceremony by me.

If you wish any further information, when it is convenient for you to call at my rectory I shall be pleased to give it to you. Very truly yours, THOMAS J. DUCEY.

Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., when sick at the New York hotel on her return from Dakota, sent for the priest, whom she had not seen for a long time, expressed her regret for the annoyance he had suffered for his kindness, and asked his counsel as to the publication of the true inwardness of this whole affair, which she informed Mr. Blaine she would give to the public in a certain number of days unless he retracted his statement.

Fr. Ducey said: "You are too sick and nervously prostrated to think of this now. When you recover you must use your own judgment. I cannot advise you in the matter, as I am an interested party."

The statement was shown to Fr. Ducey at the rectory of St. Leo's church last night, and he confirmed the truth of it in every particular.

MUSIC BY ELECTRICITY.

First Electric Organ Arrives in Boston For a Taunton Church.

BOSTON, July 7.—The first electric organ for use in America has arrived at the Boston custom house from England. It has been built for St. Thomas' Church, Taunton. The new organist will press an electric button and the electricity does the rest. It is not so massive as other church organs as the key-board is not used. A long cable is used to conduct the electricity from the pipes which are controlled by that agency.

The organ was made in England and it is the first that will take part in the divine worship on American soil. It will be at least five weeks before the instrument will be in playing order as it will have to be fitted up and examined by the customs authorities.

The invention has attracted the attention of the musical world. To properly understand its principles and construction would require going through much technical verbiage pertaining to electricity.

UNDER SERIOUS CHARGES.

Lowell Man Arrested for Forging and Receiving Stolen Bonds.

LOWELL, Mass., July 7.—Alfred Morrisette, employed by a furniture dealer on Merrimac street, was arrested this morning by Detectives Hayes and Laflamme on the charge of forging and uttering Canadian bonds to the amount of $18,000; also receiving stolen Canadian bonds to the amount of $9000.

The names forged were those of H. O. Macklin and A. H. Varet of Montreal. The prisoner was taken to Boston, where he will appear before the United States court.

FLATTERING PROSPECTS.

Clemson College Opens With Four Hundred Students.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7.—Clemson Agricultural and Mechanical College was opened yesterday with 400 students.

This institution was founded by Thomas G. Clemson of Massachusetts, who married a daughter of John C. Calhoun. He died in 1888, bequeathing $80,000 and 800 acres of land for this purpose. The buildings cost $200,000, and the college starts out with the most flattering prospects.

Dean Lawrence's Consecration.

BOSTON, July 7.—The consent of the bishops to the consecration of Dean Lawrence as bishop of Massachusetts is expected to be communicated through Bishop Williams within a few days. Consent has already been given by the standing committees of the various dioceses, and it is generally understood that not one of the standing committees has withheld consent. It is now expected that Dean Lawrence will be consecrated on Oct. 5 in Trinity church.

The Way He Celebrated.

PROVIDENCE, July 7.—R. S. Burbank, an electrician of New York, was arraigned in the United States circuit court today before Judge Carpenter, charged with the malicious destruction of a letter box. Burbank was celebrating the Fourth by firing giant powder crackers. He placed one on top of a letter box, and it was blown from its fastenings and smashed. Burbank was held in $1000 for the grand jury.

Lynched or Burned at the Stake.

CAIRO, Mo., July 7.—The negro who so brutally assaulted and murdered Mary and Annie Ray, the daughters of John Ray, near Wickliffe, Ky., Wednesday, was yesterday captured at Libertytown, Mo., 28 miles from here, and a special train was sent to convey him to the scene of his crime, there to be lynched or burned at the stake as the infuriated mob should decide.

Very Much Alive.

SALEM, Mass., July 7.—James H. Gallfoyle of this city is not dead. Six months ago his obituary was published in several papers as having died. Wednesday he returned to Salem after being away eighteen months. He says he has been at work in another city and could not account for the elaborate obituary notice given him.

Saleem at Portland.

PORTLAND, Me., July 7.—With the cheers of Boston still ringing in our ears the staunch little Saleem and her party arrived here at 10.23. She had an excellent trip down, fair weather and bright skies. A crowd of nearly 250 people were waiting on North wharf, where Saleem is moored to greet her.

Monatiquot Regatta.

BOSTON, July 7.—The 20th regatta of the Monatiquot Yacht Club will be sailed off Fort Point, North Weymouth, tomorrow afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock. The boats of the first class sail over a course of nine miles and those of the second and third classes seven miles.

PARIS LABOR EXCHANGE.

Seven Hundred Policemen Used to Drive Everybody Out of Doors.

PARIS, July 7.—Figaro gives a graphic account of the clearing of the labor exchange yesterday.

Seven hundred policemen, under instructions from the ministry of justice, marched to the building about the middle of the afternoon and drove everybody out. The doors were then closed and 200 policemen were left on guard.

The exchange was closed because the syndicates using it refused to comply with the law of 1884 requiring them to register themselves.

The syndicates gave warning to the government through the municipal council that unless this attempt to compel them to register were abandoned, they would proclaim a general strike.

Nevertheless, M. Guerin, minister of justice, told the senate that all the labor syndicates which had been constituted illegally or were proceeding illegally, would be prosecuted. The Labor exchange, he said, had become a hotbed of revolutionary propaganda, and had defied the laws; hence the government had closed it. The government would not be deterred from enforcing the law. Many rioters were arraigned and sentenced yesterday.

Gangs of rowdies made disturbances early last evening in the Rue du Chateau d'Eau, around the Labor exchange and in the nearby side streets. By 9 o'clock the rioters had become numerous and belligerent. They upset and partly smashed five tram cars and broke many windows. A mob took possession of the boulevard du Temple at 10:30 o'clock and began breaking windows. The police charged twice before they could force the rioters back. The police used revolvers and several rioters were shot. The rioters fired back, but wounded only one policeman.

Omnibuses were overturned and set afire by rioters in the Rue St. Maur and Rue Oberkampf. The Republican guards charged the mobs in both streets. The mobs fought stubbornly, but were routed. Thirty rioters were arrested. About forty who were wounded were carried off by their friends. At 1.30 o'clock this morning the streets were quiet.

Struck by Lightning.

CHESTER DEPOT, Vt., July 7.—The farmhouse of Fred Damon was struck by lightning last night and burned to the ground. Loss $1500.

Justifiable, Perhaps.

Excited Citizen—I want a man arrested right away! I've been assaulted, and I wasn't doing a thing but walking along the street in a quiet, orderly and inoffensive manner and whistling.

Justice—Um—er—what tune were you whistling?—Exchange.

A Juvenile Theory.

Mother—Why are you not as polite and considerate and gentlemanly as little Tommy Dodd?

Small Son—I guess maybe he was brought up on some street where the other boys was bigger than him.—Good News.

Then and Now.

A prince espoused a beggar maid
In days when princes were supreme,
For which his fame will never fade;
His love is every poet's theme.
Yet we should make the deed to praise,
For things have altered strangely since.
This is the foreign nowadays,
"A maiden weds a beggar prince."

Chicago, Denver and Cincinnati Physicians Fail to Help Mrs. Willey.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy Again Cures Where All Else Fails.

[From The Cincinnati (O.) Post.]

To the Editor:—I believe that I can help the sick and suffering by giving them the benefit of my experience.

For years I have suffered from rheumatism, complicated with neuralgia and severe headache, and at regular intervals with the illness peculiar to my sex, at times almost crazy with pains in my head and body. I have employed physicians in Denver, Chicago, here and other cities who have given me but temporary relief.

Some time ago I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it has done me more good than all the doctors put together. I am better now than I have been in years, and my neighbors will vouch for the great improvement Favorite Remedy has made in me. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to many of my friends and it has in every case helped them.

Having found a medicine that has demonstrated its power to benefit and cure in such a complicated case as my own, I feel it a duty to make it known publicly so that the many suffering ones of this city can avail themselves of it.

Mrs. A. Willey, Cincinnati, O.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has certainly made many wonderful cures in cases where the skill and methods of other physicians have been baffled. Dr. Kennedy has prescribed Favorite Remedy and it has produced permanent recovery in rheumatism, dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaints which always arise from acidity of the blood. jy7wed

The Bulletin.

A TREACHEROUS MAID

Mme. Loufourcade, the wife of an army officer during the French revolution, was applied to by the wife of another officer to afford concealment for her husband.

Mme. Loufourcade lived a short distance from the city of Lyons. She had four servants, and the main difficulty, provided the officer could reach her dwelling without discovery, was how best to guard the secret from them.

It was finally decided that one of the females should be taken into her confidence and that the officer, who was a rather effeminate looking man, should come disguised in female attire and be passed off as a cousin of Fanchette.

So Fanchette, a rather pretty girl, was made acquainted with everything.

Captain Lavergne made his appearance in due time, disguised as a woman, and so well did he look and play his part that he was not suspected by the other servants of being different from what he seemed. In order, however, to incur as little risk as possible, he pretended to be greatly fatigued by his journey, and was, soon after his arrival, shown to a private room on the upper floor, which he did not leave again for a week, it being given out that he was quite ill.

At the end of the time mentioned some eight or ten soldiers made their appearance at the mansion and demanded the person of Captain Lavergne.

"If you think there is any such individual under this roof, you can make your search," replied Mme. Loufourcade.

When the servants were called together, the lady perceived that Fanchette was pale and trembling.

As soon as the officer saw her he exclaimed:

"Well, wench, did you tell the truth or not? If you did, it's all right with you, and you needn't be scared; if you didn't, it's my honest opinion you'll soon be a head shorter."

"What is this?" cried Mme. Loufourcade, in astonishment.

"Well, I don't care!" said Fanchette, assuming an impudent manner. "It's time the aristocrats was put down and made to know that other people is as good as them. I heard there was a reward of a thousand francs offered for this man, who's dared to come here and pass himself off as a female, and I thought I'd just as good a right to the money as anybody."

"And for this you have sold your soul," groaned her mistress.

"Don't come any religious talk over me!" cried Fanchette. "I know more of what's been going on than you think. Religion's been swept away by a decree, and death's an eternal sleep."

"That's all true, girl," chimed in the officer with an emphatic oath. "But while we're talking the man may get away. Here, guard, seize and bind all these parties."

There was no resistance made by the mistress and her terrified servants, and in a very short time all except Fanchette were secured with cords.

"Now, girl," said the officer, with a coarse laugh, "show us the way to your sweet female cousin."

Captain Lavergne meantime was not entirely ignorant of his peril. From his window he had seen the approach of the soldiers and rightly conjectured they were in quest of himself. His apartment was so situated that he could not go down stairs and escape without being seen by some of the servants. He was alarmed, and his mind became active to devise some means of defense or escape. He had in his possession a brace of loaded pistols, and his first idea was to barricade his door and sell his life as dearly as possible, but in looking about the apartment he noticed the fireplace and discovered that the chimney was large enough to admit his person. He could see the light at the top, and it occurred to him that perhaps he might escape, and he resolved to make the trial.

Taking his pistols with him, Captain Lavergne hurriedly pushed his way up the chimney, with the view of getting on the roof, but when he had ascended some eight or ten feet he discovered to his agreeable surprise that there was a kind of recess, such as were sometimes left in old fashioned chimneys for the purpose of opening another flue whenever it might be wanted, large enough to conceal him from the view of any one looking up from below.

Hastily getting into it, he breathed a little more freely, though still with a good deal of nervous apprehension. He feared that in coming up he had shaken down a sufficient quantity of soot to betray his manner of escape and give a clew to his place of retreat. But a glance downward at his clothes convinced him that he had little to be alarmed about in this respect—for the flue had never been much used, his garments were not badly soiled, and he could not perceive dirt enough below to attract attention.

He had not long to wait before he heard the soldiers enter the room, led by the treacherous girl.

"Ha! he escaped!" exclaimed the latter in alarm.

The officer swore some terrible oaths and fiercely demanded which way.

"Either up the chimney or into some other part of the house," said Fanchette. "He was here a few minutes ago."

"Quick, men, fly about, he's not up here," cried the officer, looking up the chimney. "Two of you run out and see if he's on the roof, and the rest ransack the house! If we don't find him, we'll burn it down!"

A hurried search was apparently made of the room they were in, and then Captain Lavergne heard the soldiers in different parts of the house opening and banging doors, shouting and cursing. He felt his situation now to be very critical indeed, for should the house be fired he feared there might be no escape for him. After awhile the noise and tumult subsided, and every moment he was in trembling expectation of hearing or seeing something to indicate that the building was on fire, and he now resolved to make another bold effort for his life. He reasoned that those sent outside to see if he was on the roof had already rejoined the others, and he now resolved to gain the roof, and if he could do so undiscovered to venture a leap among the thick shrubbery at the rear of the mansion.

In the course of two or three minutes this dangerous feat was successfully executed, and Captain Lavergne found himself once more on the ground outside considerably scratched and bruised, but not seriously injured. He now heard loud voices inside and hurriedly stole away through the shrubbery.

The searching officer, not finding any trace of the man he sought, at last became enraged at the treacherous girl and accused her of deceiving him. This impression was soon strengthened into conviction by Mme. Loufourcade and the other servants, and the whole affair ended in the release of the prisoners and the arrest of Fanchette, who was herself marched off to prison, where she died.

After the soldiers had gone Captain Lavergne returned to the mansion to assure Mme. Loufourcade of his safety and then set off to make his escape from the country, which he accomplished and lived to return at the end of the Reign of Terror.—Exchange.

Ancient and Modern English Guns.

Nelson's ship, the Victory, was designed to carry 104 guns, consisting of 32, 24 and 12 pounders, ranged on her upper, main, middle and lower decks. She was also armed with a few 68-pounder carronades. The weight of her one broadside of single shotted guns was 1,104 pounds, which was considered prodigious in those days. In the account of the battle of Trafalgar, in which action this ship played so prominent a part, the broadside that she poured into the French Bucentaure is described as terrific, dismounting 20 of her adversary's guns and killing and wounding no less than 400 of her officers and men.

Compare this with our guns of the present day, when a single gun of the Nile or Trafalgar throws a projectile 100 pounds heavier than the whole broadside of the Victory, while one of our 101-ton guns discharges a projectile weighing no less than 1,800 pounds! It may be of interest to know that while only 336 pounds of powder were expended in the discharge of a broadside from the Victory as much as 3,000 pounds weight of powder is consumed in firing the broadside of the Victoria or the Sans Pareil, two of our modern ironclads.—Good Words.

The Problem of the Cradle.

Ever since the world began mothers have been rocking cradles and singing lullabies. From time immemorial the problems have existed. What can we do with this baby? Where can we put it so that it will be safe? How can we manage to secure a few intervals of peace and tranquillity? How can we still its cries and whines? How can we teach it to walk? In a word, how can we emancipate ourselves from the absorbing tyranny of these sweet babes, our offspring?

The solutions which have been invented by the solicitude, the ingenuity and the instinct of mothers have taken the form of cradles, swaddles, leading strings and gocarts. The variety of these inventions is considerable, and a description of them would form, perhaps, a curious chapter in the history of hygiene and domestic economy.—Harper's Bazar.

A Bit of Jewish Wit.

A striking commentary was recently made by a Russian Jew on the judicial corruption which sustains his country. He passed the law courts in one of the cities of his empire and noticed a fine statue placed in front of the building.

"Whom does this statue represent?" he inquired of a passerby. "Why, Justice, of course!" "How sad," exclaimed the Jew, "that justice should be relegated to the outside of the edifice and be altogether excluded from admission within."—Rabbi Adler in Fortnightly Review.

Why Snakes Are Harmful.

A great many farmers, particularly in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, encourage the presence of snakes in their neighborhood on the theory that they destroy vermin. Naturalists are now agreed they do injury by destroying toads and frogs, those animals being more industrious destroyers of vermin than the snakes.

A Cat That Is Bound to Live.

When he wandered into our boarding house on Lackawanna avenue, he was a nice little tomcat with eyes as innocent as a child's. He used to stand on his hind legs and cry for milk, and as long as he conducted himself he was treated well. He, however, became thievish and insufferably lazy. He used to purloin the cooked beefsteaks, take them down to the cellar and devour them. He used also to get in the way of the girls, who were generally in a hurry at mealtime, and the help became thoroughly sick and tired of him.

One day the dishwasher flung him out of the fourth story back window. He didn't seem to mind it in the least though. He alighted on his paws, and looking up at the girl he winked his right eye, as much as to say, "No, you don't," and then walked leisurely round to the front of the house and came into the kitchen again in all his philosophic calm and just as though nothing unusual had happened.

The next day Thomas was tied up in a bag and deposited somewhere in the wilds near Taylor, but, lo and behold, he returned about three weeks afterward at 2 o'clock in the morning to his old home and woke up the whole block with his piteous appeals for food and shelter. He was given both. It was thought that he might possibly reform, but he didn't. He became still more thievish and lazy.

Then it was determined that he should die by poison. A nice juicy piece of beef was sprinkled with strychnine, and he was locked up in a closet with it for four days. Everybody thought he would be dead sure when the closet was opened, but he wasn't. He just simply purred and clawed the floor for joy when he was released. He had sense enough not to touch the poisoned meat at all. Finally he was locked down in the bottom cellar, the third from the surface of the street, and when seen a few days ago he was as fat and sleek and comfortable as any cat in the city of Scranton. He is living on rats, and the diet seems to agree with him.—Scranton Truth.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 9.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xvi, 19-34—Memory Verses, 30-31—Golden Text, Acts xvi, 31—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

19. "They caught Paul and Silas and drew them into the market place unto the rulers." The previous three verses tell of the healing of a woman who had an evil spirit, by means of which she brought gain to her masters, but being healed, she was of no more use to them, and hence their rage against the apostles. What a devil we have to contend with, to whom a sound mind in a sound body is something distasteful! Let us all the more bless the Lord, who healeth our diseases.

20. "These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city." It is all right to ruin people soul and body, but those who seek the welfare of soul and body are accounted troublers. It grieved Sanballat and Tobiah exceedingly that a man had come to seek the welfare of Israel (Neh. ii, 10). It grieved the Jews that Jesus had come to heal the sick and raise the dead. And I have actually seen ministers grieved that a man should in their town teach people to love the Bible more, and thus be saved from sin and folly.

21. "And teach customs which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans." They did not know that the men they were persecuting were Romans also (verse 37) and loyal citizens. If to honor God is contrary to Roman custom, then Rome is not on God's side.

22. "And the multitude rose up together against them." The whole world lieth in the wicked one (I John v, 19, R. V.). Marvel not if the world hate you (John xv, 18). If the world does not hate us, we cannot be very like our Master, but it was the religious world that hated Him.

23. "And when they had laid many stripes upon them they cast them into prison." This seemed like very poor treatment from the man of Macedonia who said, "Come over and help us," but Paul understood it, having been told at the start that he was to suffer for Jesus' sake (chapter ix, 16) and having already on his first tour had considerable experience of it.

24. "Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison and made their feet fast in the stocks." And it is not at all likely that he used much tenderness in handling them. So with torn and bleeding backs they find themselves well under the power of the enemy. Without friends and without influence they suffer this shameful treatment (I Thess. ii, 2) simply because they had interfered in the unlawful gains. Men have been murdered in our own day for the same cause. The world changes not.

25. "And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises unto God, and the prisoners heard them." Truly they were putting in practice the words of the psalmist, "I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall continually be in my mouth" (Ps. xxxiv, 1). They were filled with the spirit of Daniel and his companions, who went cheerfully to the lion's den and to the fiery furnace for the sake of their God.

26. "And suddenly there was a great earthquake, and every one's bands were loosed." Their songs were heard in heaven as well as on earth, and though they had no influence in the city see the power they had in heaven. A quaking earth, open prison doors and all bands loosed. Surely this is suggestive of coming events and reminds us of His death and resurrection and the accompanying events of earthquake and resurrection of the saints. He came to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound (Isa. lxi, 1).

27. "And the keeper of the prison, awaking out of his sleep, would have killed himself." While the righteous, although in great suffering, were praising God, the ungodly, though perhaps on the verge of eternal torment, were in health and asleep. What a snare to awaken such as it be too late! Then in his blindness, not knowing of the hereafter, the jailer would have rushed madly into it, only to find himself in hopeless despair. Read carefully Luke xvi, 23, 26; Rev. xiv, 9-11; Job xxxvi, 18.

28. "But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." Here is good for evil on the part of Paul in the true spirit of his Master (I Thess. v, 15). He could not rejoice to see the jailer suffer, nor permit him to injure himself, though his own body must have been full of pain. If we endure grief, suffering wrongfully, or if we do well and suffer for it and take it patiently, God is well pleased (I Pet. ii, 19, 20).

29. "Then he called for a light and sprang in and came trembling and fell down before Paul and Silas." How well he knew to whom to go! He had never seen prisoners like these, nor met with such conduct under such treatment, and then had not Paul called out to him that he should do himself no harm? Paul's interest in him and in his welfare wrought upon him by the Spirit of God.

30. "And brought them out and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Whether he had before heard anything of Paul's preaching or had through others received any light on things eternal we are not told. But through a combination of marvelous events he is now powerfully wrought upon for his soul's good and made to see his great danger. See how much God will do to save a soul from death. Read Job xxxiii, 14, 30, and the context and consider the sorrows of Jesus to save us.

31. "And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house." This is the teaching of all Scripture as to the work of salvation. His work is a finished work. It is impossible to add to it or to improve upon it.

32. "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord and to all that were in his house." No doubt they would show him from the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ and that the law cannot give life, but that Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, and that believing means receiving, for he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life (Gal. iii, 21; ii, 16; Rom. x, 4; John i, 12; I John v, 11, 12).

33. "And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes and was baptized, he and all his, straightway." Here is a public confession of their faith in Christ, or, perhaps more correctly, a formal confession, and also fruits meet for repentance. Thus faith in Christ, or, as in John i, 12, "receiving Christ," makes sinners into children of God, and the love of Christ constrains to good works.

34. "And when he had brought them into his house he set meat before them and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." In verse 15 we saw Lydia's household all saved and now another. Behold the Spirit of God at work, but do not forget the sore trials of the agents by whom the Spirit wrought. How much are you willing to endure for Christ's sake if He will only use you for the salvation of souls?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 9. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—God's call to us. II Tim. i, 9-12; Acts xvi, 10.

God's call to us, as illustrated by our topical references, is twofold. It is, first, a personal call to us to accept the benefit of salvation through Christ, and, secondly, a call to spread the gospel among all men. The first of these calls is set forth by Paul to Timothy in II Tim. i, 9-12. The second is illustrated by the vision in which Paul himself was divinely called to carry the gospel of Christ from Asia to Europe.

1. The call to partake in the kingdom of God (II Tim. i, 9-12). In the ninth verse of this passage Paul speaks of God as having saved us and "called us with a holy calling." The Greek word here translated "called" in the New Testament constantly refers to the call to salvation, to partake in the kingdom of God, which call is made to us outwardly through the word and inwardly by the influence of the Spirit working through the word. This call comes to all who hear the gospel. Paul does not mean to limit it to Timothy and himself. It embraces all Christians. It includes all men wherever the sound of the gospel is heard. This is a direct personal call. It appeals to each one individually. To answer it may mean suffering and persecution, as in Paul's case, but like him these things should not deter us from heeding the call, since we also can say, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

2. The call to spread the gospel of Christ (Acts xvi, 10). Paul has just had a vision in which a man from Macedonia in Europe has called him to leave Troas and come and preach to them. In some way he recognizes the nationality of the man. The effect of the vision was, as Luke says, that "immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us to preach the gospel unto them." Paul and his three friends, Silas, Luke and Timothy, obeyed this vision. Four men set out to preach the gospel to Europe! And why? Simply because they saw the hand of God in the vision. It was no dream of man, but God was calling them, and immediately they obeyed. God still calls His people to carry and send the gospel to the heathen worlds. They do not realize their condition and cry to us, but God does appeal to us and urge us to send the light where there is now nothing but darkness. Since it is God who calls us to mission work, all should obey the call.

Bible References—Ps. xl, 49; Isa. ix, 2; iii, 7; Jer. xxxv, 15; Math. xi, 28; xx, 16; Luke iv, 18; Acts xiii, 1-3; Rom. x, 13-15; Eph. iii, 8-9; Gal. ii, 9; I Tim. 8, 5-7; I Thess. iv, 7; Heb. iii, 1-2; Rev. xxii, 17.

The Lips In Winning Souls.

The successful soul winner must have a special quality in his speech, a power of spiritual impression that no elocutionist or rhetorician can teach. Jesus had it. While there was probably nothing specially impressive in His personal appearance it seems that when He spoke there was that which people noticed at once, and at which they marveled (Luke iv, 22; John vii, 46). A verse of an old song which was not understood until Jesus came well describes it. "Grace is poured into thy lips" (Ps. xlv, 2). The soul winner that has grace in his lips is much like his Master.

He will need the grace of a gentle speech. It is a delicate matter to unveil faults and sins. Our sins are our own. They bear our personality stamped upon them. If we touch a person in his fault or sin, we touch him in his sense of individual freedom. We seem to arrest him. We do it, however, in order to free and heal him. It must therefore be done gently, as a shepherd tenderly and firmly puts his hands on a lamb in a thorn bush, parting the branches carefully lest he should wound and tear afresh. Grace in our lips will cleanse from anger, bitterness, impatience, latent contempt and from a tone of biting criticism.—Rev. S. E. Cook in Golden Rule.

Exercises For Junior Endeavorers.

"Word hunts" are delightful exercises for the juniors. Ask them to see how many passages they can find with the word "faith" in them, for instance. Have them copy out the passages neatly in small notebooks and bring them to the meeting. Let each one report how many he has found and call upon the one having the largest number to read his list. The lists may then be compared and completed. A similar exercise, but one that is of special value, is a search for the names and titles which are applied to Jesus. This exercise, as used recently in a band of young girls, was the means of awakening in them a new interest in Bible study among them and especially teaching them to appreciate somewhat the beauties of the poetical and metaphorical description of Christ's character and reign.—Young People's Standard.

Our Mission.

Christ for the world, we sing;
The world to Christ we bring
With one accord,
With us the work to share,
With us reproach to dare,
With us the cross to bear,
For Christ our Lord.

Christ for the world, we sing;
The world to Christ we bring
With joyful song.
The newborn souls, whose days
Reclaimed from error's ways,
Inspired with hope and praise,
To Christ belong.

The first savings bank was instituted at Berne in Switzerland in 1787. It was intended for servants only. In 1792 another was opened at Basel for persons of any class.

The Value of a Little Thing.

In a little volume of lectures by Henry Irving, just published, is a story which illustrates the actor's motto, "While trifles make perfection perfection is no trifle." "This lesson was enjoined on me when I was a very young man," he says, "by that remarkable actress, Charlotte Cushman. I remember that when she played Meg Merrilies I was cast for Henry Bertram. It was my duty to give Meg Merrilies a piece of money, and I did it after the traditional fashion of handing her a large purse full of coin of the realm, in the shape of broken crockery, which was generally used in financial transactions on the stage. But after the play Miss Cushman said to me: 'Instead of giving me that purse, don't you think it would have been much more natural if you had taken a number of coins from your pocket and given me the smallest? That is the way one gives alms to a beggar, and it would have added to the realism of the scene.' I have never forgotten that lesson."

Almost Anybody Can Do This.

A young woman who is altogether independent, but who has the very small income of $800 a year, suddenly resolved last fall to go abroad for the first time. She engaged a second class passage on a fast steamer and paid $35, beside $5 to the steward, for a large room and most excellent fare. Her companions on the vessel were few and very agreeable people, gentle folks like herself. She went directly to Torquay, where she found board for $5 a week and where she spent the winter, going up to London toward spring and making a fortnight's trip to Paris with a little Frenchwoman. The latter excursion cost her exactly $30. She arrived home in the middle of May, not having overdrawn her income, delighted with her eight months in Europe and determined to do the whole thing over again.—Philadelphia Press.

[illegible] ACTION.

[illegible] of the New York chamber [illegible] Thursday in passing resolutions [illegible] congress to immediately repeal [illegible] purchasing clause of the Sherman [illegible] appoint a commission to [illegible] commercial bodies representing [illegible] interests, and to devise [illegible] the coinage and currency [illegible] other countries, to report [illegible] plan for a safe and [illegible] the regular session of congress [illegible] and important movement [illegible] is urging like action [illegible] of commerce and boards [illegible]

[illegible] the honor of leading the [illegible] chamber of commerce in this [illegible] after the agitation for the [illegible] silver purchasing clause of [illegible] silver bill, the Norwich board [illegible] its vigor and influence to a [illegible] to congress which was signed [illegible] business men of "the Rose [illegible] regardless of party, to [illegible] change in the law at the [illegible]

[illegible] meeting of the Norwich [illegible] at the suggestion of H. H. [illegible] memorial was approved [illegible] to call an extra session [illegible] for the purpose of considering [illegible] financial condition of the [illegible] repealing the offensive clause [illegible] law. This the president [illegible] were instructed to sign and [illegible] in the name of the [illegible]

[illegible] board of trade is taking a [illegible] position, which it will [illegible] in the consciousness that it [illegible] duty before the June [illegible]

[illegible] CHOLERA CENTER.

[illegible] city of the Mohammedans, [illegible] became the plague center of [illegible] the close of June this Arabian [illegible] deaths from cholera [illegible] day. Cholera or no cholera, [illegible] make their pilgrimages to this [illegible] and during the pilgrimage [illegible] exceed the population. [illegible] to have missed seeing [illegible] to the El Haram and [illegible] well is to have lost [illegible] opportunity a Moslem can [illegible]

[illegible] and dirty city a [illegible] devout pilgrims will go [illegible] action is taken by [illegible] powers to stop them; and as [illegible] has authority in the [illegible] in case of war, the [illegible] alarming.

[illegible] drinks holy water, which [illegible] with drainage poisons, at [illegible] and takes away a flask, and [illegible] are imposed the deaths [illegible] thousands daily, but [illegible] may be spread all over Europe.

[illegible] is a matter of international concern [illegible] the welfare of the human race [illegible] that the pilgrims should be prevented [illegible] adding their numbers to that [illegible] city.

[illegible] UNIFORM CURRENCY IMPERATIVE.

[illegible] is no subject in which the whole [illegible] is more intensely interested than [illegible] currency question; and so far as the [illegible] majority of business men are concerned [illegible] a fixed unit of value and stable [illegible] are demanded.

[illegible] number of The Review of [illegible] commenting upon the proposed [illegible] reform of the democratic party, [illegible] "To repeal the ten per cent. tax [illegible] state bank notes would mean that [illegible] Kansas, California, North Dakota, [illegible] and all the other states would be in [illegible] to authorize local banking institutions [illegible] to flood the country with paper [illegible] which could have no certainty of [illegible] safety and value.

"[illegible] Dwiggins might establish a [illegible] of local banks on unsound principles [illegible] and issue paper money which, [illegible] with the general volume of the [illegible] currency, would be worthless in [illegible] hands of the last holders on the failure [illegible] the banks.

"It is now asserted in some quarters [illegible] congress will refuse to repeal the [illegible] silver purchase act unless that [illegible] be accompanied by the resurrection [illegible] the still more pernicious system of [illegible] paper money that was buried [illegible] years ago. Whatever may or may [illegible] every man or woman who earns wages or has a fixed money income, should insist absolutely upon a national, uniform currency, with the United States government at the back of every dollar in circulation."

THE RESULT OF PROTECTION.

That the republican policy of protection builds up great industries the most eminent English free traders admit; and that, too, for the final benefit of the people, as the prices are as low and often lower than the prices in England. The paper, plate-glass, steel, thread and silk industries of this country which give employment to hundreds of thousands of people, could not have been established but for the fostering care of the government.

The wool industry under protection has flourished, and in an evil hour congress heard to these free wool theorists ten years ago and by a change of legislation nearly wrecked sheep-raising in this country. The ruinous effect was checked by a return to the former protective measures, and for several years the sheep on the western plains have been increasing.

Referring to the industry and its present dangers the American Economist says: "Our wool and woolen duties have built up a wool-growing industry in which a million flockmasters have invested over $100,000,000 in sheep, and an equal sum in barns and fixtures, and are paying, besides their own labor, some $24,000,000 in yearly wages four times higher than the pittance of the Australian herdsman, while our 3,000 woolen mills, with $290,000,000 invested, pay $78,000,000 yearly in wages, the highest in the world for like labor, and furnish woolen goods to the people lower in price than ever—the medium woolens, which make five-sixths of the people's wear, selling in clothing at prices very near, if not quite, the same as in England."

Shall these enormous investments of over $800,000,000 be ruined? None are harmed or wronged, and many are greatly helped by them. They serve the common good.

Free wool will give prices ruinously fluctuating and dependent on foreign markets.

Protection will, as it has, shield us from ruinous fluctuations, keep prices steadier, higher on the average for a time, yet such that the people can, as they have, buy the clothes, the final products of these great home industries, at reasonable rates. Let protection be continued and we shall more and more control our own markets and the people will be the gainers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

On the Fourth of July the receipts at the World's fair were $137,456.08. On Independence day the people walked up and laid down over three tons of coin. That is big money, but this is a big country.

The silver-bullion men refuse to accept present market quotations for silver and demand the old price. The government recognizes the latest market price and declines to purchase on fictitious values. This deadlock saves the Sherman bill from immediately adding to the government's burden of bullion.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

[illegible]

Watertown, a little suburb of Waterbury, which has two brass bands, is trying to organize a third. The patent eardrum [illegible] find a good field to work in Watertown.—[Ansonia Sentinel.

Where's Labor Day?

An Amusing Exit.

Claus Spreckels' exit from Honolulu was comical. This [illegible] and bloated speculator, representing a type of citizenship which would degrade even a half civilized nation, was frightened away by a sign fastened to his gate by some practical joker.—[Worcester Spy.

It's no Life Preserver.

The further the democratic party gets away from the Chicago platform the better its chances will be for avoiding the breakers which lie before it.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Keep Cool!

Some people seem to be working themselves up to an unbecoming pitch of excitement and getting unnecessarily hot. For their own good we suggest that they calm themselves and shut off threats against the United States government and the civilized world until they find out whether the United States government or the civilized world has done anything to them to get mad about. Silver coin is legal tender and on a parity with gold. There has been no change in that regard since 1890. The government has been buying, and is still buying, silver bullion at market rates and issuing its notes therefor. Not even the owners of silver mines, who are under the strange infatuation that the most important function of government is to take their product off their hands at prices which will give them handsome profits, have any reason as yet to complain of anything that the government has done or left undone.—[New York Tribune.

Stop Buying Silver.

Repeal the first section of the silver [illegible] Stop buying silver. That is what the national lawmakers are called to Washington for next month.—[New York Herald.

Standing Shoulder to Shoulder.

The Republican State league delegates go home greatly strengthened in the principles enunciated in the national platform of the republican party, deducting not one jot or tittle. Every man is determined to stand shoulder to shoulder on these lines in 1896.—[Daily Saratogian.

DR. YOUNG THE YOUNGEST.

Degree of Doctor of Pedagogy Conferred Upon a Former Eastern Connecticut Teacher.

The following item from The Hackensack (N. J.) Republican of June 29, will be of interest to teachers and others in Eastern Connecticut. "At the commencement of the University of the city of New York the degree of doctor of pedagogy was conferred upon several well-known teachers, among them being Frank A. Young, vice-principal of Washington public high school, Hackensack. The New York School Journal says: 'All of these persons are active and successful teachers, and have been studying higher pedagogy for the purpose of perfecting themselves in their professional work. This degree is the highest that can be obtained in education.' New York was the first university to establish a department of pedagogy on the same plane as the law and medical departments and to confer professional degrees upon teachers. Mr. Young's class was the third graduated, and he is the first teacher from Bergen county to receive the above degree and is probably the youngest person who holds it."

Mr. Young, who was at one time principal of the First district schools in Willimantic, will enter upon his third year's work in Hackensack. The Washington high school holds high rank in New Jersey, and was awarded the honor of representing the mathematics of that state at the World's fair by the state superintendent after an inspection of the educational exhibits made in twenty-one counties.

NO "LONGEVITY" PAY.

An Order Issued of Interest to Officers of the C. N. G.

Longevity pay or service increase pay to officers of the National guard under the new law will not be paid and muster pay-rolls will be made up to include only pay proper, i. e., the same pay as officers of the regular army receive, plus the allowance to mounted officers of $6 per day for horse. This conclusion is understood to be a final decision by the adjutant-general, which was promulgated in a circular issued from the adjutant-general's office, which reads as follows:

Upon a careful examination of the militia law recently passed by the general assembly, this office decides that longevity pay for officers of the Connecticut National guard is not authorized under the law, therefore all the pay columns and foot notes on the first page of the circular issued from this office under date of June 19, 1893, are hereby annulled and will be disregarded in the making up of the muster pay rolls, with the exception of the first two columns under the heading "for first five years," which alone will remain in full force and effect.

This decision will necessitate re-writing the muster pay-rolls sent in lately as pay for officers who attended the recent meetings for the election of an additional major in each regiment which were made out in accordance with the pay circular issued by the adjutant-general June 19.

The per diem pay of officers of the National Guard and also of the governor's staff under the old and new laws, including allowance for horse to mounted officers, is as follows:

	New law.	Old law.
Brigadier general	$26.07	[illegible]
Colonel	14.85	[illegible]

The confidence of the public in SOZODONT, as a preserver and beautifier of the teeth. They believe in the absolute wholesomeness of its fragrant vegetable materials. Hence, its ever increasing popularity.

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

Big Dinners.

Every day in this city thousands of people eat too much at dinner, and, in consequence, suffer from sour stomach, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc. If these will take just one of Carter's Little Liver Pills immediately after eating, they will be surprised by the entire absence of those unpleasant feelings which daily distress them, and may continue to their improper course of eating big dinners without fear. Only one little pill, remember.

In old times it seemed to be thought that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

Smart weed and Belladonna, combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters, make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

Castoria.

Castoria cures Colic, Constipation;
Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation;
Gives healthy sleep; also aids digestion;
Without narcotic stupefaction.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A soft, fair skin is the result of pure blood and a healthy liver, to secure which, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine. Ladies who rely upon cosmetics to beautify their complexions, should make a note of this, bearing in mind that they can't improve upon nature.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Saved Her Sight

"My little girl Hand two years ago had the grip, leaving her with inflamed eyes, so bad that for seven months we had to bandage them and keep her in a dark room. The family physician and an oculist said the sight of one eye was destroyed and she might lose the other. She suffered intense pain, and when light was admitted to the room would cry as if burned with a hot iron. We began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, and to our surprise her eyes began to improve rapidly. The sight

APOSTROPHE OF TIME.

O spirit stern of time, in thy unceasing flight,
How fall the works and monuments of earthly might!
Beneath thy rude hand all pleasures flee away
And happy yesterday turns dull today!
The sweetest joy becomes the saddest sorrow
In contemplation of the stern tomorrow.
Oh, stay awhile and help me banish worry.
In other words, don't be in such a hurry.
An instant linger—tarry, please! You won't?
Well, then, go chase yourself! Begone! Avaunt!

Drunk Law Condemned.

BOSTON, July 7.—The amended act relating to the punishment of drunkenness is pronounced by the magistrates of the municipal courts a delusion and a snare, and this opinion is found to be general. The judges of the lower tribunals of justice are outspoken in their condemnation of the measure, and the denunciation of the action of the last legislature is seconded by the police authorities and others related to the judiciary.

Cherokee Strip Bonds Sold.

GIBSON, I. T., July 7.—Word has been received that the trade for the Cherokee strip bonds has been consummated, and that one-quarter of the whole amount, with accrued interest, has already been paid to the assistant treasurer of the United States at St. Louis, the balance to be paid in 30, 60 and 90 days' time, dating from July 1. It is not stated who are the purchasers.

Cash Makes Them Happy.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 7.—The members of the People's Five Year Benefit Order in this city have been gladdened by the receipt of between $50,000 and $60,000 from the receivers. As there are about 100 members here this is an average of $50 apiece. This is a better percentage than that paid by any other short term endowment order doing business in Manchester.

DEATH IN ITS PATH.

Dreadful Cyclone Wipes Out Town of Pomeroy.

ONE HUNDRED VICTIMS ARE DEAD.

Two Hundred More Injured and Many Die —Widespread Devastation.

FORT DODGE, Ia., July 7.—Pomeroy, a town of 930 inhabitants in Calhoun county, was practically wiped out last evening by a cyclone. Between 50 and 100 persons were killed and nearly 200 were injured, many of whom will die.

The utmost confusion followed the advent of the storm and it was several hours before the condition of affairs was known.

As soon as the true state of affairs was learned relief trains over the Illinois Central were sent out with a corps of physicians, tents and provisions.

The town was in total darkness, and the streets were filled with the wrecks of homes and business houses.

The scenes were appalling as men with lanterns went about the debris. In some instances entire families were wiped out, the mangled remains being found in the ruins of their homes.

The cries of the injured were heartrending, and the general confusion was increased by the

Wailing of the Survivors, who were separated from friends or who had relatives in the ruins.

The work of rescue was slow and the train load of help has made little headway.

The south half of the town was razed. There was no place to care for the injured, and a church which was just outside the track of the storm was turned into a hospital.

Here the surgeons worked by the aid of lanterns and lamps. Those with broken bones were stretched upon the long pews, while others who needed surgical attention in less severe injuries, were compelled to stand or lie upon the floor to await their turn.

The dead were laid upon the ground in a vacant lot at the edge of the devastated district. Through the narrow lanes left between the dead bodies the survivors passed looking for lost ones.

In the confusion it was impossible to secure a list of the fatalities. All telegraph communication was cut off and trains could only be run to the edge of the town.

The storm broke out about 7 o'clock. All day long the clouds were scurrying across the sky. An occasional shower would be followed by a hot burst of sunshine.

Just before dark great banks of black clouds massed in the west and southwest.

Just before 7 o'clock the two threatening piles moved toward one another and then joined. The clouds took on a green tint which was pierced with the sun's rays for a moment.

Then Darkness Set In Rapidly.

Those who were watching the phenomenon recognized it as a cyclone and gave the alarm. Many sought shelter in cellars, and others mounted horses to flee from the path of the [illegible] destruction.

There was a dash of hail, a blinding flash of lightning and a deafening peal of thunder. Men and women ran wildly about the streets shouting and gesticulating.

The cyclone struck the town at the southwest, among the outlying houses in the outskirts. Roofs and shingles and sides of buildings were wrenched loose and were thrown to one side.

On to the more densely populated district the monster of destruction swept, levelling all before it and leaving in its wake a cloud of splinters and wrecked homes, death and demoralization.

FIVE FAMILIES BLOWN AWAY.

Four Churches Wrecked and Residences Reduced to Splinters.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., July 7.—A telegram from Fonda states that five entire families were blown away at Alta, by the cyclone yesterday morning, but a full list of the fatalities cannot be had.

D. T. Miller is known to have been killed. Mrs. Gordon was killed instantly by the wreck of her house, and nothing can be found of the family of seven.

No trace can be found of Ed Seagrave and family of five. They are supposed to be dead. Sam Hersham, wife and two children are missing. All were blown away, and are thought to be dead.

Trains arriving from the east on the Illinois Central came into Sioux City last night with all the glass in the cars broken. Trainmen say they ran through a severe hail storm, but encountered no great wind.

At Quimby, a little town east of Cherokee, many houses are reported wrecked, and at least two persons are known to have been killed. When news can be had from the country it is expected that the loss will be found to have been very great, as the region through which the cyclone passed is thickly populated.

A Storm Lake, Ia., special to The Journal says a cyclone reached that place between 5 and 6 o'clock last evening. Four churches were wrecked and a number of residences literally reduced to splinters. Fires were started in three localities by lightning. The storm center appeared to pass four miles west of the town, where for many miles nothing was left standing.

Several lives were lost. Jacob Breecher, a farmer, was struck by a flying timber and instantly killed. His 8-year-old daughter was also killed, and his wife and four children dangerously hurt. Charles Lutman, another farmer, is reported dead. Thomas Wall and his child had their legs broken, and his wife was fatally injured. Others in the same neighborhood reported dead are: Joseph Stitz, Thomas Johnson and Henry Straub. An old man named W. R. Clemons and his wife are severely injured.

FOURTEEN WERE KILLED.

Cherokee Reports Them With $100,000 Damage to Property.

CHEROKEE, Ia., July 7.—Late reports of the cyclone are that 14 persons were killed, and that damage to property to the extent of $100,000 was done. Everything is confusion, and wires are down in every direction. The cyclone cut a swath from one to three miles wide.

It is impossible at this hour to get the names of any of the dead. Many injured have been brought to Cherokee and placed under the care of physicians.

Houses, barns and fences were strewn over the valley for miles. Hundreds of acres of crops are utterly ruined, and probably 200 people in the farming community are wholly homeless. The course of the tornado was from west to east, but how far east it extended cannot be learned now.

MOST DISASTROUS STORM.

Houses and Barns Blown Down—Trees Torn Up by the Roots.

ROGERS, Neb., July 7.—A destructive cyclone passed over the central part of this county Wednesday evening. The storm struck the house of Chris Miller about 6 o'clock, while the family was at supper, and all were injured except the youngest child.

Mr. Miller had three ribs broken and was injured internally. East and west of this place farms, houses and windmills were blown down and fruit trees torn out by the roots.

It was the most disastrous storm that ever visited this county.

ATROCIOUS ASSAULT.

Young Woman Dragged Into a Doorway by Five Drunken Ruffians.

BOSTON, July 7.—It was a remarkable story of a daring and atrocious assault that Miss Jennie Cushing of Cambridge told Captain Watts of station 2 yesterday afternoon. Its like has probably never been known in the history of Boston.

The young woman was pulled into a hallway on Cambridge street shortly after the noon hour yesterday by five drunken men, assaulted and left lying on the floor bruised and exhausted, and hardly able to make her way to her room and then to the station house.

Her story was so remarkable that, notwithstanding her genteel appearance and ladylike manner, as well as the witnesses she had to her good character, Captain Watts could not believe what she had told until he had made a thorough investigation of the case and had satisfied himself beyond all doubt that the girl's story was true.

Three men are now under arrest at station 2 charged with the crime, one as principal and the others as accomplices.

The name of the man accused of being the principal is Frank Kelleher. He is 23 years of age and resides at 1 Lilac court, Cambridge.

The others are Charles H. Porter of 98 Cambridge street, Boston, the place where the assault was committed, and John F. Burke of Oak Grove, Malden.

It is expected that the other two men will be under arrest before tomorrow morning.

HARD AT WORK.

Christian Endeavor Delegates Hold Five Meetings at Once.

MONTREAL, July 7.—There were five prayer meetings in five churches at 6:30 this morning, conducted on behalf of the Christian Endeavor delegates. At 10 o'clock a meeting was held at Drill Hall, the subject of discussion being "The Four Essentials of a Christian Endeavor Society."

The speakers were Herbert L. Gale of Worcester, Mass., on "The Pledge;" Rev. R. K. Young of New Britain, Conn., on "The Consecration Meeting;" R. W. Dillon of Toronto, on "Christian Endeavor Fellowship," and Rev. Kerr B. Tupper of Denver, on "The Christian Endeavor Society a Typical Church Institution."

Rev. J. A. Rondthaler of Indianapolis also conducted a free parliament on "The Committee Work." An evangelistic meeting in the tent was addressed by Rev. B. Fay Mills and Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelists.

METAL ALL GONE.

Iron Mountain Mine Worked Out and Work Suspended.

FARMINGTON, Mo., July 7.—Work at Iron Mountain, which has been going on continuously for nearly 50 years, has been virtually suspended. For a long time it was generally supposed that the deposit of ore was practically inexhaustible, but the vein is now worked out.

When the expectations of the owners was at the highest point the property was valued at $6,000,000, and the owners at one time refused to sell at those figures. The final wind up, coming as it does at a time of general depression, will cause much loss and suffering.

Under the Lyford Act.

BOSTON, July 7.—The Bay State Gas company this forenoon filed in the supreme judicial court a petition asking for the appointment of three commissioners to determine the value of the property of the company as provided for by the Lyford bill. William G. Russell and W. E. L. Dillaway are counsel for the company. The petition sets out the material part of the Lyford bill and has attached to the papers a copy of the famous $5,000,000 note. Judge Barker issued an order of notice returnable July 21.

Fast Line Across the Atlantic.

OTTAWA, July 7.—In connection with the proposed fast line across the Atlantic between England and Canada, Adolphe Caron, postmaster general, who has just returned from Europe, says that the British postoffice authorities consider the establishment of such a line really necessary in order to complete the great highway between England and the extreme east, China and Japan, and that without a fast line across the Atlantic a full advantage of the fast service on the Pacific would not be obtained.

Married the Coachman.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 7.—Aristocratic New Rochelle is stirred up over the reported marriage of Miss Nellie Taft and her man Weiman. Miss Taft is the daughter of the most prominent physician in the village, and has been something of a leader in fashionable circles. Weiman is a Swede, tall and rather awkward. He was employed by Dr. Taft as coachman. He had been in the doctor's employ about two years.

Swallowed False Teeth.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., July 7.—While Miss Bertha Reddington, who is employed in the town clerk's office, was asleep early yesterday morning, she was awakened by a choking sensation. It was soon discovered that she had swallowed three false teeth on a large plate. Surgeons removed them.

Agricultural Depression.

LONDON, July 7.—In the house of commons, last evening, Mr. Gladstone announced the appointment of a royal commission to inquire into the causes of the present agricultural depression, and to report means to improve the condition of affairs in that industry.

The Whillden; Not the Weldon.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., July 7.—The schooner towed to Woods Hall yesterday by the steamer Right Arm, with foremast gone, was the R. G. Whillden; not the W. H. Weldon, as was previously reported.

Shooting Bonilla's Partisans.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The Herald's correspondent in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, telegraphs that 19 prominent partisans of Bonilla were shot in that city yesterday morning under orders from President Vasquez. Many others who are in prison suspected of complicity in Bonilla's schemes fear they will meet a similar fate.

Held For Grand Jury.

PROVIDENCE, July 7.—Francisco Terelli was tried for an assault upon Guiseppe Dinardo, in the district court today. He was charged with highway robbery, but this was not sustained. The accused was bound over to the grand jury.

Officers Charged With Larceny.

NASHUA, N. H., July 7.—At a stormy meeting of the Casino club, President Spellman and Treasurer Brudenell were expelled on the charge of larceny from the [illegible].

FIGHTING PARSON.

Suspends Prayer to Thrash the Town Bully.

THEN THE MEETING GOES ON.

"The Terror" Was Singing Ta-ra-ra-Boom-de-ay in Middle Aisle.

HICKSVILLE, L. I., July 6.—Jericho, a little Quaker settlement near this place, has a fighting parson, who has just distinguished himself by walloping the town bully in a manner that has won the admiration of the entire community.

The minister is Rev. W. J. Holt, a stalwart and muscular young man, who recently took charge of the Baptist Church in the village. The bully is Charles Seaman, a burly young fellow, whose lawless exploits have earned for him the title of "The Terror." His special delight seems to be interrupting church services.

He went into the prayer-meeting at Parson Holt's church and began

Singing Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay, with double-shuffle accompaniment in the middle aisle. He had threatened to do the parson if the latter interfered with his amusement.

Mr. Holt was in the midst of his prayer at the time, but he suspended the religious exercises temporarily and came down from the pulpit to tackle the intruder. Seaman saw him coming and noticing that the 6-foot parson had blood in his eye, his courage and bravado deserted him and he turned and made for the door.

The parson was too quick for him, however, for he had the "Terror" by the nape of the neck before he had gone half a dozen steps, and with a vigorous application of sole leather he soon had Seaman outside the door and was making the "Terror" bite the dust in the road.

After that service was resumed, but just as the benediction was being pronounced Seaman returned and had a lively scrap with Deacon Root at the door.

Mr. Holt heard the noise and immediately started to the assistance of the deacon,

Prepared to Do Up the "Terror"

a second time. The latter saw the parson coming, however, and took to his heels, with the minister after him.

They sprinted across a 10-acre lot and over several fences, but the "Terror" proved to be a better man with his legs than the parson and succeeded in reaching the woods before his pursuer could catch up with him.

The constable at Mineola has a warrant for Seaman's arrest, but he has not shown himself in Jericho since his encounter with the parson.

THE COTTON CROP.

Discouraging Showing For This Year's Production of the Staple.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The World, this morning prints reports by telegraph from nearly 800 of its correspondents in the south and southwest, upon the condition on July 5, of the cotton crop in their respective localities.

These reports, which cover thoroughly the whole cotton raising section of the United States, make a very discouraging showing for this year's crop of that staple.

It is already certain that the crop has been damaged by unfavorable weather during the past five weeks; that it has got a poor start; is being injured by insects and disease, and cannot amount to an average yield. More serious still is the prospect that further adverse weather, which may fairly be expected at this season, catching the belated crop in its present condition, will reduce the yield still further.

A few sections, as in Florida, and Louisiana, seem to have been exempt from the fate that has overtaken the cotton territory generally, but they are not extensive enough to make any material difference in the crop as a whole.

FLOATING BOTTOM UP.

Unknown Yacht Found by the Juanita in Gravesend Bay.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The crew of the yacht Juanita of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, while cruising in Gravesend bay, met [illegible] a cabin sloop yacht, 30 feet long, floating bottom up. There were no bodies found, but there was in the cabin a large quantity of wearing apparel and enough fishing tackle for a dozen persons. There was nothing about the boat which would give a clew to the identity of owner or crew.

Two fishermen say they saw the boat on July 4, having on board about 10 people. Last night they found a man's hat and a woman's parasol in the bay.

Found Dead in a Shanty.

BOSTON, July 7.—Michael Hayes, 50 years old, was found dead in a shanty at 14 Orleans street, East Boston, at 7 o'clock this morning. Death is thought to have been caused by an over indulgence in alcoholic stimulants. Last night he was badly intoxicated and was put in the shanty and the door locked by a friend. This morning when the door was opened Hayes was found to be dead. The medical examiner will hold an autopsy.

Train Robbers Overpowered.

MONTREAL, July 7.—A report reached here last night from St. Anne's, a small station about 20 miles west of Montreal, that an immigrant train on its way to Montreal with 300 immigrants on board, was held up by five masked men, who attempted to rob the baggage car. They were overpowered by train hands and placed in custody.

Failed to Beat Her Record.

QUEENSTOWN, July 7.—The Cunard line steamer Campania, from New York, arrived here at 3:40 this morning. The time of her passage was 5 days, 19 hours and 7 minutes, which does not equal her record for the eastern passage, she having previously made the voyage in 5 days, 17 hours and [illegible].

Zimmerman and Sanger Enter.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., June 7.—Zimmerman and Sanger today entered in the races of the Rockville Wheel club to be held July 19. It is expected that they will here meet for the first time in a race. Sanger holds the world's competition mile record.

The Dory Capsized.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., July 7.—Schooner Edward A. Perkins, from Grand bank, reports the loss of Oscar Andrews, a member of the crew, by the capsizing of a dory.

Work Versus Pleasure.

Great Summer Clearance Sale!

THIS ⁘ MORNING

Reid & Hughes will inaugurate a clearance sale which will be of great importance to buyers of Dry and Fancy Goods. A close scrutiny of the items and prices will convince you that this is no ordinary sale. It will last for one week and will be memorable as a sale where the most desirable and seasonable merchandise is offered at prices heretofore unknown in the trade. The reason why is this: The season has been a backward one, the weather most of the time unfavorable for business, and as a result we find ourselves with a much heavier stock than usual at this time of the year. We propose to reduce this stock, to do it now and in a manner which the public never fails to appreciate, because they well know that when we advertise low prices we mean what we say. We intend, then, to make this sale worthy of our past successes, worthy of our present professions and worthy of the enlightened interests of every lady in Norwich and vicinity. Ladies can hardly afford to miss visiting the Boston store while this sale is in progress; it would be an injustice to themselves to stay away, because, as a glance at the prices quoted will show, it is many a day since such bargains were within reach of the purchasing public. Keep in mind that Saturday morning, July 8, the sale will begin, and that those who take early advantage of the opportunity are exercising the best judgment.

CITY NEWS.

Mrs. Nora Reardon has taken a prominent position at Bushy Point.

The family of Mr. Charles D. Noyes is at Crescent beach for the month of July.

Tomorrow the steamer Ella will make an excursion to Watch Hill, leaving at 9 a. m.

Miss Alice C. Lathrop of Asylum street is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. A. Fargo of Woodstock.

The steamer Ella makes her regular excursion to Watch Hill tomorrow, leaving the city at 9 a. m.

The wife and little daughter of City Clerk Archibald S. Spalding have been visiting relatives in Plainfield.

Arnold & Hiscox began the work of remodeling the third story of the Spear building on Main street, Friday.

Manager Stannard of the Telephone exchange, who was injured on the Fourth by the explosion of a cannon, was able to move about Friday.

Rails for the new electric extension are being unloaded on the railroad wharf, and from that point are carted for distribution along Laurel Hill avenue.

The Wesleyan base ball team are quartered at Hotel Ozark, southeast corner Washington avenue and 38th street, Chicago, and are enjoying life hugely.

The Watch Hill hotels are now accommodating nearly four hundred guests. The prospect was never more encouraging for a good season there than it is this year.

"Wild Belle," a Westerly horse, is credited with having made twenty miles, on the road, with a carriage and two occupants, in 1 hour and 44 minutes, recently.

The Women's Christian Temperance union of Westerly will make an excursion by the steamer Martha to this city July 11. Norwich seems to be a favorite resort of Westerly people.

The Loyal Temperance legion will hold its last meeting for the term at 105 Water street this afternoon at 3 o'clock. All the friends of juvenile temperance work are invited to be present.

The first excursion of the season to Boston, Nantasket beach, etc., by the New York & New England railroad will occur on Tuesday next. The train will leave union station at 8 a. m.

The West Springfield correspondent of the Springfield Union notes that the marriage intention of Fred D. Lamb of Norwich and Nellie Sullivan of Mittineague was recorded at the town clerk's office Thursday.

The Rev. J. H. Carter, D. D., of Boston, Mass., president of the New England Colored Baptist conference, will deliver the sermon at the installation of the Rev. Nathaniel A. Marriot as pastor of the Mount Calvary church, July 14.

The Moosup Journal, reporting the game of ball in which the Moosup nine defeated the Clippers, says: "Our boys say that the Clippers are a very gentlemanly set of fellows, both on and off the diamond!" New London, please take notice!

The fact that the C. B. [illegible] Manufacturing company have disposed of land hitherto reputed to have been reserved for possible extension, lent plausibility to the rumor that the establishment intended removal from the city. Representatives of the company, however, deny any such contemplated move.

The total number of fourth-class postmasters appointed Friday were ninety-eight, of which thirty-six were to fill vacancies caused by resignations and death. Among the appointments were the following from Connecticut: L. G. Williams, Mansfield; W. A. Coggeshall, Uncasville; H. C. Waldo, Waukegan.

James McEvoy, assistant superintendent of the Mutual Life Insurance company, who is soon to leave the city, was presented with a handsome gold headed cane by the members of the St. Mary's T. A. and B. society. The stick is on exhibition in the window of Steiner's pharmacy.

The report of the state board of education just issued gives the number of schools in twenty-one towns, comprising New London county, as 214, and the number of school districts as 210. The departments number 371 and the number of sittings 16,058. The average length of the school year is 171.26 days. The value of the buildings and sites is $631,073.

The New London Day sees danger in the fact that the schooner Machias, sunk in collision with steamer New Hampshire Monday night, lies about half way between Bartlett's Reef lightship and Cornfield light, directly in the path of the sound steamers. The top of her masts are out of water and she is a great danger to vessels, especially in thick weather.

The clerk of the superior court Friday received from Judge Hall the following judgments of cases tried at the May session of the superior court. In the case of Deane et al., vs. Charles B. Chapman in favor of the defendant. In the case of Tuckie against Newbury, judgment for the plaintiff, with $30 and costs. The plaintiff was awarded $140 and costs in the Leonard vs. Stoll case.

Deacon Francis W. Bolles, who died at Niantic Wednesday at the advanced age of 86, was for many years during his active business life engaged in [illegible] in that town. He was a state senator from the old Ninth district in 1855, elected on the "Union" ticket, as it was commonly known at that period, and represented the town of East Lyme in the lower house in 1854 as a whig.

PORTEOUS & MITCHELL.

A Mid-Summer Sale of Staple and Summer Merchandise that is pre-eminently the greatest in the extent and variety of the goods offered of any sale that has ever claimed the attention of the residents of that part of the commonwealth lying east of the Connecticut River.

Everybody has an interest in this sale because it offers an opportunity to save money that will not occur for another six months.

Everybody knows that it has been a backward season. In consequence we find ourselves with an unusually big stock of Spring and Summer Merchandise, and we inaugurate this sale to reduce the surplus.

More than forty thousand dollars' worth of desirable Merchandise to be disposed of in the next few days.

We believe in selling goods, not holding them until another season. Our policy has always been to be rid of the surplus while the season is young and before the goods have lost the bloom of freshness and the appearance of newness.

This sale will begin Today and continue during the following week.

Read carefully the following list of items and prices. Every department in the store offers something of interest. Every line of this advertisement is full of pleasant surprises. Read it thoroughly and critically. It is worthy of a careful perusal.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Large Audiences Listen to the Sunday Exercises.

THE FRENCH CANADIANS

Gather Around the Hall, But Are Kept Quiet by the Militia.

MONTREAL, July 9.—A large number of people attended the meeting of Christian Endeavor delegates in the tent this afternoon.

Anthony C. Comstock of New York, delivered an address on "Foes to society, church and state." The foes specified were intemperance, gambling and evil reading. The address was well received and during its delivery a large crowd of French Canadians gathered on the court house steps and peered at the speakers. At this stage they were quiet, but became noisy afterwards and had to be dispersed by the police and one of the leaders was taken into custody. Summary action induced them to scatter after singing "Marseillaise."

Miss Belle Kearney of Florida then spoke on "Intemperance." At times it was hard for the audience to hear her owing to the yells of the crowd of Frenchmen outside who joined in after the applause to Comstock, with a howl that expressed anything but friendly feeling.

The part of the canvas that had been lowered was put up, and shut out the sight of the Frenchmen, who were cleverly imitating the gestures of lady speakers inside.

"Senior Christian Endeavor," an address by Rev. C. P. Mills, brought the last meeting in the big tent to a close.

Before adjournment, Treasurer Shaw made the official announcement that the number of delegates attending the convention was 16,000. He also assured the timid delegates that no violence need be feared at the evening session of the Drill hall meeting, for ample police protection had been promised. However, he said, it was not deemed advisable to hold an evening service in the tent.

This announcement was received in silence. The drill hall was crowded this afternoon. The meeting was more than usually enthusiastic. Bishop Samuel Fallows of Chicago presided while the ordinary routine was enlivened by cornets by the Parks sisters. An address on Gospel Temperance was given by Thomas Murphy the temperance evangelist.

An address on "The Religious Press, its Part in Our Work," was next delivered by the Rev. A. E. Dunning of Boston.

The address on "Social Purity," by the Rev Dr. Douglas of Montreal, the most prominent Methodist in Canada, was expected to be rather sensational. The venerable preacher has a habit of coming out strongly on any subject he takes in hand and is a determined opponent of the Roman Catholic church; The committee running the conference, however, had Dr. Douglas submit his manuscript to censors. The result was a mighty cutting down of the address and the official copy contained nothing to hurt the feeling of any Roman Catholic citizens.

St. James Methodist church is in the west, and English part of the city. The programme for tonight [illegible] carried out there the consecration sermon was preached by the Rev. B. Fay Mills, the well known American evangelist. The Drill hall was divided off by states at the closing meeting and fully ten thousand people, in spite of the riot rumors, were present. It was the grand wind-up of the twelfth annual convention.

The first order of business was the report of the resolutions committee. The Rev. T. H. Lewis of Westminster preached the closing sermon. Consecration service and Mizpah brought the formal proceedings to a close.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the action of the local board of directors in opening the Columbian exposition on Sunday, contrary to the wishes of the people and their representatives in congress.

Outside the great building were crowds of French Canadians burning with anger and eager to avenge insults, which had been offered to their religion. In the thronging Protestant crowd were 1,000 volunteer militia, in plain dress, to see that no violence was done to the Endeavorers.

Occasionally the volunteers and adherents fell into line and marched around the block enclosing the Champs de Mars, and the opposing crowd did likewise, marching around the block to the west of the Champs de Mars. They eyed each other [illegible] and each moment the bitter feeling [illegible] and partisan tunes were [illegible] by thousands of voices.

When at last the doors were thrown open everybody expected a riot. As the delegates emerged and turned to the west the volunteers formed a cordon at the edge of the sidewalk. Without any manifestation of alarm the delegates made their way along. Then came a burst of song from the delegates. "At the Cross, at the Cross," floated out upon the air.

Silence fell upon the crowd and all the delegates passed out of the dangerous locality in safety. The militiamen marched down east a short distance, singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War." They were greeted with some jeers from the crowd but no blows were exchanged and they again turned and marched west and the multitude turned and melted away.

A Dedication of a Bridgeport Chapel.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 9.—King's chapel, located on the historic King's highway in the northern part of this city, was dedicated this afternoon with appropriate services. The dedicatory sermon was delivered by the Rev. Grissom Fulton of Park Street Congregational church. Many visiting clergymen participated in the services. The chapel is a branch of the Congregational church of this city and was built by small subscriptions. For the present it will be used principally for Sunday school work, under charge of the Park street church. Later the chapel will be made independent, with a pastor of its own, making seven Congregational churches here.

Foundrymen to Resume Work.

WAKEFIELD, Mass., July 8.—Work at the Smith & Anthony foundry will be resumed next Tuesday. The strike which has been in existence about two months is still unsettled, so far as the strikers are concerned. The company has made several propositions to the men to resume work, but the men have refused. It is reported that the company has a number of men who are willing to go to work. The company has had no difficulty in filling their orders so far, getting their work done at a large Boston firm.

Coal Dealer Assigns.

DENVER, July 9.—Edwin J. Binford, coal dealer, has assigned. Assets $212,770; liabilities $76,504.

MRS. MELLS FOUND.

Strange Case of a Windsor Woman—Missing 41 Days.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 9.—The finding of Mrs. Mary Mells of Windsor, Saturday, and the story of her disappearance for forty-one days are very unusual.

She disappeared from the home of Martin Palmer on May 27.

Saturday Palmer went to the woods to get some roots, and in crossing a brook he found the woman with a shawl over her head, asleep. She said she went after greens, fell into the brook and was washed ashore. The spot where she was discovered is thickly grown with underbrush, and overhead the branches form a complete roof.

She has lost sixty pounds during her absence, which shows that she fasted. It is thought that she found wintergreen berries, and perhaps milked the cows in the vicinity.

She was without shoes or stockings.

Emperor William Pleased with the Progress of the Army Bill.

BERLIN, July July 9.—Emperor William received this noon Herr Von Levetzow, president of the reichstag, and two vice presidents. He expressed satisfaction with the progress of the army bill, adding that a good majority for it on the decisive vote would greatly impress other nations.

The probability that the bill will be passed by a large majority has greatly increased in the last twenty-four hours. Herr Von Koscielski and Dr. Von Jazdzewski, leaders of the Poles, have pledged to the government the solid vote of their party. A considerable group of clericals have refused to support Dr. Lieber's proposal to send the bill to a committee. The chancellor and his agents are very confident.

President of New Haven Clock Co. Dead.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 9.—Hiram Camp, president of the New Haven Clock company, died at his home in Fairhaven late last night. Mr. Camp has been in poor health for a year. Mr. Camp was intimately connected with the "Yankee Clock" industry from its beginning. He was born in Plymouth, Conn., in 1811, and worked at clock making in Bristol, Conn., until 1840. In 1853 Mr. Camp organized the New Haven company, and remained at the head of the concern until 1892. He had held many public offices.

The President's First Sunday at Gray Gables.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 9.—This is the first Sunday for the president at Gray Gables. The weather has been extremely warm and Mr. Cleveland spent the day with his family, Col. Lamont and Daniel Bryant on the broad verandahs. There is nothing new to say as regards the president's condition. He is still improving with a prospect of being able to take a fishing trip this week.

Yale's Incoming Classes.

NEW HAVEN, July 9.—Returns from examination points show that the whole number taking the final and preliminary examination for Yale is more than 1,200, and that the next academic freshman class will probably muster about 325, as compared with 300 last year, while the freshman class at the Sheffield Scientific school will be about 225, as compared with 207 last year. These numbers may be somewhat reduced if the financial stringency and business troubles continue.

Midnight Raid on a Bristol Hotel.

BRISTOL, Conn., July 9.—A raid was made on the Commercial hotel, kept by C. F. Michael, about 1 o'clock Saturday morning, by Officer Arms, assisted by S. W. Steele and the Rev. J. C. St. John. Ten kegs of lager, two quarts of whisky and a pitcher of cider were seized. No one was in the bar room, hence no arrests were made. The liquors were carried away to a safe place, and a hearing on their condemnation will be held next Saturday.

Public Demonstration of Socialists.

VIENNA, July 9.—The socialists made a public demonstration today in favor of universal suffrage. More than 10,000 of them attended the indoor meeting. As many more listened to speeches in the city hall square. The announcement is made semi-officially that Count Taaffe, Austrian premier, will propose that workingmen's chambers elect delegates to the reichsrath.

Drowned While Bathing.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., July 9.—As Michael Hughes and James [illegible] were bathing at the upper end of the island, a mile up the river, about 4 p. m. today, Hughes was seized with cramps and being unable to swim, was carried away by the current and drowned. He was 18 years old and the support of a widowed mother. The body was recovered after eleven and a half hours search.

WATERBURY, Conn., July 9.—Patrick Sugrue, 25 years old and married, was drowned at 3 p. m. while bathing in [illegible] Brass mill pond. He struck an icy current and was seized with cramp. The body was found three hours later.

LAWRENCE, Mass., July 9.—Fred Pippin, aged 15, was drowned this evening while bathing in the Merrimack river. He was the son of Jos. T. Pippin of South Broadway. The body has not yet been recovered.

Heavy Loss to the N. Y. & N. H.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 9.—The officials of the N. Y. & N. H. railroad announced tonight that by last night's fire, the company lost sixty-four cars, most all, and some partly loaded. Loss will be $100,000. The sheds and freight platform were covered by an insurance of $5,000. The insurance on the goods way-billed is almost indeterminable.

Rome's Bank Scandal.

ROME, July 9.—The Patrie newspaper says that as soon as the senate finishes the business now in hand the closing of the senate will be ordered by the government with a view towards proceeding against all members of political rank implicated in the bank scandal.

Lost His Life by the Capsizing of a Boat.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 9.—Michael Berman, aged 22, lost his life this evening by the capsizing of a boat, in which he and two companions were rowing on the Seekonk. The body was not recovered.

Willie Gershaw's Fate.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 9.—Willie Gershaw, aged 5 years, son of William Gershaw, a well-known resident of this city, this afternoon went to Hollister pond and waded into the water. He was caught in the mud and his cries attracted the attention of his brother, aged 9 years and a little boy named Smith. They went to his assistance and succeeded in pulling him out of the mud. They had almost reached a place of safety, when the strength of the rescuers gave out and they let go of Willie, who fell into deep water and was drowned. The two rescuers narrowly escaped drowning.

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY GAMES.

Giants Again Beaten—Philadelphia Wins from Chicago.

BOSTON'S LUCK.

Whitewashed Three Times Last Week—Pittsburg 12, Boston 0—The Records.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—The champions played in wretched form Saturday, and there seems to be some truth in the rumor that there are dissensions in the team. The home team outplayed the men from Boston at every point and won as it pleased. The score:

Pittsburg .... [illegible]
Boston .... [illegible]

Cincinnati 7, Brooklyn 6.

CINCINNATI, July 9.—Saturday the home team won out in the ninth inning. It was a sensational finish to a very exciting game. The home team came to the bat for the last time needing one run to tie and two to win. Canavan made a long fly into the circus seats for a clean home run and tied the score. George Smith reached first on an infield hit which escaped the pitcher. Ward, who was called from the bench, got his base on balls. Morgan Murphy then hit a clean single into left, bringing in the winning run. The game had to be stopped in the sixth inning on account of the rain, causing a delay of twenty minutes. Attendance 2,161. Score:

Cincinnati .... [illegible]
Brooklyn .... [illegible]

Cleveland 7, Baltimore 6.

CLEVELAND, July 9.—Saturday's game was just such a contest as might be expected when one team was badly crippled. Cleveland had to stand defeat, when with the regular nine an easy victory would have resulted. On the face of the returns Young was hit hard. In reality chances were lost because of the inability of the extra men to get to the ball. Attendance 2,500. The score:

Cleveland .... [illegible]
Baltimore .... [illegible]

Chicago 4, Philadelphia 7.

CHICAGO, July 9.—The Philadelphias won Saturday's contest because the "Colts" played a poor game. Lange and Kittredge had chances and Kittredge took only one. In the third inning, after there had been a chance to retire the side, five unearned runs, which carried with them the game, came in. The day was clear and warm and the attendance 2,000. The score:

Chicago .... [illegible]
Philadelphia .... [illegible]

St. Louis 7, Washington 6.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—Duryea was batted freely by the St. Louis batters Saturday afternoon and they had men as far as third base in every inning. Arthur Clarkson pitched a strong game for St. Louis. Three hits were made, [illegible] hits in the first three innings, after which but one Senator rapped safely. The score:

St. Louis .... [illegible]
Washington .... [illegible]

Louisville 4, New York 2.

LOUISVILLE, July 9.—New York went down again before the Colonels in a well-played game. "Ex-King" Kelly was behind the bat for the Giants and played a [illegible] game. Both [illegible] and Hemming pitched good ball, but the former had poor support. The features of the game were the batting of Hemming and the fielding of Burke. Stafford and Weaver, all making phenomenal catches. The weather was hot. The attendance was 2,300. The score:

Louisville .... [illegible]
New York .... [illegible]

The Records.

The Giants suffered their usual defeat at Louisville Saturday. Philadelphia and Baltimore were the only eastern teams to win. Boston was whitewashed for the third time during the week, a disheartening record for a champion nine to make. The records:

SOUTHERN COLORADO FLOODED.

A Cloud Burst Does Great Damage—Live Stock Lost.

DENVER, Col., July 9.—Southern Colorado has been visited by rains which did great damage. At Lamar, one and a half inches of rain fell in an hour. South of Lamar a cloud burst in the Willow Creek and an immense body of water rushed down the creek, carrying away the bed rock ditch flume and striking the Best ditch, which brought the torrent into Lamar from one to five feet deep. Many families have had to move to places of safety.

At La Junta the heavy rain caused several irrigation ditches to overflow and the streets were covered with water. Fifteen hundred horses and a large number of hogs and fowls were drowned in the vicinity while the crops were badly damaged. The trains on the Santa Fe were delayed by the washing away of the tracks east of Booneville and San Carlos. The total losses will amount to one hundred thousand dollars.

No Agreement Between Iron Men.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—The conference between the committees representing the iron manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers was adjourned Saturday evening until Monday, July 17. No agreement was arrived at, and the Union mills, with the exception of the iron departments of Jones & Laughlin's and Painter's mills, will remain idle, the two firms named getting the benefit of any changes made at the final settlement, whenever that comes. The fact that the conference adjourned to a fixed date will be a surprise to the iron workers, for the meeting was expected to result either in a settlement, or the refusal of one side or the other to hold any more conference until the opposition had arrived at its way of thinking.

Light Attendance at the World's Fair Sunday.

CHICAGO, July 9.—The attendance at the World's fair today was so light as to raise doubt in some minds as to whether the open Sundays are to prove the financial boon to the fair that was expected.

Commissioner General Halkick Palmfont, of Australia, says he is in favor of permitting the sale and immediate delivery of goods by exhibitors. He asserts that this is not asking more than had been granted at previous international expositions, or more than is allowed certain American exhibitors at the present World's fair. At the Paris exposition, he says, such sales amounted to 10,000,000 francs.

BEING POISONED TO DEATH.

Nearly Fatal Mistake Made at the Bridgeport Hospital.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 9.—W. F. Doty, the well-known contractor, was found wandering around the streets Friday night in a demented condition. He said his wife had sent him to the hospital to be poisoned to death, and that the work had been carried out in a successful manner so far. Investigation showed that he had been sent to the hospital last Monday to be treated for bladder affection and for being a morphine victim. At the hospital a recipe had been made out which included eight ounces of acetate of potash and two ounces of belladonna. This prescription was read as three for the first ingredient and five of the latter.

This mistake was discovered next day, and the fact of his being poisoned to death made the officials pretty well excited. They decided that strenuous efforts must be made at once to overcome the result of their work. Doty overheard their conversation, or enough of it at least to know that something was wrong, so at 6.30 he dressed himself and ran away. He went to his house first and drove his wife out of it and then started for the depot to take the train for Boston. It was while on the street he was captured. An officer made him walk the streets all night so that he could not go to sleep and let the poison work on him.

Fast Australian Mail for England.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 9.—The steamship Warrimoo arrived here last night, 21 days from Sydney. She has on board mails for England and has steamed across the Pacific in an attempt to break the record in making the circuit of the world. Letters on board the Warrimoo are answers to mail that left London May 19, on the steamer Himalaya, and if all goes well they will be in London on July 12, or 52 days from the time when the English mail for Australia left London. The mails will be rushed over the Canadian Pacific to New York, where they will be transferred to a fast steamer for England. This effort to break the record is being made in order to prove the value of the new Canadian-Australian line to England.

The Sultan's Forces Victorious.

TANGIER, July 9.—The sultan's expedition which left the capital on June 29 to subdue the rebellious tribes, has had heavy fighting with the Hammaians and Sarahenas. The sultan's forces have been victorious, although losing heavily. In one battle forty soldiers were killed. It is reported that further fighting has taken place since the last reports were received. Spanish and French military missions are accompanying the sultan's expedition back to Morocco so as to avoid exposing themselves to attacks by the natives.

S. F. JONES' CONVERSION.

Told Before a Large Audience on the Steamboat Wharf.

Mr. Samuel F. Jones, of the St. Bartholomew's Rescue Mission of New York city, addressed an immense audience of men on the steamboat wharf Sunday afternoon. The occasion was the second open-air mass meeting for men under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association.

Professional and business men turned out to hear a thrilling personal experience of a man who was snatched from a drunkard's grave. Mr. Jones left Harvard university a drunkard and a gambler. From bad to worse he went down the broadway to destruction till he was in the most pitiable and miserable condition that a man could be in and live.

In this plight, at the suggestion of a fellow vagrant, he made his way to the St. Bartholomew Mission.

The result, in a word, was his complete conversion and the turning of his whole life into one of usefulness and rescue for his fellow men. Mr. Jones powerfully impressed his hearers, and his simplicity and genuineness was felt by those within sight and sound of him.

There were many features of special interest in the service and the hour was one of profit.

Col. Henry H. Holley, superintendent of the mission, will come next Sunday and be the speaker of the day. The service will be held, rain or shine, on the dock, at 4 p. m.

City Court.

Thomas H. Wright was in the city court for drunkenness Saturday morning. He was found guilty and sent to jail for ten days with costs—$7.79.

Timothy Sullivan, for drunkenness was sentenced to thirty days imprisonment, and ordered to pay $7.10 costs.

Joseph Bowler, for the same offence, was fined $1 and costs—$7.23—which he paid.

FATAL GALE AT CHICAGO.

Boats Capsized and Occupants Lost—Fair Buildings Damaged.

CROWDS RUSH FOR SHELTER.

The French Section and the New York Exhibit Suffer Most.

CHICAGO, July 9.—This evening about 5 o'clock a heavy squall of wind and rain swept over the city and Lake Michigan, catching many sailing craft. The schooner Champoeha was capsized near the life saving station and nine occupants were precipitated into the water, four being drowned, namely, Themistocles Fabolas, William H. Cornish, Ethel H. Chase and Harvey Marlow.

A number of other vessels were capsized and there were some narrow escapes from drowning.

At the World's fair grounds considerable damage was done to the different buildings and to the exhibits stored within. Damage principally in broken glass, which was done in nearly all the buildings, owing to the [illegible] being driven about by the tremendous force of the wind.

Several sections of glass roof in the Japanese department was blown in, doing considerable damage to the exhibits.

The full force of the gale was felt mostly in [illegible] building. Large crowds, when the storm burst, made a rush for shelter in the buildings. Just as the greater portion of them had gained the doors, a section of glass roofing, over the center aisle near the north door gave away and came to the floor below with a crash. It fell all around an attendant at a candy counter, but she escaped without a scratch.

A minute later a smaller section fell over the edge of the French division of the building, breaking one of the glass showcases. This added to the confusion, and but for the fact that the crowd was not very large, there would have been a panic. The greatest damage was done to the French section and the New York exhibit.

The Boston Flyer to be Taken Off.

BOSTON, July 9.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford road is soon to take off its five hour shore line train, now running between Boston and New York. It was so given out in Boston Saturday. When this vestibuled train was put on a week or so ago, it was expected that it would be well patronized. This has not been the case, it is said, the train since it was put on having carried a comparatively small number of passengers.

Smith Brothers are selling jelly tumblers and Mason's jar rubbers very cheap.

Noyes & Davis have a new line of letter copying presses at the lowest prices known.

Dean's Rheumatic Pills absolutely cure rheumatism and neuralgia. Entirely vegetable. Safe.

You can get a summer suit at a very low figure at Smith & Gilbert's, as they want to clean out all of their light weight woolens.

Tickets for seventeen different tours to the Columbian exposition—going by one route and returning by another route—are for sale by E. E. Turner, 187 East Broad street.

Hough advertises this morning new and desirable goods that are just the thing for everyone. Hough's new store is opposite the Wauregan hotel, corner Broadway and Main street.

That was a big sales day at Porteous & Mitchell's Saturday—the biggest they ever had at this season of the year. The store was crowded with buyers, because the buyers read the advertisement. The same bargains hold good the balance of this week.

One of the principal features of the great clearance sale at the Boston store this week will be a manufacturer's stock of fine muslin underwear, and Reid & Hughes expect it to be the biggest underwear sale they have ever had, because the values exceed anything they have ever offered. A full list with prices is noted in the advertisement today. The bargains noted Saturday continue this week.

A Magnificent Transcontinental Tour.

A tour across the continent with more than ordinary attractions is announced by Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb, with August 30 as the date of leaving Boston. A week will be passed at the World's fair, and another week in the Yellowstone National park on the outward journey, and the Pacific coast is to be traversed from British Columbia to Mexico. The regular tour lasts 68 days, but the return tickets are good from any part of California for several months. Another party will start at the same time for a three weeks' trip to Yellowstone park, returning direct. A descriptive book will be mailed free by Raymond & Whitcomb, 296 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

"The Royal Highness" in the Water.

The final touches were put on Richard Mansfield's yacht, the "Royal Highness," Friday. Saturday, Mansfield, with a party of friends, boarded the yacht and sailed for Milton Point, the rendezvous of the American Yacht club.

After a short stay at the point Mr. Mansfield will cruise along the coast for three weeks. He will then take a steamer to Europe, where he will work on a new play. The "Royal Highness" is one of the best of her size and class. She is sixty-five feet long and was built the past winter by Charles Ferguson and cost $13,000. She is magnificently furnished.

Norwich was Left Out.

The Willimantic correspondent of the Hartford Post writes: Considerable inquiry has been aroused because Norwich was left out of the schedule of the Eastern Connecticut trotting circuit. The reason seems to be that the society was not interested enough to attend the convention and the association acted independently of it.

Now that the races at Charter Oak park have been abandoned, it is the intention of Secretary Andrews to make those at the state fair at Meriden this year the best in the state. A very important meeting of the horsemen of the state will be held in Meriden this week to make arrangements for the races. Everything that can be done in the way of special purses, etc., to bring the fast trotters, will be arranged for at this meeting. So far as heard from all lovers of speed exhibits are enthusiastic in favor of big races at the state fair.

Sheared 73 Sheep in a Day.

William Bogue of East Lyme is probably the quickest man in the state of Connecticut with a pair of shears on a sheep's back. On a recent trip to Long Island he happened to have a day when his physical disability did not weigh so heavily as usual upon him, and he managed to shear seventy-three sheep on that day, and later did up the fleeces. Mr. Bogue is a veteran of the late war, and about three years ago was granted a pension on the ground of physical disability.

Norwich Factory Children.

In the recent report to the state board made by Giles Potter the number of manufacturing establishments in Norwich employing children is given as 13. In these 44 children between the ages of 14 and 16 had legal certificates. Three hundred and twenty-seven were employed, of whom 20 could not read or write. The number of hours was 60 and the average weekly wages $4. The commissioner states that the local authorities have not acted in the matter, and adds that no reading rooms or evening schools have been provided to meet the needs of the number thus employed, although the day school accommodation is ample.

Forty Years on the Sound Boats.

Henry Thompson, a veteran employe of the Norwich line, is dead in New York, his home. For 40 years he has traveled the sound in the various steamers. Long have been the years he has been employed on the Boston. Everyone who traveled on the boats knew him as a faithful servant.

He was 75 years of age and there is no one now in the employ of the company who remembers his early connection with the company except Stewardess Mary Fuller, whose term of service is but a few years less than Mr. Thompson's.

School Fund Commissioner Controversy.

Gov. Morris is still studying the law concerning the school fund commissioner. He wants to appoint Representative Marles of Brooklyn to the office and may do so yet, all of a sudden some quiet day when nobody is looking. The democratic legal point is that when Gov. Bulkeley appointed Mr. Olney in recess it was not such a recess as the law contemplated. Yet none of these democrats can deny that Mr. Olney has been transacting the important business of the office since then without question.

If Gov. Morris appoints there will probably be a legal contest.

The Best Paid Writer.

The editor of a well-known journal, which deals in the article at first hand, says that the average price for a good short story is from $50 to $100. Rudyard Kipling can command as high as $500 for one and Mr. Howells even more; he received $1 000 for a farce, for example. Frank Stockton receives $400 to $500 for a short story and Mr. Janvier $200 to $300.

As regards newspaper correspondents, Joe Howard was at one time the best paid one in New York and he makes plenty of money now; but the largest salary paid any one man by any one newspaper is the $150 a week paid by The Philadelphia Press to E. J. Edwards for his daily New York mail letter. Mr. Edwards is an old Connecticut newspaper man, and is well remembered in this city as editor of THE BULLETIN.

AT FISHERS ISLAND.

Walton Ferguson's New Residence—The Mononotto Inn.

A welcome addition to the charming summer resorts that dot the Atlantic seaboard is the new hotel erected on Fishers Island and opened this summer. It is called Mononotto Inn, says The New London Day. Walton Ferguson, the rich ironmaster, has done much to bring Fishers Island into prominence since he purchased such a large portion of it. He is erecting a private residence there befitting a millionaire. Fishers Island has long been an irresistible magnet for Connecticut and New York people, and numerous private residences are erected there yearly.

The new hotel is situated on the west end of Fisher's island, and stands on a bluff which dips directly into the sea and rises directly from the water's edge. It is a beautiful new building, surrounded by very broad piazzas whose generous shelter makes an open air promenade always possible, and when nature smiles, the ocean view is simply superb. The inn accommodates about 100 guests, is luxuriously appointed, and so located that every room commands a view of sound and ocean. Mononotto was a noted Pequot, brother of Sassacus. His wife, Wincumbone, was instrumental in saving the life of an Englishman as disinterestedly as Pocahontas saved that of Captain Smith.

EASTERN CONNECTICUT.

PUTNAM.

A Great Game of Ball—Putnams 8, Clippers 3—Other Matters.

In the game of ball between the Putnams and the Clippers of Norwich Saturday, a brilliant contest was witnessed by the spectators. It was a great game, and although defeated the Clippers won the admiration and praise of the people. The whole nine innings were played on honor, and who was to win could not be told until the last inning was finished. The playing reflected great credit upon both nines. The score by innings was as follows:

SCORE BY INNINGS.

Putnams	1	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	0	—3
Clippers	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—3

The game lasted an hour and fifty-five minutes. The umpires, Fallon and Ryan, gave perfect satisfaction.

The gentlemanly way in which the Clippers played the game won for them hearty applause.

According to the method which is now adopted for reckoning leap years in England, December, January and February will be the summer months about 720,000 years hence.

VICTIMS BURIED.

Forty Graves Dug and Filled at Pomeroy.

WHOLE FAMILIES ARE MISSING.

Work of Searching for the Dead Still Goes On.

DES MOINES, July 9.—The work of relieving the distress of those left homeless by the recent cyclone still goes on. The National Bank of Pomeroy has been made the headquarters of the relief movement. Here those willing to work or to act as nurses were assigned to the various hospitals, and here, also, provisions, money, bedding and clothing were received, and all of these necessaries rolled in rapidly. By 3 o'clock Friday, the office of the bank was stacked clear to the ceiling with food and clothing, and boxes of each were arriving on every train. Governor Boies arrived at 4 o'clock and took charge of the whole affair. He was first driven out over the ruins, then he visited the hospitals and the morgues, consulted with those who had thus far directed things and then issued a proclamation setting forth the needs of the sufferers and calling upon the people of Iowa to contribute liberally. The governor said the situation was far worse than he expected, and assured the people that nothing that would add to their comfort and relief would be left undone. He ordered more tents from Des Moines and a company or more of soldiers.

The intense heat made it impossible to keep those who were not claimed by relatives or friends. Forty graves were dug and filled with dead up to 9 o'clock Friday evening, and at that hour the flitting lanterns in the cemetery showed plainly that the work of burial was still going on. The following is so far as they have been identified:

Mrs. Marie Adams, A. Forche, A. J. Wilkinson, Henry Getken, Mrs. Tillie Johnson, Mrs. C. R. George, Lena Kiefer, Mr. and Mrs. Hulet, Mrs. Dahlgren, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Talbert, Roy Banks, Silas Rushton, J. P. Lungren, Mr. Dillemuth, Ollie Lungren, Bessie Banks, Mrs. D. L. O'Brien and baby; Mrs. Quinlan and baby; J. M. O'Brien, Allie Maxwell, Ollie Frost, Ezra O. Davy, Benjamin Davy, Baby Dalgren, Grover Black, Samuel Maxwell, Richard George, Mrs. B. J. Harlowe, two children of John Beckley.

Several babies have been found alive and well, but it has been impossible to find their parents. Nearly every injured person has an arm or leg broken or was terribly cut and bruised.

There was much trouble in securing coffins, and last night the supply of the towns in this vicinity had been thoroughly exhausted. Hundreds of willing hands dragged the dead and dying animals, with which the ground seemed to be literally strewn, to points on the outskirts of the town, piled them in big heaps and covered them with the remains of the houses, and applied the torch. Fully a dozen of these strange bonfires were kept going all the afternoon.

Whole families were in many instances wiped out by the tornado, and in some houses that contained all the way from four to eight persons not more than one escaped alive. Husbands have been left without wife or children; children are left orphans, and there are 15 or more women in Pomeroy who have neither husband nor children left. A Swedish family of four, consisting of father, mother and two children, are missing. A piece of wood about two feet long remains of their house, but not a trace can be found of the people who occupied it.

The Injured Are as Follows:

Mrs. Rushton, both legs broken; Bessie Pope's baby, shoulder broken; Gus Yelm and wife, seriously injured; Minnie Starks, left arm broken, head and face cut; T. J. Brownell, bruised; A. Forche, aged 16, leg broken; F. Forche, left arm broken; P. Weigerhoff, head cut; M. Randoll, badly bruised; Edith Maxwell, leg broken and head cut; Lillie Kester, head cut; G. A. Stewart, left arm broken; Mrs. G. A. Stewart, head cut and back hurt; Nellie Frost, back hurt; Ira Stewart, head and face cut; J. J. Dalton, leg broken; Mr. Randall, lower jaw broken; Mrs. Fitzgerald, bruised; J. Miller, hurt in chest; Mrs. A. O. Blomberg and two children, head and face cut and bruised; Mary Solderstrom, left arm broken; Lynde Olden, right arm broken; Olman Gurl, head badly cut; Mrs. J. F. Lugren, internally injured; Adam Salzeman, back and head hurt; Mrs. Salzeman, head and shoulder bruised, J. F. Wilkinson, chest hurt; Mrs. G. Dry, head, back and limbs bruised; Ida Guy, side and shoulders hurt; Bertha Davy, head, face and body bruised; George Guy, head cut; Mrs. John Davy, badly bruised, not expected to live; Ludwig Lallemeeder, crushed; John Reese and family, all badly injured; J. G. Scheipse's, head cut; Miss Troupe, left arm broken; J. M. Anderson, wife and boy, badly injured; Tom Harmon, left arm and legs broken; Dick Frost, badly bruised; Mrs. Harmon, left arm injured; John Kuplance and wife, head and ribs bruised; C. U. Kuplance, skull crushed; Mrs. John Drummer, head cut; George Drummer, ear cut off; Gust Lynder, wife and child, hurt badly; Bridget Ryan, head cut; Henry Milton's two boys, badly injured; Anna Symon, shoulder crushed; Sam Maxwell, boy, badly hurt.

Several of the above have since died, but their names cannot yet be obtained.

The escape of the Lowery family was a strange one. They were sitting on the veranda when the storm came along. A cow that was standing 50 yards away was blown right through the house, which was demolished. Not a piece of furniture that was in the house escaped being blown to atoms.

Nothing except kindling wood is left of the Prange House. Prange himself was crushed beneath the falling timbers. Charles Banks, a boy from Fort Dodge, is missing. It is known that he was in Pomeroy when the cyclone struck the town, but no trace of him has been found.

The Work of Destruction.

The German Lutheran church was demolished. Nothing is left of the Methodist Episcopal church but the bell, and that is many yards from the building where it hung. Some of the keys of the organ were picked up a mile or so out on the prairie.

The public schoolhouse is out of sight. Even the trees that surrounded it are gone. Every business house in the town is more or less wrecked, and some were wiped out entirely. Others had the roofs lifted off, letting in the torrents of rain, and thus destroying the stocks. Some have their fronts smashed in and some are smashed in the rear. But they are all smashed somewhere. No definite idea can as yet be obtained as to the losses in the resident district, nearly everyone who had a house being either dead or injured.

No sooner had the news of the cyclone reached the surrounding towns than thousands of people began to flock thither. Excursions to accommodate sightseers were run from Fort Dodge. Those people were at all times in the way of the people who were conducting the work of relief.

The whole country in the path of the tornado is badly wrecked. Groves of immense trees were twisted out by the roots; houses and barns were blown away. Fields of corn were destroyed and many persons were killed. Everywhere is evidence of the havoc wrought by the hurricane. Droves of cattle have been slaughtered and carcasses dot the fields on the way from Cherokee county to Pomeroy.

Casualties in Other Places.

Five miles south of Aurelia, Samuel Burch and wife and three children were killed; also a farm hand named Johnson. Lulu and Ella Slater and a Swedish girl were killed.

Five miles south of Storm Lake, E. J. Breeten and child and a man named Bottmann were dashed to death. A family of five persons living five miles south of Newell died in the awful tempest. Mrs. Gorton and three children and John Deswiler were killed three miles southwest of Fonda.

CHEROKEE SUFFERERS.

Ten Persons Dead and Half a Dozen Dying in That County.

CHEROKEE, Ia., July 8.—Ten dead and a half dozen dying mark the path of Thursday night's cyclone across the southern half of Cherokee county. The storm originated near Quimby and followed a path due east for about eight miles. Near the place where the storm first took on the characteristics of a cyclone it struck the house of Joseph Wheeler, whose family were in the cellar. Mrs. Wheeler had her arms about her aged mother, Mrs. O. M. Lester, when the latter was instantly killed by being struck in the side by a wagon spoke.

The houses and barns all about were completely demolished and the fields were full of dead cattle. The large iron bridge across the river was lifted from its piers and thrown into the stream. The cyclone swept a clean path through a number of superb farms, whose buildings were completely wrecked.

The first and most dreadful casualty occurred at the house of Samuel Bugh, his wife and three children were killed. Another child, the last of the family was fatally injured. The bodies were carried half a mile from the house and pounded into the mud. On the adjacent farm John Peters was fatally injured.

MISSIONARY MONEY.

How to Raise It Discussed by Christian Endeavor Delegates.

MONTREAL, July 8.—Another series of prayer meetings, five in number, were held in churches of this city Saturday morning on the part of the delegates to the annual convention of Christian Endeavor societies. They were followed during the morning by meetings in the Drill hall and the tent, at both of which there was a full attendance.

The meeting at the Drill hall was devoted to "Missions." S. L. Mershon of Evanston, Ill., opened the speaking by an address on "Missionary Literature; Why Used, and How to Use It." He was followed by Miss Ella McLaurin of Chicago, whose theme was "Missionary Meetings, How Conducted."

After an "open meeting," led by Rev. Gilbert Reed of China, in which the question, "What is your society doing for missions?" was discussed, Rev. W. H. G. Temple of South Boston delivered an address on "Missionary Money; How to Raise It." An address by Rev. J. T. McGrory of Pittsburg on "The Reflex Influences of Missionary Effort," closed the meeting.

The services at the the tent were of an informal but interesting character, many leaders of the movement being among the speakers. In the afternoon "Denominational Conferences" were held in the various churches, and Rev. John L. Sewell of St. Louis conducted a "junior rally" at St. James M. E. Church.

CRAPO INTERVIEWED.

How the New Bedford Man Views the Nomination For Governor.

BOSTON, July 8.—A reporter has interviewed ex-Congressman William W. Crapo of New Bedford on the Republican nomination for governor, and Mr. Crapo has expressed himself in regard to himself as a candidate in these words:

"I neither encourage nor give assent to a movement looking to my nomination this year for the highest office in the gift of the Republican party of the state," he said. "I do not wish to imply that any movement of that kind will be permitted by me. However, I do not wish to be understood as refusing point blank to have anything to do in the matter. That would be churlish on my part—as if I felt put out on account of my unsuccessful efforts in Republican nominating conventions. While I have no desire for the office of governor, I do not wish to give the impression to my friends that I am disappointed and unwilling to respond to very generous and hearty advances. It would be rough in me to repudiate their kind advances."

Amos L. Morse Indicted.

BOSTON, July 8.—An indictment has been returned against Amos L. Morse for the murder of Dr. William T. S. Wardwell on June 24 last, in Roslindale. It is asserted that Morse shot the doctor three times and then attempted to escape. He was captured immediately after the murder, and it was intimated that insanity would be pleaded.

American Mineral Oils.

PARIS, July 8.—The official Gazette Saturday publishes a decree declaring that the Franco-Russian Commercial Convention shall go into effect with full force on July 13. The decree further announces that the benefit of the convention shall apply provisionally from July 13 to mineral oils from the United States.

AGAINST ARMY BILL.

Centrist Member Opposes the Measure in the Name of His Party.

BERLIN, July 8.—At Saturday's Session of the Reichstag Herr Groeber, Centrist, who in the last Reichstag voted in opposition to the army bill spoke against the new measure in the name of the Centre party. The Centrists, he declared, were firmly opposed to the bill, and all the elected representatives of the party were pledged against it. From a military point of view the bill was needless, and from an economical standpoint it was ruinous.

It would be better for the government to enter into an organic federation with Austria than to increase the army superfluously. The present government game to secure a mousetrap majority was an undignified one. Doubtless if the house knew how the government intended to cover the extra cost involved by the measure it would not be able to find a majority.

Body Found in Spooner's Pond.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., July 8.—The body of an unknown man was found in Spooner's pond, near the Plymouth Cordage works, at an early hour Saturday morning. He was between 60 and 70 years of age, with white hair and moustache and neatly dressed. The body has been identified as that of Otis D. Dana, the well known hardware merchant of Boston.

Will Be Held for Murder.

ROCKLAND, Me., July 8.—Mumziato Nicola, the victim of the stabbing affray among Italian railroad laborers at Warren a week ago, died Saturday morning at the Marine hospital in this city. Ferrari, his assistant, who is in jail here, charged with assault with intent to kill, will now be arraigned for murder.

PACIFIC A MODERN OCEAN.

At All Events It Is Very New to Men of Caucasian Antecedents.

It seems rather curious to recall the fact that very little more than 100 years ago the Pacific was regarded as a Spanish lake. That nation claimed it on the strength of Balboa's discovery in 1513 and insisted that it should be regarded as a mare clausum. This will bear comparison with the claim recently made to a like effect by the United States in regard to the northern part of the same ocean, called Behring sea.

When Sir Francis Drake circumnavigated the globe his sailing across these waters was seriously resented by Spain, which demanded restitution to her of the plunder which he took, but Queen Elizabeth made a haughty reply. Not long before the close of the last century the Spanish crown again began to make a fuss because its monopoly of the Pacific was infringed on. It ordered the commandant of San Francisco to seize the Columbia, the first vessel that carried the American flag around Cape Horn. In 1789 two Spanish men-of-war seized several English fur traders on the northwest coast, and war was very nearly the result.

It is odd that the Spaniards, though discoverers of new lands and waters, were among the poorest navigators of their time. After coming upon the Solomon islands they could not find them again, and they were lost for 150 years. The water supply of their galleons was not kept in casks, but in big earthen jars. As it was impossible to provide a sufficient supply for a six months' voyage on board of a ship carrying 400 or 500 people, they always took to sea great numbers of mats. Whenever it rained, the mats were spread to catch the drops, which were drained off into jars through split bamboos. The mortality from scurvy on long trips was frightful.

Cortes, after the conquest of Mexico, fitted out three small ships to sail to the Moluccas and re-enforce the Spaniards there. They were scattered by a tempest, and two of them were lost. One of these is imagined to have been the strange vessel which was wrecked on the rocks of Hawaii at about the same time as nearly as can be reckoned. According to tradition, only the captain and his sister were saved. The natives received them kindly and gave them food. They intermarried with the Hawaiians and became the progenitors of certain well known families of chiefs.

In early times the control of land on the Hawaiian islands was held by the ruling chiefs, who reserved what portions they pleased for their own use and divided the rest among the leading men subject to them. The position of the latter was analogous to that of the barons of European feudalism. They furnished supplies to their sovereign and in case of war were expected to take the field with what fighting men their estates could furnish. These barons held almost despotic sway over their domains, apportioning the territory which they controlled among their followers, according to the whim of the moment or the demands of the policy. Every time a new chief came into power there was a fresh distribution of lands. Thus the country was always full of people who were dispossessed and homeless. Kamehameha III overturned this system by granting to his people a bill of rights which made their tenure of the soil permanent.—Washington Star.

Punishment In Persia.

Among the Persians the usual mode of punishment is the bastinado, from which men of the highest rank are not exempt. It is inflicted with very great severity, frequently so as to render the sufferer almost a cripple for life. The victim is thrown upon his face, each foot is passed through a loop of strong cord attached to a pole, which is raised horizontally by men, who, twisting it round, tighten the ropes and render the feet immovable. Two executioners then strike the sole alternately with switches of the pomegranate tree well steeped in water to render them supple. A store of these switches is generally ready for use in the pond which adjoins the courtyards of the houses of the great. The punishment frequently lasts for an hour or until the unfortunate victim faints from pain.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Curiosities About Ireland's Emblem.

The shamrock, Ireland's floral emblem, is a trefoil or three leaf plant much resembling our white clover, but of the oxalis genus of grasses. While St. Patrick was preaching to the pagans of the Emerald Isle in the year 433 he attempted to explain the "trinity in unity," but his hearers could not understand it. At last he plucked a trefoil (shamrock) and said, "Is it not as possible for the Father, Son and Holy Ghost to be one as it is for those three leaves to grow upon a single stalk?" The pagan Irish were convinced and soon afterward adopted the shamrock as their national emblem.—Philadelphia Press.

Dealing With An Honest Man.

"Here's your fare," said a gentleman to a Finnish peasant who had driven him for three hours through the woods, and he handed him four shillings.

"No, sir, that's double my fare," he replied, returning half the money.

And when he was told he might keep it for his honesty he slightly nodded his thanks with the dignity of one of nature's gentlemen.—"Russian Characteristics."

Two Tunes by One Orchestra.

"I have seen or heard a number of interesting things since I came to New York," said a visitor, "and one of the things that pleased me was the music of a band that was marching in a procession and playing two tunes at once, the 'Star Spangled Banner' and 'Yankee Doodle.' The musicians playing 'Yankee Doodle' played just twice as fast as those playing the 'Star Spangled Banner,' so of course the marching time was perfect. A few days later I heard an orchestra in a theater do the same thing. All the musicians on one side of the leader played the 'Star Spangled Banner;' all the men on the other side played 'Yankee Doodle.' I am obliged to say that it struck me as being rather amusing, and I wanted to laugh at it, but I didn't. I looked right ahead, just as though I were accustomed to hearing theater orchestras play two or more tunes at once every day. But pretty soon I saw that some of the city people seemed to think that this was rather funny, and when they laughed I gave myself the pleasure of laughing too."—New York Sun.

A BURGLARY.

I once knew two industrious mechanics named Pierre and Baptiste. They dwelt in a ramshackle tenement at Sault aux Belouil, where each had a dozen children to support besides their wives, who, it is grievous to relate, were drones. They were only nominally acquainted with that goodly art commonly associated with charwomen.

Pierre and Baptiste were hard workers. They worked far into the night and occasionally the thin mists of dawn had begun to break on the narrow city pavements before their labors would cease. No one could truthfully say that theirs was not a hard earned pillow. Sometimes they did not toil in vain. It depended largely upon the police.

It was early one November that this horny handed pair planned the burglary of a certain safe located in a wholesale establishment in St. Mark street. On the particular evening that Pierre and Baptiste hit upon for the deed the head bookkeeper had been having a wrangle with his accounts.

"I can't make head or tail of this!" he declared to his employer, the senior member of the firm, "yet I am convinced everything [illegible] be right. An error of several hundred dollars has been carried over from each daily footing, but where the error begins or ends I'm blessed if I can find out."

The fact was that the monthly sales had been unusually heavy, and a page of the balance had been mislaid. The head bookkeeper spent upward of an hour in checking up, both the entries of himself and his subordinates after the establishment had closed its doors for the day.

Then he went home to supper determined to return and locate the deficit if he didn't get a wink of sleep until morning.

Bookkeepers, it must be borne in mind, have highly sensitive organisms, which are susceptible to the smallest atom reflecting upon their probity or skill. At 9:30 the bookkeeper returned and commenced anew his critical calculations. He worked precisely three hours and a half, at the end of which period he suddenly clapped his hand to his forehead and exclaimed:

"[illegible] Why haven't you looked in the safe for a missing sheet? Ten chances to one they have been improperly numbered!"

He turned over the pages of the balance on his desk, and, sure enough, the usual numerical mark or designation in the upper left hand corner which should follow 11 was missing. Page 12 in all likelihood had slipped into some remote corner of the safe.

The safe was a large one, partially receding into the wall and containing all the papers, documents and several day receipts in cash and drafts of the firm.

The head bookkeeper in his efforts at unearthing the lost page of the cash balance was obliged to intrude his entire person into the safe. Fearful lest the candle he held should attract attention from the street, showing out as it did against the black recesses of the safe, upon entering it he drew the door slightly ajar.

As he stepped in the tail of his coat caught on an angle of the huge riveted lock, the massive gate swung to as if it weighed no more than a pound, and the bookkeeper was a prisoner.

He heard the resonant click—that was all. His candle went out.

The bookkeeper at the outset lost his presence of mind. He fought like a caged animal. He first exerted almost superhuman strength against the four sides of the iron tomb. Then his body collapsed, and not for an instant losing consciousness he found himself sitting in a partially upright position unable to so much as stir a muscle.

It was almost at the same moment, although hours seemed to have passed, that the drum of his ear, now abnormally sensitive, was almost split into fragments. A frightful, monotonous clangor rent the interior of the safe.

The bookkeeper used to observe afterward that a single second's deviation of characteristic thought and he would have gone mad. Stronger minds in a parallel situation would have indeed collapsed. But a weaker man can never confront the inevitable, but clings more stubbornly to hope. They are only weak individuals who in the act of drowning clutch at straws.

As the bookkeeper felt himself gradually growing faint for want of air to breathe his revivified hope led him to [illegible] press his fist into the woodwork with which the interior of the safe was fitted, in staircase fashion, one drawer being built above another. This gave him a few additional cubic feet of air.

As may have been conjectured, the noise which smote the bookkeeper's ear was that of a drill. Although acutely discerned within, the sound was practically smothered on the outside of the vault.

At one end of the drill was a cavity, rapidly growing larger, in one of the steel panels. At its other end was a heavy, warty fist, part of the anatomy of Baptiste, the industrious mechanic. Baptiste held the drill while his comrade, Pierre, pounded it in.

Soon the two burglars became aware that some sort of animal commotion was going on within the safe. It nearly drove them into convulsions of astonishment. Baptiste was so startled that he dropped the drill.

"It is a ghost," he said.

Baptiste was for throwing up the job uncompromisingly on the spot, but this proposal met with obstacles. His fellow workman, who was of stiffer courage, rejected it with scorn, as savoring too much of the superstitious. Pierre had a large family to support, he argued. He spoke frankly. They could not afford to throw away the opportunities of providence. To his friend and colaborer the burden of his remarks was:

"Lache! Go hon! You make me tired wis yer ghosts an tings. Let's not have no beast foolin—see? De job is commence. Allons!"

The upshot of this was that Pierre and Baptiste went back to work. At the third crack of the drill Pierre crossed himself and said:

"Baptiste, dere's a man in dat safe!"

Both men grew pale as death at the very suggestion. Baptiste, for instance, was so frightened he couldn't utter a syllable. His tongue clave to the roof of his mouth. However, Pierre, in this trial, was the first to recover. He applied his ear first to the lock and then to the drill h[illegible]

"[illegible] dere!" he cried, yet not so loud as to be heard on the sidewalk. To this there came a faint response—a very faint shout indeed. It sounded as if it were a mile away.

"For God's sake, give me air! I am locked in here. Try and burst open the safe!"

The two burglars did not stop to talk, but went at once to work as if their own lives depended on the result instead of the life of the mysterious occupant of the vault. In less than four minutes they had a hole somewhat smaller than the business end of a collar button knocked into the panel of the vault.

Then Pierre and Baptiste paused to wipe the sweat from their brows. The man inside breathed.

It was now that the pair began to muse on the dénouement. Could this be a member of the firm or an employee? This hypothesis jeopardized the success of the night's adventure unless when they had permitted the prisoner to emerge they bound and gagged him into silence.

On the other hand, this course would have an ugly look. If he resisted, it might mean murder in the end; whereas, if they did not let him out at all, they would stand no chance of profiting by the pecuniary contents of the safe. Besides, as the man could scarcely live thus till morning, they would be responsible for his taking off. Thus reasoned Pierre and Baptiste. These were not comforting reflections, but there was still another and a better in reserve. What if, after all, the man were himself a felon? Might he not be a companion cribcracker? In that case they would merely have to divide the spoils.

"Hey, in dere," cried Pierre, suddenly struck with an idea. "What is de combination baf de safe?"

"Fifteen—three—seventy-three!" came back in sepulchral tones.

It was evidently growing harder and harder to draw breath through the tiny aperture.

Thus it transpired that at the expiration of 15 seconds the lock of the vault gave back the same resonant click it had rendered eight minutes previously. Thanks to the timely advent of Pierre and Baptiste, it opened as lightly, as airily and as decisively as it had clicked 480 seconds before on the unhappy accountant.

The head bookkeeper gasped once or twice, but without any assistance stepped out into the free air. He was very pale, and his dress was much rent and disordered when his feet touched the floor. But this pallor quickly made way for a red flush at perceiving the two burglars with the implements of their profession strewed around them.

Meanwhile Pierre and Baptiste themselves stood transfixed by the abnormality of the situation.

Without any kind of speech or warning or without making any attempt at bravado, the bookkeeper walked deliberately to his desk and rang an electric call for the police. Simultaneously, it seemed, for so rapid and quiet was the action, he opened a drawer, took out a small revolver and covered both burglars with a fatal precision. As he did so he uttered these remarkable words:

"Gentlemen, I would indeed be the basest of men if I did not feel profoundly grateful for the service you have just rendered me. I shall always regard you as any right minded man should regard those who have saved his life with imminent peril to themselves or, which is just the same, to their liberty. Any demand in reason you make of me I shall make an effort to perform. But my duty to my employers I regard as paramount. I have accumulated a little money, and with it I propose to engage the best counsel in your defense, which is certainly marked by mitigating circumstances. If, on the other hand, you are convicted"—

Here the officers of justice entered, having broken open the door with a crash.—Strand Magazine.

The Action of Fruit on the Teeth.

There is no surer way to destroy the teeth than by the want of brushing or rinsing after eating fruit. In California, where fruit of all kinds is so cheap for 10 months in the year as to be within the reach of almost the poorest, beautiful teeth are rarely found, while it is a very common thing to see even young women with false teeth. Excess in the use of fruit sometimes produces undue acidity of the stomach, which also reacts on the teeth.—Philadelphia Times.

A New Wire For Telephoning.

A new kind of wire for telephone use, having an aluminium bronze core with a copper bronze envelope, is being experimented with in Germany. It is said to have a low resistance and great tensile strength.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Using a New Word.

Children are quick to learn new words and store them up in their memory to be used on the first occasion that presents itself.

A small Buffalo boy rang his mother's doorbell one day recently and brought his devoted parent to the rescue in all haste, only to tell her that his older brother had "told a lie," as he expressed it. "He said Mary broke his top when he broke it himself, and so he told a lie," the cherub explained, and then hastened back to his play perfectly satisfied now that he had had an opportunity to use the word that was a new addition to his vocabulary.—Buffalo News.

Absentminded, but Valuable.

"That clerk of yours," sharply remonstrated the customer, "sold me a pound and a half of butter yesterday for three pounds."

"He's a little careless sometimes," said the grocer blandly, "but you mustn't mind that. It's only his weigh."—Chicago Tribune.

Spare the Songsters.

It is not right to slay without good reason; it is doubly wrong to kill a bird during the breeding season. Slay the oyster patty if you must slay something—it can be replaced—but let the feathered Patti live in peace.—Outing.

On account of extremely dry air and a large percentage of clear days, moisture is evaporated almost as soon as it falls in Wyoming. Thus nothing can be successfully grown without irrigation, except in a few favored places.

THE GOSPEL OF WORK

EMILE ZOLA'S STIRRING ADVICE TO FRENCH STUDENTS.

Extracts From a Masterly Speech Delivered Before a Body of Young Men in Paris—The Relation Between Science and Happiness Explained.

Emile Zola, the famous novelist, presided at a dinner given by the Students' association of Paris. In the course of the evening he spoke as follows:

Did science ever promise happiness? I do not think so. Science promised the truth, and it is questionable if happiness can be made out of facts. To be content with them even for a day one must possess a stoicism, an absolute unselfishness, a serenity of intelligence, possible only to the highest minds. Therefore a despairing cry goes up from suffering humanity. How, it asks, can we live without delusions and illusions? If there is not somewhere a world where justice reigns, where the wicked are punished and the good rewarded, how endure the abominations of human existence? Nature is unjust and cruel. Science ends in the iniquitous law of the survival of the strongest. Reasoning thus, recoiling from realities as yet ill explained, they seek a dream, put confidence in the out of sight and hope to satisfy in the beyond their yearning for fraternity and justice.

This despairing appeal for happiness, rising on every side, moves me infinitely. Already music has responded to it, literature is trying to satisfy the new thirst, and art is changing to show its sympathy. It is the reaction against naturalism, which is, they say, dead and buried. At any rate the movement is undeniable. It is felt in all the manifestations of mind, and unless it is taken into account, studied and explained the outlook for the morrow is hopeless.

I, being an old and rugged positivist, see in all this only a halt in the march ahead. Indeed it is not even that, for our libraries, laboratories, amphitheaters and schools are not deserted. What reassures me most is the fact that the social ground is unchanged. For a new art to flourish, for a new belief to give humanity a new direction, there would be a new soil for them to germinate and grow in. Ours is still the democratic soil whence the century rose. Faiths are not resuscitated, and only a mythology can be made of a dead religion. The next century will affirm this one. What I will concede is that in literature we brought the horizon too near, and personally I regret having endeavored to limit art to proved verities.

The new men, by re-extending the horizon, have regained possession of the unknown and the mysterious, and they have done well. Between the truths acquired through science, which are not to be shaken, and the truths to be conquered tomorrow from the unknown, which in their turn will become unshakable, there is a land of [illegible]. This land belongs as much to literature as to science. Into it we can go as pioneers, doing the work of precursors and interpreting, according to our talents, its unknown terms. The ideal is only the unexplained. It is well enough to invent solutions for the unknown, but we have no right to put in question and to deny facts already verified. As science advances the ideal retreats, and it seems to me that this slow conquest, though we have the melancholy certitude of never knowing all, gives life its only reason, its only joy.

In these troublous days youth is told to believe, but nobody tells it exactly what to believe. Believe, they say, for the sake of the happiness that comes from believing, and most especially believe in order that you may learn to love. The advice is not bad in itself. It is certainly a great joy to repose upon the assurance given by any faith, no matter what. The difficulty is that one cannot believe by being willing to do so. Faith is a wind that blows where it listeth, and there only.

In conclusion let me offer you a creed—the creed of work. Young men, work! I am aware that no counsel could be more banal. In every school at the end of every term it is given to every boy, and every boy hears it with indifference. But let me, who have never been anything except a worker, tell you the reward I have gained from the long toil whose effort has filled my life. The world was harsh to me at first. I have known poverty and despair. Later my existence was a battle, and even now the fight goes on and my work is questioned, contradicted, insulted. Through it all my support has been incessant work, regular, daily, for me and never forgotten. How often have I seated myself at my table, tortured by some great pain, physical or moral! And each time, after the first minutes of agony, my task has proved a solace, has given me strength to continue the struggle and await the morrow.

Work is the law of the world—the guide that leads organized matter to its unknown goal. Life has no other reason for being, and each of us is here only to perform his task and disappear. Calm comes to the most tortured if they will accept and complete the task they find under their hands. This, to be sure, is only an empirical way to live an honest and almost tranquil life, but is it nothing to acquire moral health and by solving through work the question of how to secure on earth the greatest happiness thus escape from the danger of the dream?

I have always distrusted chimeras. Illusion is bad for a man or a people; it puts an end to effort, it blinds, it is the vanity of the weak. To remain among legends, to contemn realities, to believe that dreaming of strength gives force—we have all seen to what disasters these things lead.

The only strong men are the men who work. Work alone gives courage and faith; it alone is the pacificator and the liberator!

When first taken from the mines, opals are so tender and friable that they may be picked to pieces with the finger nail.

The Passing Rage For Gilding.

A bottle of gilding in the hand of vogue is more dangerous than the proverbial pot of paint in the hand of a woman. The latter daubs every available useful article within reach in the name of freshness.

But fashion smears as copiously, and this in the name of high art. We have watched with a shudder prim New England splint bottomed chairs brought from the attic to be dressed in a coat of imitation gold. We have seen all sorts of incongruous articles, including rolling pins and potato mashers, filling their plebeian pores with this outward and visible sign of the Keeley cure. And now the depths are literally sounded—fishers' nets are dragged from the sea and gilded.

Not that all cheap effects are mean any more than all mean effects are cheap. The gilding only adds to the expense of fish netting, which is really popular with artistic folks "in its natural state" because of its soft gray coloring and its inclination to hang gracefully. It is a charming acquisition to the list of inexpensive draperies.—New York Times.

English Livings.

There are about 14,000 livings in England and Wales. Of these nearly 7,500 are in the gift of the crown, Prince of Wales, lord chancellor, bishops, chapters, archdeacons, universities, rectors and vicars (as such) and trustees. About 8,000 others are in the patronage (as to 1,400) of peers and (as to the rest) of other titled persons. Although now and again a nobleman's livings are sold, and even distinguished colleges have been caught tripping in the matter of simony, it is among the remaining 4,500 livings that almost all the traffic exists. Statistics fail us here.

No doubt the majority of these 4,500 livings never come into the market, and belong to patrons who recognize their responsibility. What fraction of them have been acquired as to patronage or incumbency by means more or less tainted it is impossible to say. The "clergy list" for 1892, however, shows that there are 592 livings where the incumbent and the patron are the same person and 494 where both are of the same name. A considerable proportion of the parson patrons have, it can hardly be doubted, become patrons in order to present themselves. On the other hand, some of the 494 and a large number of the 494 represent "family livings." As to these, it would be inaccurate to say that the living has been bought for the sake of the parson, but in many cases the parson has been ordained for the sake of the living.—Contemporary Review.

Birds and Their Nests.

Some birds will forsake their nests if so much as a finger is placed within, but others, suspicious that their secret has been discovered, seek to hide them more efficaciously by admirably ingenious plans. Among the thick fern growth of a bank a wood warbler had woven a nest. The bird had evidently selected this bank because of the quantity of dead leaves scattered and heaped thereon, the tawny crispness of these corresponding nicely with the domed edifice, thereby rendering discovery almost impossible. But the fine quality of the ferns led to its detection. Tugging at the frail fronds, a kindly disposed lady scared the sitting warbler, which flew with plaintive call to an adjacent bough, and there exhibited signs of distress.

The lover of nature could not resist a peep at the cozy home, which at a glance appeared like a shapeless mass of dead leaves and grasses. Some few days after, walking through the same wood, she was again attempted to pay the little wood bird a visit. Puzzled and surprised, she could not find its whereabouts, but a few minutes' search revealed an alteration from the original mode. The cunning bird had blocked up the old entrance and covered that side of the nest with dead leaves, breaking a doorway through on the opposite side.—London Tit-Bits.

A Portiere Made of Shells.

A lady who spends her summers at the seaside has collected about a bushel, more or less, of small, almost flat, thin, yellow shells, which abound at so many points on the coast. With these she this year fashioned a portiere that is novel and pretty beyond description. Each shell is pierced with a hot wire and then strung on a delicate wire so that the narrow end of one is next to the wide end of the other. A number of strings were made in this way long enough to reach from the floor to the curtain pole, where they were securely fastened to a strip of plantation cloth of the same shade as the shells. Through the fretwork above this curtain is draped a length of sea green India silk, falling half way to the floor on the right side.

A less ambitious woman has made a curious scarf by sewing these shells in artistic confusion on either end of a length of nile green silk, putting here and there bits of golden green seaweed. A fringe is made for each end by stringing shells on green embroidery silk instead of wire.—New York Letter.

Worrying Over Trifles.

"My young friend Seth Blooty," said Colonel Calliper, "was healthy and wealthy, and he had nothing to do but to get as much enjoyment out of life as he could. For a time he had great success; then a cloud arose.

"Seth was not a tall man—in fact, he was rather short, but he had never thought anything about this one way or the other until men began to wear large plaids, and, do you know, he was greatly distressed because he couldn't wear plaids as big as some of his friends could?

"Seems foolish, doesn't it, for a man situated as Seth was to fret over such a matter as that? But I venture to say that we all know men with every reason to be happy who make themselves miserable worrying over trifles not worth a moment's consideration."—New York Sun.

Cockney Riddles.

"Why is a crane like a well known shellfish?" "Because it's an oyster" (a hoister). It is stated that a well known riddle was written by a costermonger. The riddle in question is a charade and runs as follows:

> My first's a little bird as 'ops.
> My second's needful in 'ay crops.
> My 'ole is good with mutton chops.

The answer of course is "sparrowgrass," which the learned Dr. Parr always insisted on using in preference to the politer "asparagus."—Notes and Queries.

No Advice About Kissing.

A prominent publication, in which a department is given to answering questions sent by letter, has been obliged to request young women not to send inquiries concerning when, where and whom to kiss. "Any girl needing advice on this subject would, we are sure, not be guided by any advice of ours."

One of Ruskin's Letters.

John Ruskin, writing in 1867 to his pupil, Ward, indited these strange sentences:

You may write me whatever you like to talk about, provided you write large and clear. You may trust to the truth of my sympathy, but you must remember that I am engaged in the investigation of enormous religious and moral questions, in the history of nations, and that your feelings, or my own, or anybody else's, at any particular moment, are of very little interest to me, not from want of sympathy, but from the small proportion the individuality bears to the whole subject of my inquiry.

I have no affections, having had them three times over torn out of me by the roots—most fatally the last time within the last year. I hope to be kind and just to all persons, and of course I like and dislike, but my word "affectionately" means only—that I should have loved people if I were not dead.

As a matter of practical fact, you may always trust to my kindness in a due proportion as you stand among other people who require it, and to my understanding sympathy in proportion also. But I have no pleasure myself now in any human relation. Knowing this, you will be able to understand a good deal in my ways of going on otherwise inexplicable.

Hard Stories to Find.

A district visitor of wide experience among the ill and the ignorant finds it no easy task to read to her "poor things." They want something bright and moderately cheerful. It must be short and direct, and the language simplicity itself. One doesn't realize till one is placed in such a position how few of these books there are. Miss Wilkins' stories were found to fit all requirements. The most illiterate could grasp them. The most fastidious invalid could be brought to listen without fatigue. They and they only were precisely what was needed.—Exchange.

STATE PRISON WARDENSHIP.

The resignation of Gen. Chamberlain [illegible] Warden of the Wethersfield State Prison [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of prisons. Harsh treatment is something they invite by disobedience of rules; they cannot be brought to submission without it.

Tact and good judgment are nowhere more required than in the government of such a prison.

The cases of sick prisoners or prisoners who claim to be sick should not be the warden's business. A shrewd doctor can tell whether a prisoner is playing sick or not, or knows how to find out by scientific methods; and if a physician is employed who cannot tell, it is useless to leave such a question to the judgment of the warden who certainly cannot know the physical condition of a prisoner.

The directors should see that the matter of passing upon the health of a prisoner to begin is left to the doctor; and also that a religiously insane prisoner is not [illegible] because he breaks the prison rules by singing and praying more than the warden thinks he should.

It will not be easy to find among politicians a man to fill the place. Gen. Haven has made a good officer, and there may be a few other men in the state who are fitted by training and experience to conduct the affairs at the state prison.

WORK IN THE COUNTRY.

There is plenty of work in the rural districts at this time of the year, and the farmers do not know which way to turn to get help to harvest their hay and crops. Good wages for short terms of service are the rule but the help is not forthcoming at any price. There are idle men enough in the New England cities to supply all the labor that is required, if unemployed city men and women could be induced to go to the country to work. There are scores of young men in Norwich who can find nothing to do who could earn a good living in the country, to say nothing of their being kept out of the way of bad company and evil associations; but most of them have been looking so long for nothing to do that they are surprised when they find something, and have not the nerve to tackle it. The majority of this class of idlers would rather starve in the city than to flourish and fatten in the country. It would be the salvation of most of them if they were compelled to go to the country at this season of the year and make themselves generally useful.

THE PAYMENT OF LITTLE BILLS.

The wonder is that the stringent state of the finances in the country has not more seriously affected this vicinity; but the regularity and promptness with which the people here pay small bills keeps business moving and cash circulating. Small debt paying is a good practice, and one that helps in times like these. There is nothing to be gained by distrust and hoarding small amounts of money when bills are unpaid. That only adds to the burdens of business, and must in the end more seriously affect the hoarders than a policy of prompt payment. It is the moving dollar, not the dollar in the old stocking, that is keeping the world agoing. A five dollar note passed through five hands a day to cancel the amount of its face wipes out twenty-five dollars of debt, and in a year that quick-moving note would settle seven thousand five hundred dollars worth of debts, while the five dollar note in the stocking is doing nothing. The prompt settlement of the little bills will carry a community, state and nation through the financial straits which this country is now experiencing.

THE TWO MINUTE TROTTER.

In the past fifty years, under the watch, trotting horses have increased their speed over thirty-six seconds. In 1867 Dexter was king of the turf with a record of 2.17¼. Rarus brought the time down to 2.13¼; and twelve years later St. Julien reduced trotting time to 2.12¾; Sunol afterwards brought it to 2.10½. Then Maud S. reigned as queen with Jay-Eye-See hard pressing her, until Nancy Hanks came down the home stretch in about 2.04. Now it is announced that Ayers P. last week trotted on the kite-shaped track at Kirkwood, Del., a full mile in 2.03½, with the aid of a running mate; and it is believed that with a faster running mate the time could have been still further reduced. While a few years ago it was doubted whether much better time than 2.07 could be made, it is now confidently believed that the two-minute trotting horse is a creature of the near future. In the past fourteen years the time has been reduced nearly ten seconds, and there seems to be little doubt that the two minute trotter is already assured by past accomplishments on the track.

IMPROVED BUSINESS TONE.

The trade papers generally report an improved tone in business circles and a more cheerful outlook in all directions. Henry Clews reports the money market "to be steadily working into a condition of greater ease. The demand for currency from the interior has almost ceased, and a few days may quite possibly see currency returning from the west. The pressure for discounts at the banks has almost entirely disappeared. Little new paper is being made, and the stronger and more prudent firms had made provisions ahead of their wants when the first sign of the storm appeared; so that now the amount of paper offered at the bank is quite normal."

Trade in Boston is reported to be for the season about up to the average, and The Advertiser says upon the [illegible]

"To sum up the whole matter: There is really no proof anywhere that 'hard times' have come or are coming. Whenever we get at the pith and truth of things we find plenty of proofs to the contrary. There are idle predictions, foolish whisperings, needless trepidations, unreasoning anxieties, mere fog which the sunshine will soon drive away, mere ghosts, sheeted and shivering in the night air, that will speedily depart at the cock-crowing of sober truth and plain good sense."

As predicted, gold has begun to come this way, and considerable has already been imported. The circulation has been increased by the purchase by the government of three million dollars' worth of bonds, and the outlook is full of promise.

CRIMINAL IDENTIFICATION.

The photograph as a means of identifying criminals is giving way to other means which are regarded as more accurate. In England and France the measurements of the length and breadth of the head, the length of the middle finger of the hand, the height, the length of the extended arms and the greatest length of the foot, with the color of the eyes, has proved to be so sure a system that for recognition no photograph is necessary. In seven hundred recognitions under this system there has not yet been made a single mistake. Under the photograph system of identification in Paris twenty criminals a month were recognized; but under the measurement system about forty a month are recognized. It makes no difference whether the criminal takes an assumed name or not, these physical measurements unmistakeably fix his identity; and a great number of criminals have given up changing their names because they have found this means useless for concealing their identity.

GERMAN STUDENTS FOR THE FAIR.

There arrived in New York Friday thirty-seven German students invited to the fair by Henry Villard. At Mr. Villard's request the party was made up by the German government, and the variety of callings they represent shows the intent to make the visit as profitable to that country as possible. There are mechanics and artisans, opticians, civil engineers, sculptors and painters, literary men and professors, and twenty other classes of workers. They will do New York for a week, and on Thursday will go to Chicago, there to remain until each one has made the study of what intimately interests him complete and satisfactory. This is a generous thing for Mr. [illegible] to do for such a party of his countrymen, and undoubtedly will be highly appreciated by the students and the German government.

PENNY-IN-THE-SLOT GAS MACHINES.

The penny-in-the-slot machine, while applied to all sorts of small commercial transactions in this country, has never yet been applied to gas meters. The weighing machine and the telephone, the music-box and the chewing-gum furnisher have long been worked on this principle; and it will not be long before the gas-meter for small consumers will be run in the same way. These penny-in-the-slot gas-meters have been operated in England for the past three years in the houses of artisans with satisfactory results. In Liverpool there are over nine thousand of them in use. The meter cash-drawer holds £20, and recording dials not only keep account of the money deposited and the gas burned, but the amount paid for which is unconsumed. The register acts as an indisputable receipt to the consumer; and this method of advance payment for gas is so popular among tenants that the demand for them in Liverpool alone amounts to one hundred a day.

NOTES OF THE PRESS.

A Verified Statement.

It is a pretty sharp statement which ex-Governor Brackett quotes from the late Horace Greeley, that wherever crime and ignorance and depravity are greatest there the democratic party is strongest. But the assertion can be abundantly verified by an analysis of the political returns of any large city in America.—[Boston Journal.

Safety of Connecticut Savings Banks.

The fact is that, in states where the laws are what they should be, money in a savings bank is as safe a place as can be found for it on this earth. Here in Connecticut our old, conservatively managed institutions for savings are as solid as Talcott mountain or East rock. The most and worst any of them would have to fear from a run—supposing such a folly possible here—is temporary annoyance. The government itself is not more solvent.—[Hartford Courant.

A Chance for a Democrat.

Here is a chance for a democrat. The postmaster of Hockanum, Conn., is a republican and an offensive partisan. He has been postmaster for twenty years, and his emoluments are about $300 per annum. He has tendered his resignation and wants to quit the post office business, but a tyrannical democratic administration pays no attention to his resignation, and it may be necessary for him to "sass" President Cleveland or Postmaster General Bissell or Axmaster Maxwell in order to get relief. If Hockanum cannot provide a democrat for his successor surely the state of Connecticut contains enough democrats of ambition to fill the place. If not, we could on a pinch sacrifice one of the Springfield postmastership aspirants for the chance at Hockanum.—[Springfield Union.

How the Parties Stood.

There had been a division of the House on the free coinage question, and the bill had been defeated by the close vote of 141 to 148. In this division the representatives of the two parties voted as follows:

Democratic vote for free silver	[illegible]
Democratic vote against free silver	[illegible]
Democratic majority for free silver	[illegible]
Republican vote for free silver	[illegible]
Republican vote against free silver	[illegible]

Tariff Pictures.

During the quarter ending December 31, 1892, the output of American tin and terne plate was 19,756,491 pounds. The figures for the quarter ending March 31, 1893, show such a marked increase that the free trade administration is trying to suppress them. The "American Manufacturer," a thoroughly reliable journal, has received reports from all the tin plate manufacturers in the country, except four, containing the same statistics that were furnished to the government. These reports prove that the manufacturers sending them in produced during the quarter ending March 31, 25,319,104 pounds of American tin plate.—[New York Press.

Get Ready to Go to Washington.

Four weeks from next Monday the congress of the United States will convene in extra session. Every republican senator and representative should be present and ready for business when the session opens. The republican minority constitutes the sole defense of the business interests of the nation. American business men, regardless of party, look to that minority to take the lead in protecting the public credit. American manufacturers realize that the republicans in congress are the only bulwark of the country's industries. American workingmen, whose livelihood is menaced by democratic free trade, rely on the republicans to combat by every means in their power the enactment of the starvation wages platform.—[New York Press.

Made a Clean Sweep.

Before setting out on his western tour, Secretary Hoke Smith seems to have achieved a success in his purpose to make a clean sweep of all republican employes in the interior department, so far as he could do so without violating the civil service laws. The fact that some of the men turned out were the most capable, efficient and experienced in the department was not taken into account at all. The orderly and rapid transaction of the public business is not to be considered for a moment in comparison with making as many places as possible for good democrats. That is the way reform has been exemplified in at least two of the departments since the new administration came in.—[New York Tribune.

The Father of Many Ills.

Constipation leads to a multitude of physical troubles. It is generally the result of carelessness or indifference to the simplest rule of health. Eugene McKay of Branford, Ont., writes:

"I had for several years been a sufferer from constipation, had taken a great many different remedies, some of which did me good for a time, but only for a time, then my trouble came back worse than ever. I was induced by a friend, whom BRANDRETH'S PILLS had benefited, to try them. Took two each night for a week, then one every night for about six weeks. Since that time I have not experienced the slightest difficulty whatever, and my bowels move regularly every day. I believe firmly that for sluggishness of the bowels and biliousness BRANDRETH'S PILLS are far superior to any other."

"Be sure you get Ayer's" is an important caution to all in search of a thoroughly reliable blood-purifier, Ayer's Sarsaparilla being the one on which there can be no manner of doubt. It has stood the test of nearly half a century, and has long been considered the standard.

Big Dinners.

Every day in this city thousands of persons eat too much at dinner, and, in consequence, suffer from sour stomach, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc. If these will take just one of Carter's Little Liver Pills immediately after eating, they will be surprised by the entire absence of those unpleasant feelings which daily distress them, and may continue in their improper course of eating big dinners without fear. Only one little pill, remember.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth, send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums and reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP."

Smart weed and Belladonna, combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters, make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

Ayer's Pills promptly remove the causes of sick and nervous headaches. These Pills speedily correct irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels, and are the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use. No one should be without them.

Castoria.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

THE TINMAN.

Apple blooms and lilac,
Oh, how sweet they smell!
Bob o' Lincoln, hear him
Like a silver bell!
Round the barn the swallows,
Loudly twittering, dart;
All things speak of springtime—
See the tinman's cart!
Pans and pails that glitter,
Great brooms mounted high,
Big and little dippers
Like those in the sky.
Stopping at each farmhouse:
"Is the lady in?
Have you any rags, ma'am?
Do you want some tin?
Tin or wooden ware, ma'am,
Will you trade with me?"

Oh, a traveling tinman
I should like to be!
Everybody knows him,
Every one he knows
Through the pleasant summer
Jogging round he goes.
All the world about him
From his cart he sees,
Fields of purple clover,
Murmuring with bees.
Gardens full of roses,
Brooksides blue with flags,
Asking at each farmhouse
"Have you any rags?
Tin or wooden ware, ma'am,
Will you trade with me?"
Oh, a traveling tinman's
Is the life for me!

Imitation Jewelry In Paris.

The manufacture of imitation jewelry in Paris dates from the reign of Louis XIV, the luxury of dress both for ladies and gentlemen at that epoch making imperative the wearing of an immense number of trinkets. The coat and dress buttons and the hat and shoe buckles manufactured in false diamonds during that reign and those of Louis XV and Louis XVI remain the most perfect specimens of that kind of trinket in existence. The fine finish of the settings and the brilliancy of the stones leave nothing to be desired, and very fortunate is the Parisian belle who has inherited from her ancestors any of these beautiful and artistic ornaments.

Modern imitation jewelry is of an infinite number of grades, beginning with the ordinary stage trinkets, in unmistakable glass and gilt brass, made only with a view to effect and glitter behind the footlights. Yet, though without any claims to deception as regards their true quality, they are often interesting as being accurate reproductions of antique or historic jewels. Such were the ornaments designed and executed for Mme. Bernhardt's impersonation of "Theodora," and of this quality are many of the ornaments manufactured for the wardrobe department of the grand opera.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings In Leading Securities In Boston and New York.

BOSTON, July 9.—In the outside market call money is quoted at 3 per cent and time money is nominally 6 per cent.

Saturday in midsummer is usually a dull and unimportant day in the stock market, and many brokers who live out of town do not take the trouble to come in. Under the present circumstances the members only are glad of the relief which this dullness brings, for no one hopes for more than to drift along until the financial situation clears. The better feeling noted yesterday, however, continues, and is shared by brokers and bankers alike. The July disbursements are beginning to find their way into circulation and the money held by the savings banks to protect themselves from heavy withdrawals of deposits is also beginning to be released. London came down from ¼ to ½ smaller than our closing quotations, and two new bank suspensions were reported, but these were without influence.

The New York and New England is again coming to the front as an object of interest on the part of the traders. These gentlemen have now come to the conclusion that the road will ultimately pass into the hands of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, as they are picking up odd lots of the stock.

The silver market continues weaker, quotations being down from 73 to 72. The government Friday purchased [illegible] ounces at the latter figure.

The local market opened dull and irregular. Sugar was ½ down at [illegible], but advanced ½, while General Electric was up ¼ to 71¾. New England continued active, selling from [illegible] to [illegible], with a slight reaction later. Atchison opened off from [illegible] to [illegible], but strengthened to [illegible], while Chicago, Burlington and Quincy was down from [illegible] to [illegible]. Old Colony advanced to 183 and Mexican Central [illegible] stronger at [illegible].

DAY'S STORY FALSE.

Miss Fancher Says She Was Married to the Parson.

HUSBAND LEFT NEXT MORNING.

She Will Not Live With Him—Refuses to Give Any Explanation.

EASTPORT, L. I., July 9.—The good people of this sedate little hamlet, and especially those who have sat in the pews of the Methodist church, under the preaching of the young pastor, Rev. D. E. Day, are in a state of bewilderment over certain recent events that have stirred not only this town, but that of New Canaan, Conn., to the depths.

The young minister sadly announced from the pulpit last Sunday that he had not returned with her that was to be the first lady of his parish because the object of his devotion had listened to the lying whisper of calumny, and had refused to marry him because the whisper said that he was engaged to another girl, that he was already a married man, and that he had once been defendant in a breach of promise suit.

Hardly had the echo of his announcement died away than word came from Pound Ridge, N. Y., that Parson Day and the alleged fickle young woman were in reality married on June 27.

All Eastport knew the young minister was going to New Canaan for his bride last week. They knew, for he told them he was going to marry Hattie E. Fancher, the only daughter of George N. Fancher, a prosperous farmer at Pound Ridge, which is just over the state line from New Canaan.

The parishioners prepared a nice reception to the bridal couple as a pleasant surprise to them and a mark of Their Love For Their Pastor.

He stepped off the train alone and dejected. The big tent that had been hoisted for the festivities, the sponge cake and other bridal dishes were quietly disposed of, and Pastor Day said mournfully that the wedding had been postponed.

When Sunday came the largest congregation that ever sat in the pews greeted the minister, and there he told the story that Miss Fancher had refused to marry him because of the false rumors that were going about.

The Eastporters had not ceased to marvel when, yesterday, Miss Fancher, herself told some inquirers at her father's house, among them several newspaper reporters, that she was the wife of Parson Day.

"We were married before a dozen of my relatives at noon on June 27 by my uncle, Rev. Henry S. Hall of Canaan," said the young woman, adding with a flashing eye: "But I will never live with him, and it is not because I have listened to stories about him, either."

Further than that the bride, who is about twenty-five years old and rather pretty, refused to explain. Her father said:

"Day first appeared at Pound Ridge five years ago, when he was a student in the Westminster theological school, Maryland. He was supply for the church at East Woods during his stay. I am superintendent of the Sunday school. He went back to school in September. He appeared here again last July and boarded with us.

"In October he was appointed to the Eastport church. He came over in December and Asked For My Daughter's Hand,

and I consented. Next October was set for the wedding, but in May he wanted to hasten it, as he said he was fearful of compromise with a young woman in his boarding house.

"After much persuasion Hattie agreed, and the marriage took place before the family June 27. He stayed over night, but next morning my daughter declared she would not live with him, and I drove him to the station alone.

"I don't know why Hattie will not live with Mr. Day. She will give no explanation. Last Thursday he was here again asking my daughter to sign certain separation papers so he could marry a Long Island girl."

And the people of Eastport and Pound Ridge, New Canaan and Norwalk, where all of the parties are well known, are bewildered. It is Pastor Day's turn.

THE ATLANTA VIEW.

Every Silver Dollar Must Be Worth 100 Cents In Gold.

ATLANTA, July 9.—The Atlanta clearing house has adopted the following:

Resolved, That we favor the unconditional repeal of what is known as the Sherman silver purchase act, and that we oppose any further coinage of silver with the present ratio to gold. We favor the coinage of all silver which can be used by the people of this country, provided each dollar coined shall contain enough silver to bring 100 cents of gold in any market in the world.

WHOLESALE BUTCHERY.

Father, Mother and Four Children Murdered by the Hired Man.

CANDO, N. D., July 9.—This community has been startled by the arrival of Miss Anna Kreider, but partly dressed and almost frantic, with the announcement that her father's family was being butchered by the hired man at their home near by.

Citizens who hurried to the homestead found an awful spectacle of wholesale butchery. The father was lying in his bed, the mother in the kitchen where she had been preparing breakfast; three girls, aged respectively 12, 11 and 9 years, and one 7-year-old boy were lying stiff and stark where they had fallen from wounds inflicted by a double barreled shotgun in the hands of Albert Bomberger, a farm hand. Bomberger was a distant relative of the family, who had been in Mr. Kreider's employ about nine months.

The father was the first victim, then the mother and the children, in the order named. Miss Anna, by piteous supplications, induced the fiend to spare her life and those of her three remaining little brothers. At the muzzle of his gun he compelled her to prepare his breakfast, with the corpse of her brother lying at her feet. He ate leisurely, then criminally assaulted the girl, and, tying her in the barn to prevent her escape, saddled her favorite pony and deliberately rode away northward.

With the aid of one of her brothers, Miss Kreider succeeded in freeing herself and making her way to town, necessarily leaving her little brothers alone with their dead parents.

As soon as the alarm was given a dozen or more of Cando's citizens started northward in pursuit. They struck the trail of Bomberger, who was evidently making for the boundary line, distant about 40 miles. At Snyder lake, 12 miles north, he was heard of at 6.15 p. m., 20 miles north of here, and 10 miles south of the boundary. The whole northern end of the country is alive with men looking for him, and it is confidently expected that he will soon be captured.

Bomberger seems to have been chafing under some imagined want of attention from Mrs. Kreider, who was apparently not entirely satisfied with his work, but from all that can be learned he had no stronger motive for the crime than innate depravity. When he left he robbed the house of all the money he could find—about $80—and some valuables.

SATOLLI DEFIED.

Archbishop Corrigan Ignores his Authority in This Country.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Archbishop Corrigan has practically defied the authority to Mgr. Satolli, upon whom, as apostolic delegate in the United states, the Pope has conferred extraordinary powers. Mgr Satolli directed the Archbishop to restore Dr. Richard L. Burtsell to the Church of the Epiphany, from which he was transferred three years ago to Rondout, N. Y., for defending Dr. McGlynn, or appoint him a parish in this city equally as important as the Epiphany, but the Archbishop, instead of following the apostolic delegate's instructions, has referred the matter to the Propaganda at Rome.

Dr. Burtsell was transferred with the approval of the propaganda. The Roman congregations are superior to even apostolic delegates, and this is especially true of the congregation of propaganda, which might be said to be the pope's mouthpiece. It seems that the case will have to be reopened before the propaganda before action can be taken. It is believed that this is the way Archbishop Corrigan reasons. However, in Catholic circles this point that has been raised is considered of the greatest importance, as it will be the first opportunity the pope himself will have to give practical evidence of the powers he has conferred on Mgr. Satolli.

Peary Off for the Arctic.

PORTLAND, Me., July 9.—At 1 o'clock Saturday the Falcon left this port, bound to the Arctic regions. Every member of the party was aboard and all eager to be off. Mrs. Peary was looking cheerful and had a pleasant word for all. She was hailed by ladies of all ages, anxious to bid her good speed. Three cheers were given as the vessel left the Grand Trunk wharf, to which the vessel was moored about 4 in the morning.

Booked for Another Term.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 9.—Herbert E. Knight stood before the criminal court Saturday morning with the utmost nonchalance and pleaded not guilty to burglarizing Brown's jewelry store in this city. He was ordered to recognize in the sum of $1500 bonds. Knight says he can furnish bail. He is but 38 years old, five of those years having been passed behind prison doors.

New Daily In Clinton.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., July 9.—The Clinton Daily Item, a new venture in Worcester county journalism, a four-page penny afternoon paper, will appear on Monday, July 17. The managing editor will be Representative Wellington E. Packhurst, who for 27 years was editor of the Clinton Weekly Courant.

Robert Grant Confirmed.

BOSTON, July 9.—The nomination of Robert Grant, the Boston lawyer, water commissioner and author, to be a judge of probate for Suffolk county, which Governor Russell sent to the executive council on Saturday last, was confirmed at a meeting of the council, which was held at Sherborn Saturday.

Two Were Drowned.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 9.—George Hale and a little girl companion were wading in the river when they got beyond their depth and screamed for help. George Carvell, an uncle of the boy, jumped into the water and managed to save the girl, but he and the boy were drowned.

Brazilian Revolutions.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janeiro telegraphs that rumors have reached the Brazilian capital of the discovery of revolutionary movements in Bahia and Pernambuco.

Exchange Would Become Settled.

SIMLA, July 9.—The president of the Simla Currency association has addressed a letter to the government, "on behalf" he says, "of the mercantile community." He protests against the sale council drafts at less than 16 pence per rupee, and urges that 16 1-16 pence per rupee for drafts and 16 3-32 pence for telegraphic transfers be the minima. If this basis should be adopted, he says, exchange would speedily be settled.

Violent Attack on M Dupuy.

PARIS, July 9.—A violent attack upon M Dupuy, the prime minister, was made in the chamber of deputies by MM Paulin, Mery and Tony Revillon. Their tirade had no effect upon the sentiment of the chamber, for the house, by a vote of 243 to 124, adopted the order of the day expressing confidence in the government.

Mitchell Is Insane.

BOSTON, July 9.—In the case of William E. Mitchell held for an assault with intent to kill upon his wife some months ago, the grand jury has reported no bill by reason of insanity. Mitchell was taken to Taunton, as he is considered a dangerous character. He will remain there until removed by order of the court.

Chinese Government Objects.

PARIS, July 9.—A dispatch from Tien-Tsin says that the Chinese government resents France's interference in Siam, and will oppose annexation or a protectorate.

HIS FORTUNE GONE.

Duke of Veragua Said to Be Almost Penniless.

HIS BEAUTIFUL HOME SEIZED.

Bull Farm Tied Up by Law—Speculation in Paris Brought Ruin.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Herald's Chicago special says: The financial crisis through which the Duke of Veragua is now passing seems to have been caused in a great measure by speculation in Paris, the duke having intrusted his money to another. The story of the duke's troubles comes from the duke himself.

Just before his departure from Chicago he called upon Thomas W. Palmer, president of the national commission, and told him he had been speculating with the major portion of his fortune in Paris, and had just been informed by cablegram that he had lost every dollar.

President Palmer sympathized with the duke, and promised to do everything in his power to assist him out of his trouble. The hopeful view the World's fair official took of the situation put the duke in a more cheerful mood, and only a few of those who stood close to him knew of his misfortune.

Things did not become critical until he reached New York. There he received word that his

Beautiful Home Had Been Seized

by his creditors and that his bull farm near Toledo had also been tied up by the law.

Then the duke hastened to leave this country, and on Saturday started for Spain. Before he left, however, he communicated with President Palmer and told him of his latest calamity.

It is stated that he placed about $850,000, the greater portion of his estate, in the hands of a Parisian broker, who was instructed to invest in such a manner as would produce the largest returns. This was several years ago.

Loss followed loss in quick succession, and when the duke sailed for America his $850,000 had been reduced to $150,000. He was apprehensive of the entire loss of his estate even then.

All through his entertainment in this country his mind was burdened. He often expressed to his friends here that he had Nothing to Leave His Son and Daughter.

Although a guest of the country the fact that he was being so royally treated brought with it its penalties, for he was compelled to spend a large amount of money, and this he really could not afford.

It has been decided that not only will the United States be asked to assist the duke, but that all other American republics and West Indian islands will be appealed to for assistance.

When a large sum has been raised it will be invested in first-class American securities, the income of which will be given to Don Cristoval Colon, the son, and Dona Maria del Pilar, the daughter of the Duke of Veragua. That is as far as the scheme has progressed. It has not yet been decided in what manner the subscription will be pushed.

BAY STATE'S ABANDONED FARMS.

Since the Catalogue Was Published One-Half Have Been Sold.

BOSTON, July 9.—The state board of agriculture is endeavoring at the present time to ascertain the number of abandoned farms in Massachusetts.

Since the board first took up the question and published to the world the number and just where each farm could be found, tenantless homesteads have decreased wonderfully, and it is anticipated that the number found will be greatly decreased from that of last year.

Never before has so great an interest been manifested in any work that this department has handled, and already as early as it is in the season there have been hundreds of callers at the office in search of more information concerning rural forestry.

As an exact description, cost, location and the owner's name and residence has in all cases been published, many a farmer has been enabled to dispose of a farm which he was unable to make profitable because he had not the capital to make the improvements necessary.

The board has found that in some cases where a farmer has sold his property he has gone to another section of the state and bought another somewhat smaller and where the soil was better. But in the majority of cases it is learned that the people have left the country to take up their abode in a city.

It is also noticed that a large majority of the purchasers of the farms sold are of native American parentage.

Some have come all the way from Florida and Illinois to make their home on a farm in Massachusetts, but the greater number of purchasers are residents of this state.

In the book which was published by the board last year there were descriptions of 60 farms, but since that time over one-half that number have been reported sold.

The board will determine if there are any more to be added to the list, and will probably issue another report in the fall.

Cherokee Bonds Not Placed.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—The statement telegraphed from Indian territory that advices received there confirmed the sale of the Cherokee strip sale bonds with one-fourth of the money already paid into the United States subtreasury at St. Louis proves to be unfounded. Chief Harris and the Cherokee committee are in this city, and deny that any sale has been made or that any money has been deposited.

Wants Compensating Legislation.

PETERSBURG, Va., July 9.—Congressman Epes of this district has written a letter to the Petersburg chamber of commerce declaring that he cannot vote for the repeal of the Sherman silver law unless some compensating legislation is coupled with the repeal.

Sixty-one Would-Be Lawyers.

BOSTON, July 9.—Sixty-one bright appearing young men, ambitious to be lawyers, embraced the examination of the bar examiners of the Boston Bar association Saturday, held in the old court house.

Rev. Robert Conkling Called.

NORTH EASTON, Mass., July 9.—At a business meeting of the Baptist church it was voted to extend a unanimous call to Rev. Robert Conkling of Preston Hollow, N. Y., to become their pastor.

PULPIT AND PEW.

It is said to cost $30,000 a year to keep St. Peter's church at Rome in repair.

It is now just 100 years since Protestant missionary work was begun in India.

The pastor of the Central M. E. church, Detroit, is to have as an assistant Miss May Villa Patton of Muscatine, Ia., who has taken a course in the Boston University Theological school.

Archbishop Farrar, in the "Review of the Churches," takes a very gloomy view of the future of the English church. The whole cause of the reformation, he declares, is going by default through the ritualistic innovations of modern days.

Fans are marching forward and seek to herald the "lab jewel" which Queen Elizabeth used to wear dangling over her forehead. Here was a large pear shaped pearl.

A new silver vase has a crumpled, flower lipped mouth and a spray with tendrils applied as ornament. These tendrils are carried up to make handles on each side. It is a pretty conceit.

A new library set of silver has two cut glass bottles for ink with silver tips. Between them is a perforated box for stamps and in front a lovely pen rack. A wide silver flaring back contains a calendar.—Jewelers' Circular.

THE TYRANT FASHION.

Colored cloth coats are a feature of present fashions.

Nearly every fashionable wrap for next season is short, with the exception of the varied models designed for traveling and unpleasant weather.

The summer will show a general revival of the corded cottons of the old fashioned type, pique, linen duck in ivory, cream white and pale yellow or tan dimity, muslin, etc.

Cream colored jackets have vests of British red cloth braided in gold or black, and scarlet coats have ample waistcoats of cream cloth, trimmed with soutache and fastened with gilt buttons.

The new capes for matronly women in modelman shape have lost all their former "hunchy" effect on the shoulders and fit over the arms far more comfortably, with none of the hampered feeling the old shapes gave.

Pretty waists of pearl gray surah, dotted with old rose, blue or red, are made with surplice fronts, the soft folds coming from the shoulders. The edges, which do not quite meet in front, but form a slender V, are edged with frills of plaited silk the color of the dot in the surah, with cape collar similarly edged. The full sleeves have plain silk cuffs, and the seamless back has fan folds from neck to waist.—New York Evening Post.

MID-SUMMER SALE

was lively. The biggest sale we ever had at this season of the year. All day our store was crowded with eager buyers and no one went away disappointed.

We want no better illustration of the advantage of honesty in advertising than was given Saturday.

We attribute Saturday's big business to the general confidence in the honesty of our statements in the public press.

Everyone who read our advertisement knew that great bargains awaited them.

They had faith in our statements, and they were not disappointed.

The great Mid-Summer Sale will swing into a new week with every attractive feature at its best.

Many were probably unable to attend Saturday.

The same bargains will be here this week. We'll care for all comers to the best of our ability—and our ability is good.

NORWICH AND VICINITY

CITY NEWS

H. W. Murphy was appointed postmaster at Moosup Saturday.

Rev. Dr. Pratt and Rev. C. W. Morrow exchanged pulpits Sunday morning.

The Putnams will play against the Clippers on the Greeneville grounds Saturday.

Mr. John McCarty, principal of Worcester academy, Vinita, Indian Territory, arrived in this city Sunday morning.

S. L. Geisthardt, of Lincoln, Neb., well remembered here as a former academy student, is visiting his parents at Preston City.

The members of the John McNamara Outing club, with the aid of Mr. McNamara's rabbit dog, captured a fox at Fort Point Sunday.

The summary of The Weekly Record for the past week credits Norwich with eight real estate sales and real estate mortgages of $965.

Mrs. B. W. Yerrington and daughter returned from a visit to New York on Saturday afternoon, and were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Barr.

On Tuesday evening St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Benevolent society will hold their semi-annual meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing term.

The Universalist Sunday school announces their annual picnic to Watch Hill tomorrow by the steamer Ella. Tickets may be procured of the committee on the wharf.

Fannie Bloodgood, the variety actress whose home was formerly in this city, is about to make extensive improvements in the cottage which she owns at Crescent Beach.

On Sunday next the "Merry Bachelors" of this city, with their friends, will make an excursion to New Haven on steamer City of Richmond, leaving this city at 8.45 a. m.

The Rev. Benjamin Bacon of Oswego, N. Y., has received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Adelbert college. Mr. Bacon is a son of the Rev. Leonard Woolsey Bacon, D. D., of Norwich.

A five-year-old son of Mr. J. Palmer Story of River avenue, fell from a wall on Laurel Hell, Friday, severely cutting his forehead and the left side of his face. The boy's injuries, although painful, are not serious.

Mrs. C. B. Kinne, who is well known in this city as the mother of Prof. Charles Kinne of the famous Chicago University, will leave Tuesday for a protracted visit with friends in Dayville, Conn.

The Norwich Consolidated base ball team was defeated by the White Rock club Saturday 16 to 3. Callahan and Snow were the Norwich battery. The Clippers meet the White Rocks in a couple of weeks.

The acolytes of St. Patrick's church, whose duties require their presence at the morning services every day in the year, were given a pleasant outing at Gardner's Lake Saturday by the pastor of the parish, the Rev. P. M. Kennedy.

Veterinary Surgeon Hyde performed a delicate operation on the horse of E. C. Walker, the well known Willimantic turf man, Friday, which promises to be entirely successful. It was too sensitive work for the Thread City surgeons to undertake.

Miss Myra Parker, Miss Lillian Cossent and Misses Mabel and Mary A. Hovey go to Webster today where they will be the guests of their companion in the Normal class of the Free Academy, Miss Maud Joslyn, at her cottage on the shore of the picturesque lake Chaubunagungamaug. The young ladies will call it Webster lake, until they get acclimated.

"Old Sol" for the past day or two has had on his best hay making smile, and the farmers hereabouts are making the most of it. A few more days of the same kind will see a large amount of hay housed in good condition. The crop appears to be panning out much better than was expected two weeks ago, and except on very dry land will be an average crop.

Robert J. Cook, the coach of the Yale crew, who went away for a few days for pleasure on the yacht Mohegan just after the Yale-Harvard race on the Thames, came back to New London Friday to prepare for returning to Philadelphia. Mr. Cook has little to say about the crew, whose victory can in large measure be attributed to their training under his watchful eyes. He is pleased with what the crew did and gives them full credit for their splendid work.

Fishermen in the waters in the vicinity of the Race are in high glee over the fact that bluefish have struck in in fair quantities. Large parties are going out daily and upon returning report fine fishing. The sport of trolling for blues is not exceeded in popular taste by any form of fishing. Bluefish as they run this year are especially fine, being unusually firm and of good size.

A citizen who went on the excursion on the City of Richmond, Saturday, nearly came to grief. He thought he recognized a friend sitting with his back turned, and rushing up to him struck him furiously as a salutation. The supposed friend suddenly turned about, justly indignant, and revealed to the astonished assailant an entire stranger. It took the Norwich man some minutes to assure him of his mistake and avert a serious quarrel.

A Bicyclist Bitten.

There are chances enough about Norwich for the enforcement of the Connecticut dog statute. Saturday night a truculent Coraingtown Newfoundland implanted his teeth in Mr. H. E. Patrick's calf as he was bicycling across Preston bridge. Dr. Tillinghast cauterized the wound, and no serious results are feared. The dog will probably be killed.

TAFTVILLE.

The ball game played here Saturday afternoon between the Norwich Town and second nine of Taftville, was won by the former by a score of 9 to 4.

Service at the Sheltering Arms.

Rev. A. W. Kingsley, pastor of the Central M. E. church, conducted a very interesting service at the Sheltering Arms, Norwich Town, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Kingsley was assisted in the service by a chorus of mixed voices formed from the members of the Epworth league of the Central church, who, under his leadership, rendered a few gospel selections very acceptably before and after the discourse. The discourse was founded on words found in Heb. 11.8 and was delivered in Mr. Kingsley's usual interesting and impressive manner.

"The Crucifixion."

From the first, the illustrated lectures upon the life of Christ, given by the Rev. Dr. Harr in the Central Baptist church, have gained in interest as the successive incidents in the life of the Saviour have been typified. Sunday evening's lecture portrayed the crucifixion, the most touching chapter of the gospels. The views of the agony upon the cross, until the moment when the cry "It is finished," proclaimed the death of the Son of God, would in themselves have been sufficient to touch the heart more deeply than words.

The resurrection and ascension will form the subject of the last lecture.

Foot Mangled in a Mowing Machine.

While running across the meadow of W. T. Williams Saturday morning, the Rev. Percy Barnes, pastor of Grace Episcopal chapel, Yantic, was caught in the teeth of a mowing machine operated by Charles Stoddard, mangling his left foot badly. Dr. G. R. Harris rendered medical service.

Mr. Barnes at the time was endeavoring to catch the horse of W. F. Bogue, marketman, which was running away. The wagon was overturned and wrecked and the contents strewn about the street before the animal was stopped. Mr. Barnes will be confined to his house several weeks.

Death of Mrs. A. S. Spalding.

A large number of friends will deplore the sudden death of the wife of City Clerk A. S. Spalding at their home in the Jennings block, Laurel Hill avenue, at 9.30 o'clock Sunday evening.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Satchell, who removed from this city a few years ago to Denver, Col. Mrs. Spalding was a lady whose rare personal qualities and traits of character and many graces of mind and person endeared her to the hearts of all who knew her. A young daughter survives her.

Mrs. Spalding was born and brought up in this city. Sunday evening about 9 o'clock she complained of sick headache and went to her room up stair. Fifteen minutes later a neighbor who was waiting below for Mr. Spalding to return home, heard a noise from the chamber above and going at once to the room found Mrs. Spalding in a dying condition. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death.

DIED.

ELLITHORPE—In Chicago, Ill., July [illegible], Mrs. Alvin Ellithorpe, sister to Mrs. [illegible] E. Whaley of this city. Willimantic and Stamford papers please copy.

SPALDING—In this city, Sunday, July 9, suddenly, Minnie Ella, wife of Archibald S. Spalding aged 24 years.

30 FIREMEN KILLED!

Frightful Accident at the World's Fair.

COLD STORAGE WAREHOUSE BURNED!

Members of the Department Meet a Horrible Death

JUMPED FROM A HEIGHT OF 80 FEET.

Clerks and Employes Crushed by the Falling Cupola.

25,000 EYE WITNESSES.

World's Fair Stables Also Burned—The Fire Department Paralyzed—Names of the Firemen Who Were Saved—[illegible] Missing Ones.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, CHICAGO, July 10.—No less than thirty firemen lost their lives at the World's fair this afternoon just before 2 o'clock. At that time the cold storage warehouse just south of the [illegible] caught fire in the top of the cupola [illegible] feet [illegible] the ground. Through this [illegible] the chimney [illegible]. The cupola is built of wood, overlaid with staff, and is highly ornamented with columns and pillars. Near the top is a landing. The [illegible] about thirty feet above this. [illegible] about [illegible] of them climbed up the ladder to the landing and were preparing to throw streams of water to the burning [illegible] the fire, which had eaten its way [illegible] to a point below [illegible] stood, broke out with [illegible] on all sides. An [illegible] went up from the lips of [illegible] people who had assembled about the building to see the fire. About five of the men saved themselves by sliding down the rope. Before the others could follow the fire had burned away the rope. The unfortunate fellows who remained [illegible] of the cupola were doomed. It was beyond the [illegible] and the crowd [illegible] the [illegible]

The flames ran higher and higher until the men were almost concealed from view. At this moment one of the [illegible] for out into the air and was dashed to pieces on the roof fully eighty feet [illegible]. Another and another followed the example, [illegible] by the awful heat, and [illegible] preferring to be killed by a fall [illegible] to death. [illegible]

[illegible] all the fire engines on the grounds had been called and aid had been [illegible] Hyde Park, but the main portion of the fire was far above the reach of the streams of water. It is probable that the entire building will be destroyed. [illegible] and is stored with [illegible] The whole loss will probably reach half a million.

It was built and occupied by the Hercules Iron Works company, manufacturers of refrigerating machinery.

[illegible] is reported that three women and several clerks, employed in the office of the [illegible] on the third floor were crushed to death by the falling cupola.

The wind is blowing strong from the [illegible] and is [illegible] the flames from one end of the building to another. If the wind does not change to the south or west the fire will probably be confined to the cold storage, but if the wind should veer around it would sweep directly into the [illegible] building after destroying the Pennsylvania railroad building.

The firemen at this writing are ending their way [illegible] the lower building.

About ten minutes after the fire broke out both cupolas of the north side fell into the building, carrying the third floor down to the second. Thirty or forty streams are playing upon the building from all sides but with no effect whatever.

The tower fell at 1.55 p. m., and as it crashed down upon the bodies of the [illegible] men lying upon the roof it went through to the bottom, taking with it all the bodies of the unfortunate men who had just made their terrible leap. This carried the tower and the bodies of the firemen through the roof into the furnace of flame that raged underneath.

About 20 firemen who had gotten on the roof to remove the bodies of their unfortunate comrades were caught in this second death trap. But one ladder was to be had and they endeavored to get away from the roof by this route. A number of them fell to the ground, a distance of nearly 100 feet, and it is thought several were carried down by the caving of the roof.

The fire department is almost hopelessly paralyzed by the loss of its men.

The Columbian Guards are endeavoring to keep the crowds back, but it is impossible, and an excited multitude, increased now to 25,000 people, surrounds the building at a safe distance.

The firemen who slid down the rope and were saved were as follows:

Captain Fitzpatrick, horribly burned, several bones; will die.

S. S. Norman, hands and face badly burned and one leg badly burned.

Captain Barry, arm broken, face and chest burned.

Wm. Leashan, face blistered and hands burned, one leg broken.

John Davis, face and hands burned and back sprained.

Gus Martin, a Columbian guard, hands [illegible] from sliding down a [illegible] also.

[illegible], a guard, of Fincastle, Va., face and hands burned.

Several small hotels on Stony Island avenue, outside the Fair grounds and just west of the cold storage warehouse, caught fire from the flames and are now burning.

The warehouse is now a complete ruin and it is doubtful if the remains of the firemen who lost their lives in the flames will ever be recovered.

The World's Fair stables, south of the cold storage warehouse, also burned, but no lives were lost there.

[illegible] the fire can be said to be confined to the cold storage building. From 20 to 30 firemen have been injured and at least 20 of them have been killed.

The east wall of the building has just fallen in and there is only the west and part of the north wall left standing. There is no doubt, however, that the fire will be held within the bounds of the cold storage building. The buildings on the west side of the burning building were badly scorched, but these buildings are outside of the grounds, the cold storage warehouse being just along the west enclosure of the grounds.

The other World's fair buildings proper are not injured or even scorched. On the northeast side of the destroyed structure is the Pennsylvania railroad building. This was not damaged any. All other structures to the east and southeast were equally well taken care of by the firemen, who kept streams playing constantly upon them.

It is impossible to get the names of the firemen who have been burned to death. There are many wild rumors that the death list will exceed that given above, but it is safe to say that thirty dead will cover the number of those who met such an awful fate. It may be thought that some of the injured may succumb to their injuries, but that is yet problematic.

Marshal Murphy, who is in charge of the firemen and who was aloft himself, is badly injured. He made his escape by a frightful slide down a rope through the smoke and jumped to an adjoining roof.

The following firemen are missing: Jas. A. Garvey, James H. Freeman, G. H. Blaisdell, W. F. Mahoney, M. Dirca, W. A. Huff, A. L. Otto, M. F. [illegible], F. B. Bellingburg, W. G. Stern.

Captain Kenyon had a leg broken. Captain Fitzpatrick undertook to slide down a rope, holding the rope with his left hand, his right arm being broken. Marshal Murphy, seeing Fitzpatrick's predicament, attempted to reach him with a ladder, but Fitzpatrick, losing hold of the rope, fell and it is supposed will die of the injuries.

A company of regulars has been sent to the scene to aid the Columbian Guards.

The paint shop, a building 100x200 feet and two stories high, is on fire in many places and will also go.

A panic was narrowly averted when some person started a rumor that the ammonia tank in the building was about to explode. Women and children rushed pell mell from the building, many of them fainting, while the men in endeavoring to keep them quiet, added to the excitement by their shouts.

The New York and Boston "Flyer" to be Further Improved.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., July 10.—An article in one of the Boston papers on Saturday stated that the five-hour "flyer" between New York and Boston had been unsuccessful, so far, and that there was a probability that the train would be withdrawn. Vice President Tuttle said, with reference to these statements: "The 'flyer' are running with as much success as could be expected of a new train of such a description. The public have demanded for a five-hour service between the two cities, and from present appearances are going to support it most heartily. Instead of planning to withdraw these fast trains, the company is devoting every means in its power to improve the service [illegible] with a view to [illegible] the comfort of the [illegible] public. You can say, emphatically, the five-hour service will not be discontinued."

Hoodlums Raid a Synagogue.

PATERSON, N. J., July 10.—A gang of hoodlums stormed the synagogue of Biual Israel in Paterson street, Paterson, Sunday night while a congregation of 100 Polish Jews were at worship. The boys broke down doors and assailed the worshippers with stones and clubs.

Abram Marcus, a Polish Jew, had his leg broken with a stone thrown by one of the invaders. In the melee Peter Pawlyski, one of the rowdies, was knocked down by a chair in the hands of one of the congregation and the whole side of his face was crushed in.

In the general fight that ensued lights were turned out and the congregation left the boys in possession of the synagogue, which is on the top floor of a two story dwelling house, the lower portion of which is occupied by baths. The row was all over before the police arrived.

End of the World Predicted.

TIPTON, O., July 10.—This little city and the surrounding country is in a state of excitement that borders on frenzy, the result of the fervid meetings of a peculiar sect called the "Heavenly Recruits." The sect appears to have sprung from the ground, as they were never heard of here before. There are twelve preachers, or evangelists, who hold services every hour, night and day. The meetings are held in a big tent and the preaching is in the [illegible] style.

They have made scores of converts, who are wild in advocacy of the new religion. Several persons have become insane, and the wildest scenes are constantly enacted. The speedy end of the world is predicted.

A Noted Pedestrian Arrives.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Among the passengers arriving on the La Champagne Sunday was George Gendin, a noted French pedestrian and journalist, who has come to the United States as a correspondent of "Le Journal," of Paris. M. Gendin is 41 years old and heavily built. He began his trip by walking from Paris to Havre, taking only two days to cover the distance. On the steamship he walked fifteen miles every day, besides assisting the sailors in holy-stoning the decks and doing other work about the ship. After a few days in New York he will set out to walk to Chicago by way of Toledo. He says he can walk fifty miles a day for an indefinite length of time. Last year he walked from Paris to St. Petersburg.

Partial Shut Down of a Blanket Mill.

ROCHESTER, N. H., July 10.—On account of orders received by the agent of the Norway Plains Manufacturing company, a partial shut down will result. The company manufactures fine blankets and cashmeres, operating three large mills, besides having several smaller structures for the manufacture of boxes and the finish of goods. Hereafter mills No. 1 and 2 will be run forty and sixty hours per week respectively, while No. 3 will be closed indefinitely as soon as the finishing mill is under way.

Charged With Firing the Eddy Block.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 10.—Benjamin F. Learned of Worcester, 19 years old, was arrested in this city this afternoon, charged with setting fire to the Eddy block at Webster, which was burned with heavy loss July 4. Emory Lawrence, aged 27 years, of Webster was arrested in that town this morning, charged with the same offense. Learned is the owner of the store in which the fire originated.

THE SILVER ACT OF 1890.

Text of a Letter from John Sherman to Congressman Walker.

THE DEFECT IN VIEW.

Writer Will Never Agree to a Revival of State Bank Paper Money.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 10.—Congressman Walker makes public the following letter from John Sherman, which he received today:

MANSFIELD, O., July 8, '93.

The Hon. J. H. WALKER.

My Dear Sir: Yours of the 28th ult. enclosing a copy of your statement of the course that led Mr. Conger, yourself and me to agree with great reluctance to the silver act of 1890, is received. An answer has been delayed by my absence at Chicago.

You clearly and correctly state the history of that act. The bill that passed the house provided for the purchase of four million five hundred thousand dollars' worth of silver at gold value. The senate struck out this provision and provided for the free coinage of silver, or the purchase of all that was offered at 129 cents an ounce. As conferees acting for the two houses, it was our duty to bring about an agreement, if practicable, without respect to individual opinion. The result of the [illegible] was to reject free coinage and to provide for the purchase of four million five hundred thousand ounces of silver at its gold price—a less amount than was proposed by the house. The provisions defining the public policy of the United States in respect to the parity of the two metals, the authority to stipulate in contracts for payments in gold, the limit of the issue of treasury notes to the actual cost of silver bullion, at gold value, and the repeal of the act providing for the monthly coinage of silver dollars when we already had three hundred million silver dollars in the treasury that we could not [illegible] were all in the line of sound [illegible].

Another object [illegible] in view was to secure a better [illegible] to our currency, then being reduced by the compulsory retirement of national bank notes on the payment of U. S. bonds. This would have been [illegible] provided by [illegible] both gold and silver, but such a [illegible] would not then be secured. [illegible] fully justified the compromise.

But the great controlling interest why we agreed to it was that it was the only expedient by which we could defeat the free coinage of silver [illegible] regarded the measure [illegible] as a [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] people as a [illegible] of the wages of labor [illegible] of our currency to the [illegible] to the [illegible] of gold and [illegible] of all our business [illegible] with the great commercial nations of the world.

To defeat such a [illegible] with evil, I [illegible] to buy the product of American [illegible] at its gold value. And this the law [illegible] provided, guarded as far as we could. [illegible] amount of the [illegible] from the silver producing states. This we could only do by buying the product of those states.

It was a costly purchase. The silver we purchased is not worth as much as we paid for it, but this loss is insignificant compared to our gain by the defeat of the free coinage of silver.

It is said there was no danger of free coinage, that the president would have vetoed it. We had no right to throw the responsibility upon him. Besides, his veto would have the [illegible] in force. We did not believe that his veto would dispel the craze that then existed for free coinage. Many people wanted the experiment tried. The result of the experiment of buying four and a half million ounces of silver a month, at its market value will be the best antidote against the purchase of all the silver of the world at one-third more than its market value.

What we want is relief from further compulsory purchase of silver. I assume that the republican senators and members who after full conference agreed to our report, will, in the main, vote for the repeal of the compulsory purchase of silver bullion, and hope that our political friends who felt bound by the local interests of their constituents to advocate that clause of free coinage will be convinced by the experiment made that the only position we can occupy in the interests of our constituents is with large fixed standards of value and the use of both metals maintained at par with each other on a ratio as near as possible to their market value.

I never for a moment have regretted the passage of the act of 1890, commonly called the Sherman act, though, as you know, I had no more to do with it than the other conferees. There is but one provision in it that I would change. That is to strike out the compulsory purchase of a given quantity of silver and give authority to the secretary of the treasury to buy silver bullion at its market price when needed for subsidiary coinage. Each provision should be made for full legal tender United States notes supported by reserves of both gold and silver and backed by the credit and wealth of the United States, but these are grave subjects for separate consideration.

I, for one, will never agree to the revival of state bank paper money which cannot be made a legal tender and which on the first sign of alarm will disappear or be lost in the hands of the holder.

Very respectfully yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

Shot by a Telegraph Girl.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Late last night, Nellie Horton, a telegraph operator, shot and instantly killed C. R. Hogan, an Oakland motorman. It is conjectured that she demanded Hogan to fulfill promises and marry her, and he refused. The woman is in custody.

Heard from in New York.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 10.—Samuel Holstein, brother-in-law of Morris Levy, the butcher who mysteriously disappeared on the Fourth of July, has received a letter from him in New York, stating that he is looking for work.

Burton Parker Appointed Private Secretary by U. S. Consul Hyde.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 10.—United States Consul Frank R. Hyde of this city has appointed Mr. Burton Parker, third son of the Rev. Dr. E. P. Parker of the South church, private secretary, and the two gentlemen will sail for Lyons on Tuesday, August 1.

Mr. Parker is 24 years of age. He was a member of the class of 1893 at Trinity college, graduating in June. He won several literary prizes during his course and belonged to Delta Psi. Mr. Parker is a member of the South church and is connected with the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the Revolution. He is a popular society man in this city and his appointment by Consul Hyde will be regarded here with decided favor.

Terrible Fight Between Two Colored Men at Bridgeport.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 10.—Two colored men, Henry Woods and Edward Brown, fought in this city today. Woods drew a razor and slashed his opponent frightfully. One gash tore Brown's head open to the skull. It extended from the top of his head to the point of his chin on the left side and cut the left ear in two. Another gash laid open Brown's right wrist, severing all the arteries and another in the left side laid bare four ribs. It is thought he cannot recover.

Woods fled and a large number of the local force of officers and detectives are in pursuit of him.

The affair was the result of jealousy. Brown accused Woods of starting stories derogatory to Mrs. Brown's character.

[illegible] Accident at Savin Rock.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 10.—Scoville Atwood, aged 30, was killed in a runaway accident at Savin Rock tonight. His team became unmanageable, and in trying to gain control of the animals, he fell between the whiffletrees of the wagon. He received a kick in the temple from one of the horses and this caused his death. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

It Caused Great Surprise.

HARTFORD, July 10.—Information of the elopement and marriage of Miss Rose Standish, daughter of [illegible] Miles Standish of Wethersfield, and Leon C. Leach, a young farmer of that town, leaked out today.

The matter caused great surprise as the young lady was very handsome and belonged to one of the first families of that place.

EASTERN CONNECTICUT.

STONINGTON POINTS.

A Celebrated Case—An Old Horse—Forty Sword Fish—A Silver Wedding.

The celebrated case of the State of Connecticut vs. Benjamin Hewitt, of Mystic, the defendant being charged by the society with a long name, with cruelty to his cattle, by reason of having them dehorned, was called in the Town court, before Judge Stanton, Saturday. At the request of the defendant the case was adjourned until Saturday morning of this week, at 9 o'clock. The case is exciting great interest in this section.

The railroad company [illegible] is [illegible] from the Northwest [illegible] to the [illegible], and, although he has now outlived his usefulness in [illegible] years been an important factor in railroad operations here. A quarter of a century ago this animal was the motive power that accomplished all the switching at the steamboat yard here. People that see a switching engine almost constantly employed in doing the work at the present time, wonder how it could have been done formerly by means of this horse. Of course the volume of business done here has largely increased during late years, but those that remember the amount of labor performed by this horse wonder at the endurance he displayed. He is of small size, but a sturdy built and showy animal. He is now thirty-six years of age, yet he looks as sleek as a young and well kept thoroughbred. By the railroad men he is looked upon with veneration. He has grown gray in the service of the company and they appreciate his devotion to their interests by kindly caring for him in his declining years.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Ryan celebrated their silver wedding Saturday evening, at their residence on Main street. A large party of their friends assembled, and a pleasant time was the result. A bountiful collation was served. The presents were numerous and valuable.

Stonington is, undoubtedly, the best point in Connecticut from which to conduct sword fishing. The natural location of the place gives it this distinction, as it is the nearest point to the home of the fish, and also a place from which the fish can be readily shipped to Boston, which is acknowledged to be the best market for this variety of fish in the United States. The above advantages induce many of our fishermen to make the capture of this variety of fish their business during the month of June and July. Nearly every fishing boat owned here, of sufficient size to be available for sword fishing, has attached to its bow-sprit what is known, in fisherman's parlance, as a "pulpit." This is an iron frame of sufficient size to allow of a man standing therein, from which position he plunges an iron into the coveted fish when opportunity offers. To this iron is attached a long coil of rope at the end of which is a small barrel perfectly air tight. As soon as the iron is darted into the fish the rope and barrel are cast overboard and the fish left alone to flounder and die. When the fish is thought to be dead a small boat is lowered and the fishermen row to the barrel, take it aboard and haul in the line until they come to the fish, which is towed to the large boat and taken aboard by means of a tackle. Often the fishermen are deceived and row up to the fish while they are alive. Here they encounter danger, as the fish are gamy and armed with the dangerous sword that projects about four feet from their nose, they make a desperate resistance. In this case they find no difficulty in piercing through the bottom of the boat containing the fishermen. In this way many fishermen have been severely wounded, and sometimes even a worse fate befalls them. Only two years ago a man was killed in this way near Block Island.

Saturday forty sword fish were brought to Stonington for shipment to Boston. They weighed from two hundred to four hundred pounds each. The wholesale price now is about eight cents per pound.

Mr. William Gates captured a sun fish Saturday, weighing four hundred pounds.

OTHER GAMES.

Merritt's Wild Throw Was a Feature of the Game at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, July 10.—Cuppy fooled away a game this afternoon by indifferent pitching, after Cleveland had won it two or three times for him. In the seventh inning a funny incident occurred, when Merritt made a wild throw to second base, with no one there to guard the base, and three runs were scored, the ball going to the fence. Attendance, 100. Score:

Get Married Now, and Save 50c.

People who went to marry on the most economical terms for the marriage license fee had better marry before July 30, as on that date the fee to be paid the town clerk will be $1, under the new law instead of 50 cents. A new form of statement will be prepared by the state board of health, to be signed by the applicant.

YACHT ABANDONED.

Sloop Gypsy of the Yale Yacht Club at Anchor in New London.

The sloop yacht Gypsy is anchored off the Pequot house, New London, and appears to be abandoned. A small skiff is hitched astern and Policeman Gaffney who went aboard found in the cabin two pairs of trousers, one of which contained a diary with the address of G. McClure, Yale college, written therein. Letters were also found addressed to Slocum Howland at No. 108 Wall street of New Haven.

It has been learned that the Gypsy is a small dark looking craft well known in the harbor and is one of the fleet of the Yale Yacht club. A few days before the Yale-Harvard race the Gypsy put out from Morris Cove with four students aboard whose names could not be ascertained. They were off for New London they said. Clark and Howland were probably two of the men aboard.

YOUNG TEMPERANCE SOLDIERS.

Interesting Closing Exercises of the Loyal Legion.

The Loyal Temperance Legion was a happy company Saturday afternoon. A few friends were present to witness the closing exercises, which consisted of temperance songs,—sweetly and spiritedly sung,—temperance readings by the girls and recitations by the boys. A lesson reviewing the term's study upon "Alcohol and the Body" gave good evidence that the time had been faithfully devoted to the science of temperance. A striking feature of the lesson was the separation of alcohol from about a gill of cider. The retort stood upon the table where all could see the alcohol fall into the receiver drop by drop.

At the close of the lesson a little cup was filled with the alcohol and a lighted match applied to it. It instantly sent a flame half an inch in diameter and burned steadily till it was consumed.

At this point the legion asked their leader to pause for a moment, and in a pretty little speech by one of the boys thanked the Woman's Christian Temperance union for giving them such opportunities, and their leader for her patience, and untiring efforts for them, and presented the leader and each member of the committee with a nice little token of their love and gratitude.

A resolution was passed by the legion thanking Captain James Walker for the delightful sail he gave them on his boat two days before.

A gymnastic exercise with wands completed the programme and the Loyal Temperance legion adjourned till autumn.

CONNECTICUT'S BUTTER.

Fifteen State Creameries and Ten Private Dairies Exhibit at World's Fair.

The Rockville correspondent of The Hartford Times gives the following interesting facts [illegible] Connecticut's butter exhibit at Chicago:

A. M. Bancroft, superintendent of the Ellington creamery, has started for Chicago, in charge of the state exhibit of July butter, which will be made at the World's fair. There are fifteen state creameries and ten private dairies that make an exhibit, and the total amount of butter shipped was about one ton. It was shipped in a refrigerator car direct from New York to the fair grounds. The Ellington creamery sent a large and attractive exhibit. Considerable of the butter was put up in fancy boxes, lined with fringed paper, tied with ribbons, etc., and included many fancy designs. After the exhibit is over the butter will be sold in Chicago.

Another exhibit of Connecticut butter will be made in October, when it is expected that many private dairies will send butter.

CHICAGO'S SONS OF CONNECTICUT.

Our State Building to be Fitted Up for a Club After the Fair.

There is a prospect that the Connecticut state building at the World's fair will become the property of the Sons of Connecticut of Chicago after the fair. It had been purchased by Mr. [illegible] St. John, formerly of this state, and a gentleman who retains a great love for the land of his birth, and it is understood the purchase was made for the society. Mr. St. John, who is president of the association, is general manager of the Chicago, St. Paul & Pacific railroad. A few days ago the members entertained their lady friends at the Connecticut building and added fifty names to the membership.

The society is growing and the idea of fitting the state building for a club house is being received with satisfaction and is evidently increasing the interest in the society. The plan is to take down the structure, transport it to some appropriate location and set it up in a handsome manner. The lower portion will be used for a club and the upper rooms for the janitor and his family. There is quite a considerable colony of Connecticut people in Chicago and it is believed that the club plan will prove an incentive to the promotion of acquaintanceship and sociability among them. The members will take their families occasionally to the club house, and thus acquaintanceship and good cheer among the sons and daughters of Connecticut in the great city by the lake will be promoted and fostered.

ACTING PROSECUTOR.

A New Salaried Office [illegible] Worth $1,200 a Year.

Following is a bill passed by the legislature:

GENERAL ASSEMBLY,
January Session, 1893.
[Senate Bill No. 261.]
CHAPTER CCLVI.

An Act Concerning the Criminal Court of Common Pleas for New London County.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Assembly convened:

Sec. 1. The judge of the criminal court of common pleas within and for New London county shall appoint a prosecuting attorney for said court, who shall hold office for the term of four years and until his successor is appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by said judge for incompetency or other good cause. The powers and duties of said prosecuting attorney in all criminal causes brought to said court shall be the same as those of state's attorneys in the superior court. Said judge shall fill any vacancy in said office, the person appointed to fill the same holding office for the term of four years; and whenever said prosecuting attorney shall be absent or disqualified to act in any case pending before said court in which the state is a party, said judge may appoint a special attorney for the prosecution of said cause.

Sec. 2. The salary of said prosecuting attorney shall be twelve hundred dollars per annum.

Sec. 3. The judge of the court of common pleas within and for New London county, while engaged in official duties as judge of said court, or as judge of said criminal court of common pleas, shall be allowed his necessary expenses not exceeding three hundred dollars per annum, said expenses to be paid quarterly by the treasurer upon the audit of the comptroller.

Sec. 4. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Sec. 5. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Approved June 30, 1893.

The Corean does not have the trouble of carrying his umbrella in his hand. It is like an ordinary umbrella in shape, only it is smaller and has no handle. It is made of oiled paper, and is worn on the head over the hat.

The perfectly round pearls are the most valuable; next come the pear-shaped and lastly the egg-shaped.

THOUSANDS IDLE.

Iron Mines in Lake Superior District Closed.

ALL BUSINESS MUCH DEPRESSED.

At Least Twelve Thousand Men Out of Employment.

ST. PAUL, July 10.—There is widespread and general suffering in the several established iron ranges of the Lake Superior district. It is the worst since the black days of 1873. There is scarcely a mine on the Marquette, Menominee or Gogebic ranges that is not either completely closed or greatly curtailed in operation.

Miners have been thrown out of work for the past three weeks, and now the number of idle men in these ranges is at least 3000 greater than it was less than a month ago. This tremendous non-employed force decreases in like ratio the business of the railways in that section and also of the stores and dependent industries. It is probable that in the upper peninsula of Michigan and northern Wisconsin are today out of work by reason of the closing of these mines.

Twelve Thousand Men

Miners, in many instances, were the sole support of the whole towns. There is no other possible source of income, agriculture and manufacture being practically unknown.

Most of these mines that have suspended operations are still shipping the ore that they mined and put on stock piles. Some few are continuing mining operations with day shifts. Some, however, are so completely shut down that the pumps have been taken out, and the mines will be allowed to fill with water.

OPERATIVES EXCITED.

Lowell Cotton Mills May Shut Down During Summer Months.

LOWELL, Mass., July 10.—There is considerable excitement among the operatives in the mills this morning over a rumor that the mills will shut down during the summer months, and although the agents refused to give any direct information in regard to the truth of the statements, it is evident that there is some foundation for them.

Agent Ludlin of the Merrimac company said this morning that the matter had not as yet been considered by his company, and that he had not heard any talk about it in Lowell; but that the matter had been talked of in Boston.

Mr. Ludlin stated that never since [illegible] has it been so hard to get money. Owing to the contemplated legislation on the tariff and silver question, purchasers are chary and it is hard to make collections.

Agent Cumnock of the Boott mills told the correspondent that the matter lay with the selling agents in Boston, and they alone could give information in regard to it.

Several of the mills have been making preparations for storing manufactured goods, the Tremont and Suffolk having leased the Boston and Maine sheds on Thorndike street, and the Appleton company leasing part of Colonel Percy Parker's large building on Middle street.

Agent Thomas of the Tremont and Suffolk says that the question will be settled by the selling agents of the company in Boston.

Should the mills shut down thousands of people will be thrown out of work, and the disastrous effect on Lowell can hardly be estimated.

THE GERMAN FLYERS.

Emperor William Founds a Hohenzollern Prize for Yachts.

BERLIN, July 10.—At the dinner of the Imperial Yacht club in Kiel, Emperor William announced his intention to found a Hohenzollern prize to be awarded annually at the club's regatta.

The conditions of entry would be, he said, that every competing yacht be built within the year, since the last race, in a German shipyard, from German materials and after German designs. According to the size of the victorious yacht, the prize would be 4000, 3000 or 2000 marks.

The emperor has already founded a Meteor goblet prize for the annual race between Kiel and Travemunde. The competitors will be yachts of the first and second class.

The owner of a first or second class yacht can become owner of the goblet by winning three of these races.

Hohenzollern and Meteor, the names of the events in question, are the names of the emperor's two yachts.

CHARGE OF LUNACY.

Burrows' [illegible] at the Expense of Jerry Simpson.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—In reply to the published report that Jerry Simpson, the Populist and silver man, has entered into a compact to elect Julius Caesar Burrows of Michigan speaker of the house, Mr. Burrows telegraphs the following to the Washington Post:

Regarding your telegram, would say that my friend Jerry Simpson has been suspected of entertaining some strange delusions but this last reported hallucination will, I fear, expose him to the charge of lunacy.

J. C. BURROWS.

MONTREAL EXCITED.

Trouble Caused by Preacher's Attack on Catholic Church May Be Serious.

MONTREAL, July 10.—The trouble which has grown over the attack made by the Greek preacher at the Christian Endeavor convention upon the Catholic church, threatens to disrupt the hitherto friendly relations which have existed between the English and French population of the city.

The action of the English militia companies in forming yesterday and last night and escorting the Endeavorers from the drill hall, where services were conducted, to their hotels, is roundly condemned by the thinking population.

These critics claim that this was not necessary and that the French-Canadian mob would not have attacked the Endeavorers. At all events the city this morning is almost in a state of siege. Thousands of angry and restless men are loafing about the streets, apparently waiting for a chance to fight some one or something.

The French papers are calling upon their fellow-countrymen to stand together and to protect their rights and not to submit to further insult to church or race. Many of the mob which was so furiously charged by the English last night were severely injured, and this morning a story is in circulation that one man was killed. This is, however, not generally believed, and is supposed to be circulated by the French to enlist sympathy.

At the Christian Endeavor headquarters the utmost fear is entertained that some attack will be made upon isolated bodies of the delegates before they can leave the city. Thousands are preparing to leave today, many of the number hastening their departure through fear of assault.

The preacher who caused the unfortunate outbreak is one to take the matter very quietly. He has stated that he said only what he considered his duty to state. The man is keeping very close, however, but as he is not known by the citizens he stands but little chance of being attacked.

HAS ANOTHER WIFE.

Duke of York Was Married at Malta to Naval Officer's Daughter.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The London correspondent of the New York Times telegraphs an account of a marriage by the Duke of York, who has just married the Princess Teck, to a lady at Malta a few years ago. The story is that he was married by the Roman Catholic ritual to a daughter of a British naval officer of high rank, and that there are two children by the marriage. It is quite possible, if it were necessary, to give the date of the marriage at Valetta, and even the names of the people who witnessed the ceremony.

Of course the contracting parties knew that by the royal marriage act this was really no marriage at all; but the theory is that George, who was then not in direct line to the throne, counted on his elder brother's marrying and having heirs, when his irregular connection would be accorded a quasi-sanction such as was given the Duke of Cambridge and other collateral English princes.

PUBLIC BEQUESTS.

Abbott Lawrence Wills a Part of His Property to the General Good.

BOSTON, July 10.—The will of the late Abbott Lawrence, on file in the Suffolk county probate office, contains a number of public bequests aggregating $[illegible]. Ten thousand dollars are given to the Museum of Fine Arts in trust to found a fund to be entitled the Abbott Lawrence fund, the income to be used for the purchase of pictures for the museum. To the Massachusetts General hospital is given a fund of $10,000 to establish a number of free beds.

The Social law library is given $10,000 in memory of the deceased son of the testator, Abbott Lawrence, Jr., the income to be used for the purchase of legal biographies, general legal literature and works of history for the library. The Massachusetts Historical society is given $[illegible] in trust for the publication of the collections and proceedings of the society.

INNOCENT MAN LYNCHED.

Miller the Negro Hanged and Cremated at Bardwell Not Guilty.

CAIRO, Ill., July 10.—It is now pretty generally conceded that C. J. Miller, the Springfield, Ills., mulatto who was hanged and then cremated at Bardwell, Ky., Friday afternoon, was executed upon the flimsiest circumstantial evidence, or probably no evidence at all.

Information from a trustworthy source at Wickliffe is that telegrams have been received there confirming Miller's statement as to where he was July 4 and 5.

His story was that he was at Bismarck, Mo., the morning of July 5, and no one had brought forward any evidence to the contrary. Careful inquiry has failed to disclose a single person who will say positively that he saw Miller in Bardwell or even Carlisle county that day.

Hill Has Been Speculating.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 10.—It has been discovered that Oscar E. Hill, cashier of the Commercial National bank of Ogden, is a defaulter to the amount of $[illegible], and the bank will close its doors and go into voluntary liquidation. The depositors will lose nothing, as the stockholders are among the strongest financial men in Ogden. Hill has been speculating.

Forced to Shut Down.

EASTON, Pa., July 10.—For the first time in its history, the Glendon Iron company has been forced by the depression in the iron trade to completely shut down. Nearly all the employees have been notified that their services will not be needed. It will be six months before the fires will be relighted.

Strike at Woonsocket.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 10.—Twenty-three mule spinners at the Social mill refused to work this morning until Thomas F. Conley, who had trouble Saturday with the overseer and was discharged, was reinstated. They are members of the spinners' union.

Maine Trotting Circuit.

BANGOR, July 10.—A trotting circuit is to be formed by Bangor, Dexter, Exeter, Dover and Milo, and the first race under this arrangement will probably take place in this city on Aug. 2. Horse men hereabout are taking much interest in these meetings.

Excursionists Drowned.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., July 10.—While four [illegible] excursionists were taking a sail on Sandy lake yesterday the boat capsized and Joseph Bishop and John Lyons were drowned. The others were rescued.

Lucky Canton Teachers.

CANTON, Mass., July 10.—Augustus Hemenway has invited the public school teachers here, 21 in number, to a 10-day trip to the World's fair at his expense.

MORE SERIOUS TURN.

Admiral Wandelkolk Joins the Brazilian Revolutionists.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Herald's Valparaiso correspondent cables: A more serious turn has been given the revolution in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, by the attitude of Admiral Wandelkolk of the Brazilian navy, who has joined the revolutionists and is now off the town of Rio Grande do Sul with a warship, and preparing for an attack.

It is reported that there are [illegible] men on board his ship and that he proposes to capture the gunboats sent by Brazil to defend the town, while the revolutionary land forces attack the town itself.

President Peixoto has ordered the cruiser Republica to proceed immediately to Rio Grande do Sul and give battle to the rebellious admiral. The wires have been cut and some days may pass before definite news of the operations off Rio Grande do Sul are obtained.

The correspondent says that Admiral Wandelkolk issued a manifesto to the Brazilians, calling upon the people of Rio Grande do Sul and other states to revolt against President Peixoto, whom he calls a tyrant, and not worthy to rule over the republic.

Home in the Poorhouse.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Mass., July 10.—Valentine Schmidt of this town has applied to the overseers for admission to the poor farm. He has transferred to their hands property to the value of about $6000. He is an old man, and recent family troubles have left him no way to receive proper care for himself except at the almshouse, where he will receive a comfortable home for the rest of his life.

President Takes a Sail.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 10.—President Cleveland took his first sail down the bay this forenoon, leaving at 11 o'clock, in the Ruth. Dr. Bryant believes that the trip with its change of environment will do the president a great deal of good. As Mr. Cleveland walked from Gray Gables to the boat landing he appeared somewhat lame. He moved very slowly. The weather is perfect.

Cattle Driver Dead.

RANDOLPH, Mass., July 10.—Samuel Howard died yesterday at his home on North street, aged [illegible]. Mr. Howard was well known in this section of the county. He was a cattle driver for [illegible] years from Brighton to Middleboro. During that time he has driven [illegible] head of cattle and traveled on foot [illegible] miles.

IMPROVING THE OLD.

CONTRARIETY IN INVENTION AND HOW THE RULE WORKS.

The Irreverent Inventor Seems Not to Find a New Way of Doing a Thing—Sometimes He Fails to Find a Better Way, Often He Stumbles Upon a Good Idea.

There is apt to be a fine irreverence about the inventor which leads him to suspect that any old way of doing a thing is for that very reason not the best way. Often he observes some time honored plan of working, audaciously makes up his mind to do the exact opposite and hits upon success. Guns were loaded at the muzzle for ages, until one day a man of originality thought of loading them at the other end, the preferable end on many accounts besides that of manifest convenience. The same path was trodden by the Frenchman who first put the eye of a needle near its point instead of away from its point. He little knew that he was doing a great deal to make the sewing machine a possibility.

One of the notions of the pioneer railway engineers in England was that their rails must be flanged so that the wheels of locomotives and carriages should not get off the track. But some one of skeptical mind inquired, "Why not leave the top of the rail flat, or nearly flat, and put the flange on the wheel, an easier thing to do?" Accordingly the flange was taken from the rail to the wheel [illegible] there to this day, to remind the traveler that an eastern philosopher said long ago, "To him that is well shod it is as if the whole earth were covered with leather."

It is a good many years now since steam was first used for heating buildings, and as air when warmed ascends what more natural than that steam coils should hug the floor just as the stoves before them had done? But in some of the largest factories in this country the coils are fastened not to the floor, but to the ceiling, which proves to be a better place for them. As everybody knows [illegible] by currents of air. Floor space is [illegible] saved, and the risk of gathering combustible rubbish about the coils is avoided.

In the case of [illegible] down in Watt's time and the invention of the steam engine, when [illegible] was to be housed the proper place for the fire was thought to be outside. But when big boilers came in, with pressing need that their contents be heated in the shortest time possible, it was found expedient to put the fire inside. Stephenson's locomotive, the Rocket, derived no small part of its efficiency from his knowledge as to which side of the boiler to apply flame.

On somewhat the same principle Lord Dundonald, one of the early improvers of the steam engine, forced the hot air currents under his boiler from above downward, against their natural tendency to move from below upward. In this way he made available much heat that otherwise would have been wasted. The steam engine, whether mounted on wheels or not, always keeps its fuel outside—furnace and cylinder are distinct. Today the steam engine's primacy is challenged by a motor which burns its fuel inside, the furnace being no other than the cylinder, precisely as in the barrel of a gun. So much more work does a gas engine yield [illegible] in comparison with the fuel applied, that only the [illegible] as supplied by gas [illegible] of steam [illegible]. As gas engines grow steadily larger, their margin of economy becomes so decided that it begins to pay to make gas on purpose to burn in them.

In the reduction of bauxite, the refractory ore of aluminum, it is necessary to maintain an extreme temperature. The melting point of the mineral is high, and only so much of the heat as [illegible] above that temperature does work. In the mining department of the World's fair is an exhibit showing how the modern metallurgist reduces aluminum with new economy. Instead of employing the old crucible method and applying the fire from without, he incloses the ore in a nonconducting bed, and by means of a powerful electric current applies the heat from within. Electric furnaces of this type now produce bronze and other alloys at prices which steadily fall as their market enlarges.

Not far from the mining exhibit at Chicago stands Machinery hall. When its visitors see one of the largest steam engines driving machinery with a slack belt they are wont to express surprise. Ordinary folks today think just what machinists thought a few years ago—that tightness is the effective and indeed the only feasible condition for belts. But in this case, as in a good many others, the rule of contraries has come, and with profit.

Architects as well as engineers and metallurgists have found it profitable to go into opposition where some ancient practices have been concerned. In latitudes of much fall of rain or snow the form of roof which most obviously suggests itself is the common pitched roof, resembling an A more or less broadened. Vexed by bursting rain conductors, by impromptu object lessons as to the form of avalanches, northern architects take not A, but V, duly widened, for their roof type. In winter ice and snow, caught as in a basin, cannot fall to the street. Icicles are banished, and in conductors carried through the heart of the building and kept warm by the building ice is gradually melted without a chance to do damage.—New York Sun.

New Lead Pencils Are Made.

Few people are aware of the difficulties that were surmounted in the manufacture of the common lead pencil. In the first place the graphite of which it is made is rarely found sufficiently homogeneous to allow pencil lead to be cut from it, so it is always ground to powder and then pressed into blocks. The great difficulty was to press the blocks until the graphite was hard enough to use, and for many years every effort in this direction was defeated by the crumbly nature of the material. Finally a device was employed that exhausted the air, after which the blocks were again pressed, and when this was done the material was found to be as hard as when taken from the quarry. But thousands upon thousands of dollars were spent in experiments before the result was reached.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Prevents hair from falling out.

"A number of years ago, by recommendation of a friend, I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop the hair from falling out and prevent its turning gray. The first effects were most satisfactory. Occasional applications since have kept my hair thick and of a natural color."—H. E. Basham, McKinney, Texas.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Restores hair after fevers.

"Over a year ago I had a severe fever, and when I recovered, my hair began to fall out, and what little remained turned gray. I tried various remedies, but without success, till at last I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and now my hair is growing rapidly and is restored to its original color."—Mrs. A. Collins, Dighton, Mass.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Prevents hair from turning gray.

"My hair was rapidly turning gray and falling out; one bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor has remedied the trouble, and my hair is now its original color and fullness."—B. Onkrupa, Cleveland, O.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

HOT WEATHER HINTS.

Housekeeping Made Easier if They Are Followed Out.

There are many housekeepers who never think of trying to lighten their labors during the hot weather. They do their work mechanically, realizing that it overtaxes them, but never stopping to consider whether part of it may be left undone or not. The fact that they have always done it in just such a way, that their maternal relatives for many generations did it in about the same way, and their neighbors' methods do not materially differ from theirs, they seem to accept as conclusive proof that there is no other way for them to do.

Not long ago a widower was heard to say: "Mary was as good a wife as a man could want. She never hired help to do her work," etc.

There are a great many women even in this enlightened age who would consider that praise worth striving for. Also, "You never see a speck of dirt in her house."

It is fine to be a model housekeeper, but not at the expense of one's health. If God had intended woman to be an animated scrubbing machine, don't you suppose he would have made her so that she would have been better adapted to the purpose? He made other creatures with backs that would bend without aching. If the house was intended to be of the first importance, why was Eve's first home a garden? Depend upon it, we are of more importance than our housework. We have no right to overwork when it is in our power to avoid doing so, and it is in our power oftener than we will allow ourselves to believe.

The duties of a housekeeper are especially trying during the hot weather and should be lightened as much as possible. The majority of housekeepers cannot get away even for a week's vacation and are too tired to go away for a day or two. To those on farms there are added duties that must be attended to just when the housekeeper is most in need of rest, yet there are few women who will see that because of these added duties or the weariness caused by the oppressive heat they should not attempt to keep their work up as they do at other seasons of the year.

They say, "Oh, I can't be comfortable unless all my work is done in the usual way!"

That is nonsensical and somewhat selfish. They imagine that they cannot, and never stop to think whether the rest of the family will be comfortable when the housewife is ill or if they [illegible] comfortable when she is cross from overwork.

There ought to be a law preventing housewives from ironing during dog days. Such a law would necessitate a little change in the fashions, and perhaps a large supply of articles that really need ironing would be thought a necessity by some, but it wouldn't be long before women would discover that they were just as happy and just as clean as in the days when nearly one-tenth of their working hours were spent over the ironing table.

"But the baby!" exclaims a young mother. "His long white dresses must be starched and ironed."

One of the sweetest babies in the world will wear dresses of cheesecloth this summer, which will not be ironed or boiled. If his mother cannot take a vacation, she will at least take a nap each day while the baby sleeps, and in many ways will contrive to lighten her labor during the hot weather.—Philadelphia Times.

A Tourist Hat.

One of the needs of the present season is a tourist hat that can be used for various purposes, something not too elaborate for railway traveling, but yet smart enough to wear about the exposition grounds and for the thousand and one little occasions incident to the summer's occupation of sightseeing. There are chips and basket braids that are particularly desirable for this purpose, also open work braids that may be made up over lace frames lined with plain or figured lace and trimmed with soft silk or knots of ribbon and wings. As a trim, useful, year-in-and-year-out decoration for a hat there is nothing equal to the pretty little wings that are brought out in such variety. Dampness and dust seem to have no effect on them, and they are always stylish as well as convenient.—New York Ledger.

A Cunning Tribute to Boston Women.

The 25 young women of Boston who went to Denver as hotel waitresses have published a card in denial of the charge that they went there to find husbands.—Boston Herald.

And yet we cannot suppose that these 25 Boston ladies will steel their souls against the appeals of any 25 eligible bachelors of Colorado who may offer them their hands, hearts and silver mines. We should think less of them if they defied, spurned, scorned these suppliants than if they surrendered at discretion. We are sure that Boston would be happy to furnish Denver with wives, just as good ones as can be found anywhere in the world.—New York Sun.

Dark Flowers on Hats.

In the very newest hats nature's exquisite coloring is disregarded, and somber blossoms take the place of brightly tinted flowers. Usually they are posed on a hat of dead white straw, and the effect is bizarre—trying, too, where nature has not been too prodigal of her gifts to the wearer. At a recent smart wedding one of the guests appeared in a large hat of pure white chip. The brim drooped slightly over the face, and clustering in front were ebon hued poppies with jet centers. There was no other trimming.

Plenty of Veiling.

As a mere matter of detail, to give an idea of the requirements of a lady of fashion whose smallest wants must be proportionately considered and attended to, it may be worth mentioning that Miss A. sent to Paris the other day for 84 yards of a particular pattern of veiling. All this and probably more of other kinds she will want to wear with her 13 new hats during the next few months.

Queen Elizabeth's prayer book, which was printed in 1574, has been sold recently. It is bound in gold and enameled and was worn by the queen suspended from her girdle.

RALLYING ROUND A CANDIDATE.

All Hands Unite to Make General Kirby Smith's Daughter a Postmistress.

Two months ago in the most obscure pigeonhole in the postmaster general's office the application of Carrie Kirby Smith was filed away. It was not weighty with reasons why she should be appointed, nor did it lay any particular claims to the attention of President Cleveland. It bore no indorsement. It was simply an humble petition that the applicant might be given the postoffice at Sewanee, Tenn. The only sentence which might recommend this prayer to Mr. Bissell was the closing paragraph:

"I am the daughter of the late General Edmund Kirby Smith."

The fair applicant kept what she had done a secret for three weeks when, having grown accustomed to her disappointment at receiving no reply, she told some one how she had dared to ask to distribute the mail to the residents about the mountain station and to the students of the University of the South, who depend on this office for their letters. Thus her secret became known, and now two generations are watching for her appointment—that which made its record along with Kirby Smith and another which has grown up with his daughter on the Cumberland plateau. When General Shoup, the Indiana sharpshooter, now occupying the chair of applied mathematics at the Sewanee university, heard that Kirby Smith's "war baby" wanted an office, he swore by all the Union and Confederate soldiers at once that she should have the place.

"We will put her in if we have to call out a regiment of war veterans to do it," he said.

And this has literally come to pass. From the Confederate Survivors' association at Nashville the humble application was made known throughout the South and finally reached the line of the Grand Army of the Republic posts in the north. The fact that a brave soldier and distinguished general had died leaving his family poor, and that his daughter now came forward seeking to aid in their support, was all that was necessary to elicit the enthusiasm of both sides. With scarcely an exception every Federal officer now living who had fought against Kirby Smith has made a personal appeal for his daughter. Soldiers of Bull Run and Manassas [illegible] letters of recommendation, while the Cove people in the mountains added their testimonials to the worth of Kirby Smith's daughter in characteristic dialect such as is found in Craddock's stories of the hills. The students of the institution where the general had so long taught "math" sent their indorsements couched in elegant diction and sophomoric phrases. The alumni associations of Sewanee throughout the country have also added their indorsements to help secure the appointment for their fair friend of old college days.

"I do not mind dying," said the general once, "if Carrie is left. She is a tower of strength."

His estimation of her seems to be correct. She no sooner found the main prop of the family gone than she began to cast about for other means of support for her mother and young brothers and sisters. With unusual courage for a woman, she decided to become the postmaster where she had so long been the undisputed belle.

Miss Kirby Smith is well known in Washington, where she has been more than once in the gayest set. There is scarcely a large city in the south or west where she has not at one time or another been the recipient of social honors. What Winnie Davis is to the armies of the Confederacy, Carrie Kirby Smith is to the soldiers of the transmississippi. To the remnants of that army she is still, even before Winnie Davis, the daughter of the war. The appointment she seeks is in the presidential gift.—Washington Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

English Critic and American Actress.

I take Ada Rehan as my type of tragedy. By this I mean that she is the highest expression of serious art. In reality she is far more than that. She is at once a tragic and comic actress. She has the light humor of the vaudeville stage and the style that no living English actress possesses at the present day. Of Ada Rehan I have said before, and I have no desire to recall my words, that she is far the finest English speaking actress in the world. This is a large order, but I mean it. And I mean it more when I find her in the plenitude of her artistic strength and by far a better actress now than when I last saw her in London. This bright butterfly is bursting out of the cocoon of German and French farce in which she has been buried for too many years. And I feel assured that when she spreads her wings America will not allow her to go back to the mere trivialities of the playhouse.

Ada Rehan is a great artist, far too great for door and window, rough and tumble farce. An actress who can play Katherine and Viola and Rosalind and Letitia Hardy and Julia as she can should not be allowed to waste her time and gifts on the spoon milk of the stage. The dramatic art of any country waits upon its artists. We cannot attempt the highest art without the greatest interpreters. Shakespeare and Goethe must go back to the bookshelves if the interpreting artists are not forthcoming. They must never go back there when genius is at hand.—Clement Scott in Chicago Tribune.

Providing For the Future.

It is recorded of a rich old English farmer that, in giving instructions for his will, he directed that a legacy of £100 be given to his wife. Being informed that some distinction was usually made in case the widow married again he doubled the sum, and when told that this was quite contrary to custom he said with heartfelt sympathy for his possible successor, "Aye, but him as gets her'll deserve it."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Mrs. Langtry is cruising in English waters in her sumptuous yacht, the White Lady. It is fitted in the most luxurious fashion, the saloon being hung with tapestries and littered with many rare objects of art.

A very popular fad just now takes the form of tinted lace. Girls who are at all clever with the paint brush color the filmy garniture in shaded tones, in this way securing a suitable trimming for short silk gowns.

THE SWEET GIRL GRADUATE.

"Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet,"
[illegible] sweet girl graduate
[illegible] properly
Decked in gown of white and blue,
Pink or mauve or soft ecru,
She will read her essay, deep
As an ancient donjon keep;
She will give advice as sage
As a woman's twice her age;
She will lead you by the [illegible]
Out of her [illegible] wrong;
She will make you think that she
Must her mother's mother be!
What a lot she thinks she knows
As from point to point she goes;
What a lot we know that she Doesn't know at all as we
Who have played life's doubtful game.
Still we love her just the same
"Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet."
—Will J. Lampton.

ACTIVITY IN KANSAS.

A Stirring Appeal That Shows That Some Women Are In Earnest.

The women of Kansas are determined to secure the ballot. Although the matter cannot be voted upon for over a year, they are actively at work and eager to do as much as their funds will permit. The following appeal is issued by the president of the State Suffrage association:

A constitutional amendment to enfranchise women will be voted upon in Kansas in November, 1894. The campaign work must begin soon and must be carried forward with vigor. The preparatory work is begun; we are keenly alive to the necessity of activity on our own part. Though the conditions are so peculiarly favorable, and foes concede and friends declare the strong probability that the amendment will be adopted, there is nothing to indicate that success will be ours without effort. A strong campaign must be inaugurated, but we cannot carry it on without help from outside the state, and I write now to urge the aid of suffragists everywhere.

We have no money. A heavy expense must be met. This work is to be done; all earnest suffragists must recognize this fact. We hope they will be moved by the necessities and the importance of this work, and by the fact that Kansas is a pivotal state, and that to suffer defeat in Kansas would hurt the cause more than [illegible] could.

We plan to open the campaign formally in September next by a great mass meeting in Kansas City, this to be followed by similar meetings in several principal cities, and then continue the work of education and agitation up to April, 1894. During the following hot months not much can be done except to place speakers at the various summer [illegible], but the [illegible] up again [illegible] and the warfare carried on with the full national American force in the field, up to election day. To be sure, the time is long, but not too long for the work waiting to be done.

We can put into the field this autumn, while the Colorado and New York campaigns go on, many home workers if we have but the means to pay their expenses. We beg those who would see this battle won to furnish us with the "sinews of war." We promise that our experience in making $1 do the work of $5 shall not be without its good use now, but that it shall enable us to make the [illegible] campaign purposes.

This struggle is not ours alone. It must so strongly affect the movement everywhere that the suffragists of every state in the Union should feel it their own concern and ought promptly to act as they should when their own interests are at stake. Defeat in Kansas would set back the cause in every other state, and success would stimulate the movement from ocean to ocean. Let every suffragist take this fact into consideration and come to the financial rescue in coming to ours.—Laura M. Johns in Woman's Journal.

A Bride's Jewels.

"The jewels of the youthful Countess Craven," says an English [illegible], "will probably excite some envy among our society ladies. It is not often that a bride of 18 can boast the possession of three such superb pieces of jewelry as the magnificent tiara of diamonds, a duplicate of the Empress Josephine's, given to her daughter by Mrs. Bradley Martin; the exquisite and very valuable necklace of three rows of perfectly matched pearls, which was the [illegible] of her grandmother, Mrs. Sherman, the widow of the founder of the family fortune, and the beautiful old diamond collarette, taken from her own wedding presents of 50 years ago by the dowager Countess Craven as a wedding gift to her son's bride. Lord Craven himself rejoices in the possession of an amber cigarette tube set about with diamonds."

Underwear For Traveling.

Combination suits are recommended for traveling, but if you are not accustomed to this style of underwear my advice is not to experiment with it away from home. If you are going to Chicago for the first time, you may not be aware of the sudden changes to which that city is subject and may not think to take a set of lightweight flannels in your trunk in addition to the gauze you will probably wear.—Exchange.

Women Graduates of London.

Of the 241 graduates of the London university who took the degree of B. A., 58 were women. In the honors list in mental and moral science, a woman stood first, as also in that of English and French. In the very difficult faculty of science, 12 out of 54 were women. In the M. B. examination, 7 out of 50 were women, and in medical faculty 3 out of 60 were women.

Make the Frocks Fireproof.

With the Fourth of July in the near distance it may be well for the careful mother to recall that the little cotton frocks of her daughter may be made fireproof by adding an ounce of alum to the last rinsing water. It would not be a bad idea to put one of last summer's dresses through that treatment for wear on Independence day.—New York Times.

Laying Traps For the Toads.

Rolfe was very much afraid of the toads which abounded in his back yard. One day we found him busily poking pins, point upward, into two toadstools that grew out by the back fence. "I guess those horrid old fellows'll not come here any more when they sit down on their stools this time," he explained.—Youth's Companion.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

A Remarkable Dog.

A remarkable dog is the property of Professor Kyle of Flushing, N. Y. The other day Professor Kyle sent one of his pupils to the Flushing bank with a deposit of $60 in $10 bills. When the boy reached the bank, he held only the empty bankbook. He had lost the money on the way. He went back to the institute, a distance of half a mile, and reported the loss to Professor Kyle. The dog was present and seemed to understand what was the matter, for his friends say he sprang out of doors with a joyous bark and galloped through the various streets back and forth and was soon lost to view. In 15 minutes he returned with the six $10 bills in his mouth, and though one of them was mutilated somewhat by the dog in his excitement it was subsequently patched up and deposited in the bank to the professor's credit with the other five.—Harper's Young People.

A Young King In School.

The young king of Servia, Alexander I, who, in consequence of his father's abdication wears a crown at the age of 16, is perhaps not a perfect monarch, but he is a scholar of no mean merit. Last year he obtained the mark of "excellent" at all his examinations and was constantly at the head of his class, of which he was the only pupil. This year shows no falling off in the zeal of the young sovereign, and we hear with considerable satisfaction that last Wednesday he passed his examination in military practice with "the highest distinction." Alexander I learned in two months how to drill the lead soldiers which the emperor of Austria sent him last New Year's day.—Saint Pablo.

Little Tommy Smith.

Dimple cheeked and rosy lipped,
With his cap rim backward tipped,
Still in fancy I can see
Little Tommy smile on me—
Little Tommy Smith.

Little, unsung Tommy Smith—
Scarce a name to rhyme it with;
Yet most tenderly to me
Something sings unceasingly—
Little Tommy Smith.

On the verge of some far land
Still forever does he stand,
With his cap rim rakishly
Tilted, as he smiles on me—
Little Tommy Smith.

Oh, my jaunty statuette
Of first love, I see you yet;
Though you smile so mistily,
It is but through tears I see
Little Tommy Smith.

But with crown tipped back behind,
And the glad hand of the wind
Smoothing back your hair, I see
Heaven's best angel smile on me—
Little Tommy Smith.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

The Game of "Hot Cockles."

A lot of fun may be extracted from the game of "hot cockles." The players are arranged in a circle, and one of them is blindfolded and compelled to kneel down in the center. The various guests then advance and mark their appreciation of her conduct by a light blow. It is for the culprit to discover the person who smote her, and the one so discovered takes the culprit's place.—New York World.

New Women May Ride Bicycles.

We saw a few days ago a pretty girl dressed in a pretty suit riding a bicycle. There was nothing unusual about this fact, except that the girl wore Turkish trousers and black gaiters to the knee, instead of the flapping skirts which wheelwomen commonly deem it necessary to put on, and which always make their wheeling ridiculous. This lady's suit consisted of a blouse waist, over which was an Eton jacket of cadet blue; full Turkish trousers, also of cadet blue; shoes with black gaiters to the knee, and a cap of cadet blue with a white band. Her movements were graceful, and if people looked at her a bit more than they ought it was to admire and commend. There was certainly nothing about the young lady's appearance or demeanor which was not modest and womanly. Why not replace skirts altogether in the riding, walking and other active out of door exercises which women, with the full approval and unanimous applause of their brethren, are engaging in more and more? There is no valid reason why it should not be done, except stupid prejudice.—Boston Transcript.

Chamois Gloves For Outing Wear.

Chamois gloves for hot weather wear are very much in vogue again this summer. For all outing purposes they have the advantage of being a protection to the hands against sun, and best of all one need not be overscrupulous about their fit. They may be rather loose, even a little ungainly, only button them snugly at the wrist. Coming in white and buff only, they are very pretty with either cloth outing gowns or cotton frocks, and when soiled they can be washed, but this must be done carefully to make the result satisfactory.—New York Herald.

She Married an Indian.

Miss Cynthia D. Rockwell, a teacher at Good Will mission, in South Dakota, has followed Miss Goodale's example and married one of the Indians in her school. His name is Richard King. Miss Rockwell is of a prominent Washington family, who strongly opposed the marriage. Mr. King is well educated, a licensed preacher and was Miss Rockwell's assistant. The couple will continue their work in the Indian schools.—Detroit Free Press.

A Relict of the War of 1812.

Mrs. Hannah Stevenson of Brookfield, Mass., received her friends and neighbors' congratulations June 8 on reaching her one hundredth birthday. Since her eighteenth year she has been addicted to the use of tobacco, smoking it regularly and also using it in the form of snuff. Mrs. Stevenson is one of the few remaining pensioners of the war of 1812, her husband having done duty in Boston as a minute man during that conflict.

Gloves at the Theater.

The expense of an evening's entertainment is doubled by the cost of a pair of gloves. The handling of a programme covers the gloves with printer's ink, which resists the ordinary processes of cleaning. The experienced theater goer folds his programme into the smallest possible compass. Its advertisements are not inspiring, and its jokes have long since resounded down the corridors of time.—Vanity Fair.

Respectability and Lunch Baskets.

I regret very much that a correspondent got excited and abusive because I quoted an interview with a lady who differed with him as to the propriety of taking a cold luncheon in the World's fair grounds. He argued that no one with self respect could or would do this. She said that Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Wheeler and scores of prominent women did so every day; that it was the way to escape extortion and bad food to boot, and no one who had to calculate closely, perhaps pinch and economize for months, to get to the fair at all, need hesitate to take a luncheon to the grounds. She added that she never went into the Woman's building without seeing scores of women eating luncheons there.

This is a free country, and the women are generally accorded the right to say what they please, and the men, too, for that matter. I hope that by the time the correspondent thought over this he was ready to go to the young lady and apologize for his very bad tempered language, no matter if he still wants to take a club to the man in the case. There are thousands of shopgirls and working girls, professional women, farmers' wives and daughters, and artists, young and old, in town and country, who have very scanty incomes, yet who feel they cannot afford to miss the fair, no matter what they must deny themselves to get there.

It is a great deal better for them to eat cold luncheons than not to go at all or run themselves in debt that will require greater privations to discharge. These are the people who go to the galleries in order to hear Joe Jefferson and Patti because they can't afford to buy dress circle seats, but they appreciate art too much to deprive themselves of something they want more than show. I honor the man or woman who keeps heart pure and life honorable, "who pays his debts, believes and says his prayers," even if he has to carry a luncheon basket through life.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Suffered Every Minute
Since I came out of the war, with catarrh in my head, chronic diarrhoea and rheumatism, says Mr. J. G. Anderson, a well known blacksmith in the employ of the Pennsylvania railroad at Scottdale, Pa. "I had pains all over me, my sight was dim, and there seemed to be floating specks before my eyes. The food I ate seemed like lead in my stomach. The rheumatism was in my right hip and shoulders. EDITORS' WEEK.

This is editors' week at Block Island. The Southern Rhode Island Press club will during the entire week be the guests of the Hon. Nicholas Ball, and will spend the days in making excursions about the island and to sea, and the evenings in listening to addresses from some of the ablest speakers in the country. Among those expected to be present are Miss Kate Field, Mrs. Frank Leslie, the Rev. Dr. Talmage, the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, the Hon. George W. Childs, Chauncey M. Depew, Foster Coates, Thomas J. [illegible], Wm. Barri, and Charles W. [illegible]. With their clam [illegible], their hops, their grand [illegible] and distinguished guests, every minute of the time will be made interesting and profitable for the vacationing editors. THE BULLETIN extends its greetings and hopes that fish diet may be thoroughly tested as a brain-bracer, and that the waves there will not, before the week is out, make the editors mistake the swell of "the sad sea waves" for an inflation of the currency. Where there is so little [illegible] and so much ocean, it is hard to anticipate results. At all events, the Rhode Island Press club will have a good time, and we should like to be there and enjoy it with them.

AWAY FOR GREENLAND.

The Peary Arctic expedition sailed from Portland, Me., on Saturday, for Whale sound, on the west coast of Greenland, where the party will have headquarters for two years, near Redcliffe, for the purpose of exploration and scientific research. The finding of the North Pole is not the main purpose of the expedition. The party will study the geography of Greenland, fix many important boundaries, and make ethnological, magnetic and tidal investigations. The personnel of the party is a guaranty that a large amount of good work is to be done. Every member has been selected because of a known desire to do such work, and of some recognized quality which will make him valuable to the expedition.

The eleven men selected are probably but one [illegible] of the number who applied for a chance to go to the Arctic regions with Peary. The world is full of men desirous of becoming adventurers if they only can get the opportunity. This was never better illustrated than in the case of Dr. Nansen, the bold Norwegian who proposes to drift through the polar basin. He had a thousand letters from all parts of the globe, and written in almost every language. Of all the applicants he selected and takes nine persons with him.

To reach the farthest north, or the pole, is not Lieut. Peary's chief aim. He will make no special sacrifice to attain that object, although the pole is but five hundred miles north of his headquarters. There has long been a rivalry among nations to have their flag planted farthest north. Three times the stars and stripes have had the honor of being planted nearest the pole, and "old glory" is still there. If the conditions are favorable, there is no doubt the Peary party will attempt to take the flag farther north than Greeley's party did.

The Falcon will return to St. Johns in September, and will go for the party in the summer of 1895.

THE SUMMER SCHOOLS.

The craze for popular education never was more intense than at the present time. The summer school is the fad for the people, for teachers, for specialists. It must be gratifying to Bishop Vincent, the originator of the great Chautauquan educational movement, with about a quarter of a million course takers and mid-summer camps in all parts of the country, to witness the imitation and spread of this great popular educational system among the Catholics who open their summer school permanently at Plattsburg this summer.

Prof. Agassiz started the summer schools for naturalists, and although at his death the Penikese island school was discontinued, the summer scientific schools are maintained along the Atlantic coasts, and natural history camps, of which the Worcester, Mass., Lake Quinsigamond camp, is the model, are held in different states.

The summer school for teachers is not so much of a success as the others, and in this state for lack of interest had to be abandoned. This is not so strange, for the summer school is not an agreeable diversion for teachers who have had forty weeks of school-going and teaching in a year.

The university extension schemes have proven much less popular in this country than in England, but they are doing their special work well, and doing much to create an interest in and taste for the pursuit of scientific studies.

All these movements indicate the unprecedented desire for knowledge which is abroad. They have already raised the average intelligence of the people and seem to be the forerunner of an approaching age of even higher average accomplishment and culture than the present.

THE MONTREAL RIOT.

The incident which nearly caused bloodshed in Montreal on Sunday night illustrates the danger of exhibiting converted Hindoos in a Catholic city. The kindly spirit in which the Christian Endeavorers were welcomed by the Mayor of Montreal, and the catholic spirit shown on every hand at the opening of the convention was a display of Christian tolerance which called forth the warmest commendations from the American press; and it was expected that the twelfth annual conference of the Christian Endeavor would tell for tolerance and Christian fellowship in the future, the world over. Almost at the close of the convention, on Saturday night, the Rev. S. V. Karmarther, a converted Hindoo; in an address, compared Roman Catholicism to the idolatry of Hindooism. The French paper of Montreal denounced this odious comparison in bitter language, and stirred up the Catholics of that city so that it was with difficulty that bloodshed was averted. The police were overpowered, and but for the prompt action of the Catholic authorities and the militia, who enforced order and protected the delegates from the assaults of an enraged people, the ending might have been a disgrace to Christendom. The officers of the Christian Endeavor promptly forbade any more comparisons of the sort, and did all they could to make amends for the insult which this improved Hindoo had been guilty of.

The Montreal authorities are to be praised for the prompt and efficient protection offered to the visiting delegates which saved them from a savage experience and the world from a spectacle which would have been a shame to all concerned in it.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The cyclone ought to be harnessed for the good of man instead of operating as a destroyer. Since Jan. 1 170 persons have been killed and a million and a half worth of property destroyed by these disastrous currents of air.

The Worcester Gazette of Monday evening said: "It does not need much newspaper reading to see that both parties in this state are locally in a chaotic condition."

Senator Hawley thinks the question "What will the extra session do?" is quite a conundrum. He has no answer for it, and is inclined to believe the extra session will last until a few days before the regular session opens.

The old Wide Awake magazine has been absorbed by the St. Nicholas and will hereafter be published by the Century company.

VOICE OF THE PRESS.

Warm Weather Talk.

It is warm-weather talk, and very silly warm-weather talk at that, which suggests the possibility of any coalition between populists and Republicans in the [illegible]. Nothing will be done to [illegible] the populist-democratic alliance.—[[illegible] Journal.

He Should See the Interior.

Secretary Smith, who has seldom been beyond the confines of Georgia and never beyond Chicago, is going to take a western trip if the extra session doesn't interfere. He should let congress take care of itself and take the trip anyhow. A secretary of the interior who has never seen the interior is sadly handicapped.—[The Minneapolis Tribune.

As Pretty but Not so Valuable.

That Montana silver statue is as handsome and as shapely as ever, but is worth a little less in actual dollars this morning than ever before.—[The Chicago Tribune.

A Question That Awaits Solution.

But what will the democratic party do? That is the disturbing question. If it abandons the policy of ripping up and exterminating protection, it must either adopt the existing republican system or formulate some definite policy which the country [illegible] appreciate. The business interests of the country will not tolerate the present uncertainty.—[The Springfield Union.

The Naval Buck Billy Goat.

The ram has proved itself so deadly that the naval battles of the future may be merely butting contests.—[The Wheeling Register.

State Liquor Saloons Unconstitutional.

The decision of the circuit court of South Carolina that the state saloon law, which has just gone into effect in that state, is unconstitutional is an unexpected shock to the friends of that novel experiment. The decision is based upon the general grounds that the measure creates a monopoly. Should this view be sustained by the supreme court the state must return to the saloon system hitherto in vogue.—[New York Press.

The Social Feature in Politics.

It is bad enough to break party ties, but it isn't half so embarrassing as to have them work around under your ears.—[Texas Siftings.

An Unacceptable Proposition.

Ex-Senator Henderson's searching review of the financial problem will generally meet with the hearty approval of eastern opinion. But when he advises an issue of $200,000,000 gold bonds to be used by the national banks for circulating notes, he makes a proposition which neither congress nor the people will ever accept or sound economic views approve. We have not yet got to the pass where the national debt must be increased or new debt manufactured merely to provide a bank-note circulation.—[Springfield Republican.

NEW MAGAZINES.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for July contains the following interesting papers: "Should the Chinese be Excluded," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll and the Hon. T. J. Geary; "The Family of Columbus," by the Duke of Veragua; "Divorce Made Easy," "Ireland at the World's Fair," "How Distrust Stops Trade," "The Anti-Trust Campaign," "Silver Legislation and Its Results," "Norway's Political Crisis," "The Fastest Train in the World," "French Girlhood," "International Yachting in 1893," "The American Correspondence of Lord Erskine," "Natural History of the Hen," "An Unpublished Speech by Lincoln," "Australian Women," "The Weakness of Mr. Davis' Strength." Published No. 3 East Fourteenth street, New York.

OUR ANIMAL FRIENDS for June is prettily illustrated, giving a story of "The Sailor's Pets on the Foreign Warships," which have recently visited this country. Other papers are "Summer Sylphs," "Intelligent Mice," "Billy the Owl," "Capers of the Gray Squirrel," and "Gyp, the Mischief Maker." The department are well filled with instructive and interesting matter. Published by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, 10 East Twenty-second street, New York.

The midsummer Cosmopolitan, the first at the new price of 12½ cents per copy, though unchanged in size, excels any other issue of that magazine in the number of its distinguished contributors, in the interest of its contents and in its overflowing illustrations by famous artists. Francois Coppee, William Dean Howells, Camile Flammarion, Andrew Lang, Frank Dempster Sherman, H. H. Boyesen, Charles DeKay, Thomas A. Janvier, Colonel Tillman, Agnes Repplier, and Gilbert Parker are a few of the names which appear on its title page. Three frontispieces, all by famous artists, furnish an unusual feature, and among the artists who contribute to the 119 illustrations adorning its pages, are Laurens, Reinhart, Fenn, Toussaint, Stevens, Saunier, Fitler, Meaulle and Franzen. The midsummer number is intended to set the pace for the magazine at its new price of 12½ cents a copy, or $1 50 a year. The magazine remains unchanged in size and each issue will be an advance upon its predecessors. Literally, every known country is being ransacked for material in the hope to bring The Cosmopolitan forward as the leading magazine in the world.

COLUMBIA.

A Lunatic at Large—Summer Visitors—Hay.

The unknown lunatic who stole the team from a Willington man from in front of Arnold's grain store in Willimantic on Wednesday of last week created considerable excitement in this place later in the day. After abandoning the team he came up the Columbia road as far as the crossroads, near the residence of Wm. E. Witter, whose house he entered, where his conduct was such that Mrs. Witter broomed him out of the house. He then jumped into the wagon of H. H. Clark, who was passing at the time, which he reluctantly left after being told that he could not ride there. His next exploit was to snatch a pitchfork from the hands of Mr. Christopher Mott, who was passing along the road, and make off across lots in the direction of Coventry. Mr. Mott pursued the fellow so persistently that he finally threw the fork to him, saying, "If you want your fork, take it."

After securing the pitchfork, Mr. Mott had some thoughts of "going for" the man, but the crazy man put his hand to his breast as if to draw a weapon and warned him to keep back, which he did; and the stranger pursued his way, no doubt, looking for other adventures. The man was evidently a "crazy one," and a bad man to be at liberty.

Miss Lena May Fuller of this place, has been engaged as soprano in the Congregational church quartette of Willimantic, which position she fills "very creditably" says The Journal of that city. Miss Fuller is to be congratulated by her many friends upon her success as a singer.

Mr. Samuel A. Little, of Manchester, spent the 4th with his parents in this place.

Mr. Cecil Gates, a secretary of the Y. M. C. A., whose work has been in the west, has joined his wife, who is spending the summer with friends in this place.

Misses Grace and Nellie Sawyer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., have joined their parents and brother, who are spending the summer in town.

Mrs. [illegible] of Enfield, is the guest of Mrs. Sophia Fuller.

Mr. [illegible] Little and family of Manchester, who have been spending several weeks by the seaside, have taken the house of Henry C. Isham, on Chestnut hill, and will spend the greater part of the summer here.

Mrs. Albert E. Brown and children have been spending several days with friends.

Miss Julia S. Avery, daughter of the Rev. F. D. Avery of this place, is taking in the sights at the Columbian exposition.

Miss Cora P. Little spent Sunday with friends in South Windham.

Farmers, as a rule, are backward with their work. The work of securing the hay crop is hardly begun. The crop will be much better than the early appearances promised.

"Be sure you get Ayer's" is an important caution to all in search of a thoroughly reliable blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being the one on which there can be no manner of doubt. It has stood the test of nearly half a century, and has long been considered the standard.

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."
Simply apply SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.

Castoria.
Castoria cures Colic, Constipation;
Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation;
Gives healthy sleep; also aids digestion,
Without narcotic stupefaction.

Big Dinners.
Every day in this city thousands of persons eat too much at dinner, and, in consequence, suffer from sour stomach, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc. If these will take just one of Carter's Little Liver Pills immediately after eating, they will be surprised by the entire absence of those unpleasant feelings which daily distress them and may continue in their improper course of eating big dinners without fear. Only one little pill, remember.

Smart weed and Belladonna, combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters, make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

Nothing Can Shake
The confidence of the public in SOZODONT as a preserver and beautifier of the teeth.
They believe in the absolute wholesomeness of its fragrant vegetable materials. Hence, its ever increasing popularity.

Ayer's Pills promptly remove the causes of sick and nervous headaches. These Pills speedily correct irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels, and are the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use. No one should be without them.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!
SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

A DAY DREAM.

[illegible] above the busy street
[illegible] golden voice poured Mary's song,
[illegible], then my soul forgot the beat
And roaring of the city's throng.
Then Boston bells and cries fell low,
Blent to a far and murmured tone
That chimed and chimed in mystic flow,
Weaving a spell for me alone.

No more the towering blocks were there,
No longer pressed the crowds around.
All freely reigned a magic air
Within what was hitherto's bound.
Beneath a sky of lucent gray
Far stretched the circled northern plain,
Wild goldenrod decked a prairie gay,
[illegible] one dear autumn came again.

Before me trod a winsome maid,
And, oh, the mien with which she [illegible]
Her soft, brown hair without a braid
Riding the shoulders [illegible] it swept,
And glancing backward how she gave
To one that smile so kind and wise,
The radiant look from eyes so grave
That spoke her inmost paradise.

Divinely on my daughter went,
The wild flowers leaning from her [illegible],
Dreaming she lived I watched [illegible]
Till, ah, the [illegible] vision fled.
The plain gave place to blocks of gray,
The [illegible] [illegible] murky [illegible],
[illegible] street in [illegible] day
And never knew the streets so loud.

Remarkable Tenacity of Life.

The [illegible] Dr. Shirely Palmer tells a fish story that is calculated to make the members of the St. Louis Hunting and Fishing association (to use a strictly original expression) "turn green with envy." By some hook or crook—hook no doubt—Dr. Palmer came into possession of a fine brace of tench. They were a lively pair of finny beauties when the doctor took them home with the idea of slaughtering them for his Sunday dinner. [illegible]

[illegible] the fish [illegible] on the floor, every now and then uttering sounds similar to those which had distinguished Mr. Palmer. [illegible] after having undergone the process of scaling and eviscerating, [illegible] the pan and wriggled about on the [illegible] as though they had but recently been removed from their native element. [illegible] a "fish story" or in the way of a joke.—St. Louis Republic.

YOUTHFUL ROBBER.

Girl Nine Years Old Commits Many Crimes.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY WAS HER FAD.

Enjoyed Relieving Other Children of Their Cash.

BOSTON, July 10.—For two months past the storekeepers at Field's Corner, Dorchester, have been in a state of fear over an oft repeated series of breaks, and the police of station 11 have been puzzled as to the identity of the authors of the breaks until this morning when Officer Dillon brought to the station house a timid looking, [illegible] 9-year-old girl, who stood the self confessed culprit.

The story of the burglaries is a peculiar one. The first of the breaks occurred on Decoration day, when the store of William Hunt, a provision dealer at [illegible], was broken into and [illegible] purloined from the cash drawer. This was followed by three other breaks in the same store within a period of two months and money aggregating and amount of [illegible] was secured.

Yesterday afternoon burglars forced an entrance into the bakery of Patrick Fallon, at 1291 Dorchester avenue, and $13, beside a quantity of candy and cake were taken.

It has been suspected that the persons responsible for these [illegible]

[illegible] of the Youthful [illegible] and this morning Officer Dillon received information that led to the apprehension of [illegible], living at [illegible] Dorchester avenue.

She was found at her home and, when accused of being concerned in the [illegible] she at first disclaimed any knowledge of the crimes. [illegible] brother, a lad 7 years of age [illegible] her sister Minnie was the prime factor in the burglaries, she placing [illegible] of the store [illegible] and secured the cash.

When [illegible] and a [illegible] brother Otto's version of the robberies, she was taken to the station house and brought before Judge Churchill, who continued her case until tomorrow.

While at the station the girl [illegible]

[illegible] Robberies.

It seems that it had been a common thing of [illegible] when brothers living in the neighborhood had sent their children to the store [illegible] purchase articles, to have them return without the goods for which they were sent. They [illegible] that their money was taken from them [illegible] by the girl [illegible] of forcing money from children has been a favorite [illegible] of hers by which she has gained [illegible] a dime.

The [illegible] of the girl, Paul Schnider, [illegible] the judge and asked that she be [illegible], as he had no power of control over her.

A little over $9 has been recovered of the money broken [illegible].

OUTBREAKS EXPECTED.

Troops Will Be Kept in Paris Until Saturday at Least.

[illegible] the government [illegible] in this city are at an end, the government [illegible] to put down [illegible] they arise.

In fact it is evident that further [illegible] and the troops now in the city will be kept in their barracks until Saturday next for use in case of necessity.

Tomorrow will be the first anniversary of the execution of Ravachol, the notorious anarchist thief and murderer, and it is feared that the anarchists will attempt to make a [illegible] demonstration on the occasion.

Friday, July 14, is the 104th anniversary of the fall of the bastile, which is [illegible] general holiday, and it is apprehended that the disaffected element will attempt to take advantage of the day to again make trouble.

ENGLAND'S DANGERS.

Ireland Could Afford an Enemy [illegible] Line of Sea.

LONDON, July 10.—The Pall Mall Gazette, which with its recent change of ownership changed its position, now supporting the Conservatives, is publishing a series of articles from the pen of Lord Salisbury, A. J. Balfour, Professor Lecky and other well-known opponents of Irish home rule.

Today it prints an article written by Lord Salisbury, in which the former prime minister makes out a case against home rule from an intercolonial point of view.

Salisbury says he sees two dangers, the first and most [illegible] of which is the blow that will be given to India by the granting of home rule to Ireland.

India, he declares, is held by the [illegible] of England's rule, though the last resort is always force. [illegible] surrender is contagious.

It depends upon the answer given to Ireland what shall be given in response to the similar demand which is [illegible]

[illegible] in the event of a war between Great Britain and some other power. An unfriendly executive in Ireland could, in the event of war, cause untold distress by allowing an enemy to procure coal and provisions in Irish ports and by allowing the [illegible] to be used as a rendezvous for privateers.

In support of this contention Lord Salisbury quotes at considerable length from the works of Captain Mahan of the United States navy of the influence of the sea power of the French during the revolution.

ROSENBAUM BROTHERS

[illegible] Companies for [illegible] Account Tied Up.

BIDDEFORD, Me., July 10.—Rosenbaum brothers, who were recently acquitted of a charge of a charge of attempting to defraud the insurance companies by setting fire to their clothing store, will appear as plaintiffs in a civil suit about to be brought in the supreme court.

On the day of their arrest one of the insurance companies whose policy had been paid put in an attachment on the firm's bank deposit. At the same time this company brought a civil action against the firm to recover the amount paid on the claim.

The acquittal of the two brothers on the criminal charge did not bring about a release of the attachment, for the civil process against them is still pending. They have tried in vain to secure a release of their bank account, in order to resume business. They have now instructed their counsel to bring suit for damages against the insurance company.

The first record taken by American astronomers of an eclipse was on Long Island on Oct. 27, 1780.

CULLOM'S PLAN.

Would Repeal Silver Law But Favors Some Silver Legislation.

CHICAGO, July 10.—"I shall vote for the repeal of that section of the Sherman law providing for the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of bullion silver a month," said Senator Shelby M. Cullom yesterday.

Of the prospects of the extra session of congress he continued: "I presume that Cleveland has counted noses and thinks that that part of the bill can be repealed, and probably it can. What he will recommend in his message to congress, of course, cannot be conjectured. If he suggests the repeal of the whole of the Sherman law, there would be no hesitation by a number of senators.

"I should not be in favor of leaving the country without some silver legislation."

COGSWELL INTERVIEWED.

Republican Nomination for Governor Between Pillsbury and Greenhalge.

HAVERHILL, Mass., July 10.—"The Republican nomination for the governorship," declared Congressman William Cogswell of Salem this morning, "at the present time, as I look at the situation, lies between Pillsbury and Greenhalge. Either of these men could be elected against any comer from the other side. I am not on the inside of the Democratic camp, but from looking over the walls should pick out Mayor Matthews of Boston, as most likely to receive the gubernatorial nomination. I consider the prospects exceedingly bright for the Republicans, anyhow."

In regard to national politics the general said the Administration party had got itself into a hole, and it would be interesting to watch it extricate itself with whole skinness. The general came to town to visit his father, the venerable George Cogswell of Bradford. Tomorrow, accompanied by Mrs. Cogswell, he will begin an extensive carriage tour along the coast of Essex county, New Hampshire and Maine.

NAVAHOE SIGHTED.

She is Safe in English Waters After Nineteen Day's Passage.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., July 10.—The Navahoe passed Hurst castle today at [illegible] o'clock. When sighted she was about [illegible] miles west of Southampton, near the east entrance of the Solent river. She will be at her destination by 3 o'clock.

The Navahoe left the dock of the Atlantic works in East Boston on Wednesday, June 21, at half o'clock. This would make the time of her passage about 19 days [illegible] hours.

It was expected by many that the Navahoe would beat the time made by the cutter Thistle, which crossed in October, 1887, in 21 days, three days of which she was becalmed, but undoubtedly the heavy weather she experienced held her back [illegible].

Considering the weather the Navahoe [illegible] made good time, for she had head winds and great ugly seas to contend with during her first week out.

Comet in the Northern Sky.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 10.—A comet was visible in the northern sky last night, some degrees below and 3 or 4 degrees to the west of the Polar star and near the top of the Great Bear. The comet was seen just before 11 o'clock. The course is downward, and it is about 14 degrees above the horizon. The tail is but a few degrees in length, although the nucleus is very bright.

Must Pay In Gold.

PITTSBURG, July 10.—All the big drug houses in Pittsburg have received circular letters from W. H. Schieffelin & Co. the importing druggists of New York, to the effect that for the present all payments for imported drugs purchased through their house must be made in gold; no silver will be taken under any circumstances. They say they do not wish to take any risks until the present flurry in the money market is over.

Nineteen Horses Burned.

WOBURN, Mass., July 10.—Early this morning fire destroyed the large barn of Parker, Adamson & Co., glass manufacturers, at Montvale, with all its contents. Nineteen horses were burned to death, three carriages, 30 tons of hay, harnesses and stable tools were destroyed. A cow belonging to Bartholomew Golden, superintendent, was burned. Loss from $8000 to $9000; cause, probably incendiary.

Onset Bay Spiritualists.

ONSET, Mass., July 10.—The 17th annual encampment of the Onset Bay Grove association of Spiritualists opened yesterday with large crowds, good music and most satisfactory speakers. The speakers, Mrs. Clara H. Banks in the morning and Dr. George A. Fuller in the afternoon, both were listened to with great interest.

Eyes and Ears Open for Clues.

TAUNTON, Mass., July 10.—District Officer George F. Seaver, says he knows of no district men who are working on the Borden case, as has been reported. He says that the Fall River police are still keeping their eyes and ears open for clues, and will continue to do so while there is any possible chance for such work.

Drowned While Bathing.

PINE POINT, Me., July 10.—Amos Knight of Dunston, aged 16 years, was drowned in the Dunston river while bathing yesterday afternoon. He was taken with a cramp and went to the bottom before his companions could rescue him.

Nineteen Lives Were Lost.

CHICAGO, July 10.—It is now thought that 19 lives were lost in yesterday's terrific storm on the lake. Of this number eight were drowned by the capsizing of the yacht Sea Shell.

Hot, but No Cholera.

HAMBURG, July 10.—The official reports as to the sanitation of this city show that the health conditions are good, though the heat is intense.

Too Much Mother-in-Law.

NYACK, N. Y., July 10.—Nyack people are talking of the latest divorce action. Mrs. David Smith, who was Millie Humphrey, has brought suit in the supreme court for a separation from her husband. She alleges desertion. Mr. Smith denies the charge of desertion. He says he is willing to support his wife well providing she leaves her mother's home. Mrs. Smith says her husband is a "high roller." He says it is a case of too much mother-in-law.

Morton and Chesley Assign.

BOSTON, July 10.—Morton & Chesley, builders, have assigned to A. M. Gardiner, a hardware dealer. They have for 25 years been one of the largest and best known firms in the city. J. F. Morton, who lives near the Brookline line, has been the sole proprietor of the business for the last two years. Mr. Morton said last evening that his liabilities were about $80,000, with assets of $100,000.

Texas Towed Into Rockland.

ROCKLAND, Me., July 10.—The big steamer State of Texas of the Mallory line, New York, was towed into the harbor by tug Ralph Ross of Bangor at 8:30 o'clock this morning. Last Friday, while leaving Bar Harbor, her propeller broke, and she went adrift, the last being seen of her from that place was when off Mt. Desert rock.

EIGHTY ARE DEAD.

Fearful Deathroll of the Iowa Tornado.

MORE WILL BE ADDED TO THE LIST.

Aid Coming in From All Parts of the State.

POMEROY, Ia., July 10.—The total number of persons killed by the tornado here and elsewhere is placed at 80.

Hundreds of people poured into the town yesterday. They came from every direction, and much trouble was experienced in handling them. The Fort Dodge company of the state guard, which has been on duty since last Friday, constitutes the sole police force, and the members are pretty well tired out. There are but 40 of them, and they are unable to control the sightseers. Ropes were finally thrown around the ruins. These, with the assistance of the guards, kept back somewhat the pushing, jostling mass.

The sanitary condition of Pomeroy was never very good, the town being located on a flat strip of ground. The Drainage Facilities Are Miserable.

All the sewers are stopped up with debris and wreckage, and, as a result, pools of water formed by the recent heavy rains are scattered all over the ground. The further fact that dead animals of every description are strewn about the town makes the situation worse.

The injured are doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances, but the outlook for the recovery of a large number of them is not regarded as so favorable as it was Saturday. Then it was thought that not more than 10 or 12 would die, but now it is estimated that fully 40 will be unable to survive their injuries. Among those who are very low and for whom little hopes of recovery are entertained are Mrs. John Davy and her sister-in-law, Katy Davy; Ray Keifer, Joe Demars, Michael Quinlan, whose wife was killed; Mrs. Henry Gulke, who lost her husband, and Emma Spies. These people are all injured internally beside having broken bones.

The Death List Was Increased

yesterday by three. A body of a woman was found under the ruins of her house, together with two of her children, a boy and a girl.

The people who have charge of things here are censured because they have not made a more thorough search of the ruins. The finding of three bodies is pointed to as pretty good evidence that there are remains of other victims in the wreckage.

Many complaints are still made of the work of the human vultures who [illegible] immediately after the storm, and who have kept busy ever since. It is estimated that $40,000 has been stolen from the ruins since Friday.

Money is coming in from all the towns in the state. There has been received at headquarters up to last evening [illegible], and about as much more is promised.

PASTOR RESIGNS.

Presbyterian Clergyman Sees No Prospect of Church Progress.

IRVINGTON, N. Y., July 10.—Rev. Dr. John S. Penman, rector of the Presbyterian church at this place, has resigned his pastorship. He says he has done so because of his inability to longer sustain and subscribe to the "system of doctrine" of his church. Dr. Penman was one of the commissioners to the general assembly at Washington and voted with the minority in favor of Dr. Briggs.

In a letter to his congregation Dr. Penman says: "I had hoped up to the last general assembly that the Presbyterian church would declare itself in favor of progress in doctrine and liberty of investigation, but that hope is now shattered."

She Cured His Toothache.

NORWALK, Conn., July 10.—A young man with a very much swollen jaw, accompanied by a pretty young woman, were married Friday afternoon by Rev. F. E. Robins, pastor of the Baptist church here. After the ceremony they confessed that they eloped as they feared parental opposition. The young man said that a week ago he had a violent toothache. Miss Taylor, who boarded in the same house with him, cured it with a mustard plaster. He fell in love with her then.

Drowning accidents are reported at Lawrence, Mass., Middletown, Conn., Bridgeport, Conn., Providence, Waterbury, Conn., and Gardiner, Me.

The "J. W. Carpenter" referred to in a letter found at Rome, N. Y., bearing on the Borden case, was a former employe of murdered Andrew Borden. No suspicion is attached to him.

REVENUE COLLECTIONS.

Receipts at Portsmouth Considerably Less Than Last Year.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 10.—The internal revenue collections for this district, which comprises the states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, for the month of June, were $31,349.10. The receipts for the six months ending June 30 were $[illegible]. The collections by months were as follows: January, $31,631.97; February, $[illegible]; March, $[illegible]; April, $[illegible]; May, $[illegible].

The total receipts are [illegible] than for the same months of 1892. Already 2700 sugar producers of the district have filed bonds for 1894.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN

Has come not a little knowledge as to Cookery—what to do, as well as what not to do. Thus we have learned to use the most pure and perfect and popular cooking material for all frying and shortening purposes.

Cottolene

Progressive Cooking

is the natural outcome of the age, and it teaches us not to use lard, but rather the new shortening,

Cottolene,

which is far cleaner, and more digestible than any lard can be. The success of COTTOLENE has called out worthless imitations under similar names. Look out for these! Ask your Grocer for COTTOLENE, and be sure you get it.

NORWICH AND VICINITY

CITY NEWS.

A. O. U. W. meets tonight. Initiation of candidates.

The steam yacht Narwhal, N. Y. Y. C., left for a short cruise Monday.

Eugene J. Flood of New York city is the guest of I. E. Booth of Preston.

Miss Nettie Warren of East Norwalk is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. Searles of this city.

The school property of the Central district is receiving the usual mid-summer repairs.

William H. Page, of this city, has been granted a patent on a sectional boiler.

Mailing Clerk W. R. McCord of the post office, is confined to the house by sickness.

B. R. Worthington, of Norwich, is a new director of the Odd Fellows' home, to fill a vacancy.

Mr. L. B. Southworth, of The New York World, and wife, are visiting friends in the city.

The First Baptist Sunday school will make an excursion to Mystic island by steamer Ella tomorrow.

Regular meeting of Wauregan lodge, No. 6, K. of P., at the new rooms in Steiner's building tonight.

Frank P. Fisher, for seven years draw tender at the bridge over the Connecticut river at Niantic died Saturday.

Three cars are now employed over the entire Bean Hill route hourly, and the through trip is now continuous.

Mr. Frank Nichols of Porteous & Mitchell's is spending a portion of his vacation at his sister's in Wareham, Mass.

Messrs. Guy B. and James Dolbeare spent Sunday with their mother, who is occupying a cottage at the Willimantic camp ground.

Mrs. Ezra Smith of New London and Mrs. John Elliott of Hartford spent a portion Monday with Mrs. Wm. Elliott of Fairmount street.

It is estimated that about 5,000 persons have registered at the Connecticut building at the World's fair, including 3,000 from this state.

Mrs. Elmer E. Brown and son, are spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Potter at 208 Mt. Pleasant street.

Lieut. C. A. Murray, of Co. F, Eighteenth C. V., arrived in the city from Brockton, Mass., last night and will remain about ten days.

Mr. Sylvester Dresser of Southbridge, Mass., returned home Monday, after a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Parker of the Wauregan hotel.

There was no session of the police court Monday. John J. Forest was found guilty of breach of the peace Saturday, and fined $1 and costs, $7 68, which he paid.

Secretary of the navy Hilary A. Herbert is expected to pay an official visit to the Thames naval station on board the Dolphin the latter part of next week.

The Rev. J. R. Hubert has resigned the pastorate of the Park Street church, in South Framingham, to accept a call to the Huntington Baptist church of New London.

The Rev. Perry Barnes' condition Monday was favorable, considering the seriousness of his sad accident. There is no probability of the necessity of amputation now.

The Central M. E. church and Sunday school will have a basket picnic at Oak grove, Waterford. They leave the Union station at 8 a. m. sharp and return at 6 p. m.

Mrs. Peter Cirves of Bean Hill, who had been subject to asthmatic attacks, died suddenly of heart disease Monday night. She was a well known and much respected resident of that portion of the town.

In spite of predictions to the contrary, the workmen on the new Laurel Hill bridge expect to have their work finished by the end of next week. The matter of placing electric lights upon the Hill has not yet been acted upon.

Mr. Allen T. [illegible] of The New York He[illegible] town Saturday, expecting to spend a two weeks vacation in this vicinity, but he was recalled by telegraph, much to the disappointment of his friends and will have to take his vacation later in the season.

Miss Hattie B. Gallup with her friend Miss Forsyth of New York left town Monday with the intention of joining a party of Groton friends in a trip to the World's fair. While in Chicago Miss Gallup will be the guest of the family of Mr. Lyman Payne.

Among the prominent democrats who will attend the banquet given to Consul to Amsterdam Edward Downs at Hill's Homestead, Rock, New Haven, tomorrow evening are Attorney J. T. Cunningham and State Central Committeeman J. J. Desmond. Many well-known New York, New Jersey and Connecticut politicians are expected.

[illegible] Judge [illegible]'s probate office to repletion Monday, at the hearing of the case of the heirs of Abraham Coplan against the account rendered by the administration. After a rather discordant but universal discussion, further proceedings were postponed to Saturday. The lawyers interested are Shields, F. T. Brown, Cunningham, Douglass, [illegible] and Thresher.

County Commissioners in Session.

The New London county commissioners, Messrs. Charles McChesney of this city, Clark W. Reynolds of Griswold and John T. Batty of Groton, organized in their room in the City hall Monday. Mr. McChesney was elected chairman, and Mr. Batty, clerk.

The commissioners then plunged into the accumulated business. William Ogden of Greeneville was granted a license, and those of H. A. Gaucher, Ether Brothers, Marx Brothers and James McGrory were transferred.

The Terminus at Yantic.

The officers of the electric road met the selectmen Monday to consider the proposed extensions outside the city limits. The only objection to the route as planned was interposed by Mr. W. T. Williams of Yantic, who took exception to the terminus. Attorney Lucas and Surveyor Chandler described the path of the rails clearly. Later in the afternoon all parties interested viewed the premises, and it was amicably agreed that the most desirable stopping place was at a point opposite the Yantic scales, as originally mapped out.

Norwich Riders to Participate.

Already considerable interest is being shown in the coming races of the Rockville Wheel club at that city Saturday, July 15.

Of the noted riders Zimmerman, Sanger and Nelson have entered the lists, while Yawger, Bruce and Comstock of the local riders will take part.

Prizes of the value of $700 will be offered, which will have a tendency to increase the number of entries in the coming events, and fast time may be expected.

The railroad will make a reduction in rates and an interesting tournament will be held.

A Preston Dog to Have His Day.

The truculent cur of Jacob Frisnis of Corningtown, who made the unprovoked attack on Bicyclist H. E. Patrick Saturday evening, sealed his doom Monday. Mr. Patrick paid a visit to the owner with the intention of settling the matter with the owner without demanding the death of the dog, but hardly had he entered the yard before the animal pounced fiercely on him, and took a vicious grip on his arm, making an ugly wound.

Dr. Tillinghast cauterized the injury, and no serious developments are probable. The dog will meet a deserved fate today.

Race Week Board in New London.

During the race season at New London last week, says the Meriden Journal, a tenler was unable to find lodgings, so he made arrangements with a hotel keeper to throw a blanket over a billiard table, and on this he slept just as soundly as if Harvard was a sure winner. Next day Harvard lost, and when the sailor asked for his bill he was told that it was $10, $8 of which was for "room." As he started to remonstrate for the exorbitance of the "room charge," the wide-awake proprietor simply called his attention to a sign, which read: "Use of billiard table, 50 cents an hour."

MR. SPALDING'S BEREAVEMENT.

Pathetically Sudden Death of His Wife Sunday Morning.

The death of the wife of City Clerk Spalding excited deep regret as the circumstances attending it became known. Sunday morning she was dressed and about the house in apparently the best of health, but later in the day complained of a sick headache. About half past eight her husband left her to go to town for the purpose of writing and mailing a business letter, as several friends were then in the house. Her illness was not considered serious, and at her own desire she was left alone that she might sleep. On Mr. Spalding's return a half hour later he was met by a messenger with tidings of her death.

Everywhere the news excited expressions of sorrow and all day Monday relatives, and business, society, and political friends of Clerk Spalding called to express their sympathy. Several months since Mr. and Mrs. Spalding moved into a newly purchased house on Laurel Hill avenue, where the young wife was looking forward to a future of comfort and happiness.

Although not yet definitely decided, it is probable that the funeral will be on Friday.

Mr. Spalding's mother arrived from Plainfield yesterday morning.

CATHOLIC BENEVOLENT LEGION.

State Convention Convenes in This City Today—The Proceedings.

The annual convention of the state association of the Catholic Benevolent Legion convenes in this city in the rooms of the local legion at 11 o'clock this morning. Twenty-five delegates from all portions of the state are expected.

Lawyer J. J. Desmond is president of the association, and Mr. D. J. Lucy holds the desired position of orator. They, with Dr. P. H. Harriman and M. V. Murphy, will represent Norwich in the convention. George H. Kuhn, M. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., supreme medical examiner, and Patrick F. Kenney of New York, a member of the supreme council, will attend and install the officers of the state council. Dr. Kuhn was present at the formation of White Cross Council in this city several years ago and has always taken an interest in its welfare. The association dines at the Wauregan house at 1 o'clock, and will sit down to some of Chef Davenport's finest viands.

BLOCK SIGNAL REMOVED.

The One Near the Union Station, New London, Deemed Unnecessary.

The block signal near the New London depot is to be removed. It has never been used since it was put in. It is so far from the tower and there are so many turns and angles that it is found impossible for the tower man to work it successfully with the lever. The signal is considered unnecessary at that point as it is so near the station where all trains start.

The work of straightening the tracks and moving switches near the depot will be commenced in a few days, and a yard will then be established there for passenger cars.

Who Must Feed Detained Chinamen?

PORTLAND, Oregon, July 10.—Chinese merchants of this city complain that their countrymen held on the steamer Haytien Republic, pending examination by the collector do not receive proper food. Several dispatches have been sent to the Chinese minister at Washington regarding the matter. The steamer people claim that, as the vessel has been seized, it is the duty of the government to feed the Chinese.

SALTON SEA MAY RETURN.

Colorado's Desert Likely to be a Lake Once More.

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—The Salton Sea, which appeared in the Colorado desert two years ago, seems likely to come again. E. W. Lang, a cattle man well acquainted with the region, predicts an early visit. "The overflow from the Colorado river has been going into the desert for some time," says he, "and may continue. There was a very large fall of snow last winter in the mountains of Montana, Idaho and Utah, and the melting of this has caused the present break into the desert. The overflow of two years ago was the first in twenty years, but everything indicates that a few hundred years before the basin was literally a sea, as the beaches are still plain about the foothills, and the rocks show water wearing.

"When the overflow of two years ago occurred the water followed the identical channels that had become almost obliterated from age. The water is now running into the desert in two branches. One is Carter river and leaves the Colorado about fifteen miles below Yuma. The other channel is New river, and is 45 miles further down the river. Salton is about 200 feet below the level of the debouchment of these rivers. The water has been flowing into both of the rivers I have named for several weeks past. Both New and Carter rivers had advanced about 25 miles when I left, and I think the water will be into Salton in a few weeks more. A number of large lagoons have already been filled between the Sink and the Colorado. One of these is fully ten miles square. It will not take long for these depressions between the river and the big basin to be filled, and then the water will slide over into Salton."

Tyrotoxicon Made Them Sick.

ROCHESTER, N. H., July 10.—Three weeks ago nearly all who attended the High school reception and partook of ice cream were taken seriously sick. A sample was sent to Edmund Hangell, analyst to the state board of health, for analysis. A lengthy reply was received today, by the chairman of the board, J. H. Daniels in substance as follows: That tyrotoxicum, a poison, has developed from the cream being kept in an improper place too long after being received and before being frozen. No mineral poison was found.

Interest in the Great MID-SUMMER SALE does not flag or lag. All this week it will continue and there is no person who can afford to miss it. There is something here to interest everybody. There can't help but be in stock the largest and most comprehensive of any store in Eastern Connecticut.

By all means attend the Great Mid-Summer Sale.

And now here is something Wholly and Exclusively for Women's Eyes.

A July sale of Women's Dainty White Cotton Underwear that is destined to make this month an eventful one for all who are fortunate enough to see this advertisement.

A sale of Women's White Cotton Underwear that for the quantity of high grade goods—the excellence of material and make, outranks all its predecessors.

They've just come—a wonderful array of choice items in all kinds of Cotton Underwear. It is a sample line from the best Manufacturer of Muslin Underwear that this country knows.

Of course they are slightly soiled and somewhat mussed—why shouldn't they be!—they've travelled from Maine to California and been exhibited to the leading merchants in every large city in the country—but the prices will make, that all right.

It embraces everything that they make from the cheapest to the highest grade goods in the market—1,800 pieces of Underwear—nearly $1,000.00 worth—and no two pieces alike—what a choice is there?

The prices for these goods are from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. under the regular retail prices and from 15 to 25 per cent. under the maker's prices for hundred dozen lots.

It is no use to try and enumerate the styles and prices—every garment is different—every price has a distinct individuality. The only way is to see them.

There are Corset Covers for 19c and up to $2 50.
Drawers for 20c and up to $3 50.
Chemises for 33c and up to $3 00.
Skirts for 29c and up to $6 00.
Night Gowns for 49c and up to $8 00.
SPECIAL—Ladies' Combination Chemise and Skirt for $1.00 and up to $5 00. A few only.
Plenty of intermediate prices in all these.

With these are White Garments for Infants.
As follows:
Infants' Long Dresses for 75c and up to $5 00.
Infants' Long Skirts for 50c and up to $3 00.
Infants' Short Dresses for 61½c and up to $4 00.
Infants' Short Skirts for 35c and up to $1 25.

All these goods go on sale this morning. There are no duplicates, so get a good choice if you can. Extra room will be given and extra salespeople will be in attendance so that everybody will be attended to as speedily as possible.

WORLD'S FAIR DISASTER.

Inquest on the Victims of the Fire Already Begun.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Discuss the Subject of the Holocaust at a Meeting Tuesday.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, CHICAGO, July 11.—The assertion is general that the World's fair management is not wholly without blame for yesterday's disaster.

Time and again, it is said, word was sent to the council of administration of the dangerous condition of the cold storage warehouse, but they paid no heed to it.

A few weeks ago the World's fair officials issued an order withdrawing the guards on duty there, as the company operating the warehouse refused to pay for them. Col. Rice objected seriously to this move and went before the council of administration and told that body the building was a fire trap and that it should not be left unprotected.

The council, it is alleged, paid no heed to his warning, but went ahead and withdrew the guards. Then Marshal Murphy made a full report of the dangerous manner in which the structure was built. He told them how it endangered the World's fair building. If a fire should break out in the warehouse with a strong west or south wind it was liable to sweep over the entire White city. This undoubtedly would have been the case had the wind not been from the northeast.

The inquest on the victims of the fire began today. The scene at the morgue where the inquest was in progress was a [illegible] one. Scores of people, some looking for friends and relatives among the dead, and many were attracted by that morbid curiosity which is always manifest at fires and casualties, crowded into and around the charnel house. The first patrol wagon that left the grounds carrying the blackened remains of a fireman, was followed by a crowd of men and boys, and this seemed to be the signal for increasing crowds of others to make their way to the place.

After the jury had viewed the bodies of the victims, Coroner McHale decided to adjourn the inquest until Thursday next. "I want to have time," he said, "to prepare for a thorough investigation. This is a serious matter, and I shall call upon Chief of Construction Burnham of the World's fair and Fire Chief Swenie of the Chicago fire department to be in attendance for examination. The plans of construction of the cold storage warehouse will be brought before us."

To the list of the dead are added the names of [illegible] R. Hartman, electric [illegible] for [illegible] Electric company; Henry Gedulig, painter, thought to be lost, and Bernard Murphy, a boiler maker, supposed to have been crushed by the tower.

The holocaust was the principal subject of discussion at today's meeting of the National commission. Immediately after calling the meeting to order, President Palmer said that it seemed proper that the commission should take some action. He suggested that the towers of the [illegible] [illegible] the other buildings which are occupied or whose roofs are being frequented by the public should be inspected. He thought that there are several buildings from which, in event of fire it would be impossible to take people off the roofs.

Commissioner Barbour, of Michigan, presented a resolution of respect for the memory of the dead, which was adopted by a rising vote.

On motion of Commissioner [illegible] of Wyoming, a resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a special committee of four to inspect the buildings as regards the safety of human life in case of fire upon the grounds.

Mr. Castleman of Kentucky presented a resolution, which was adopted, directing the committee on buildings and grounds to request the Chicago board of fire underwriters to report to the national commission the condition of the various buildings as to danger from fire and the further precautions that are necessary, if any.

The World's fair council of administration, this afternoon approved a plan for the collection of a fund to relieve the injured survivors and families of the firemen. It was agreed at the suggestion of many of the employes of the fair and others, that Thursday, July 13, be set aside as a day when all employes and pass holders entering the gates of the fair may at their option deposit in a box at the gate the usual admittance fee of 50 cents.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The fall of night still finds the ruins of the cold storage building unexplored, and it is impossible to realize the full extent of yesterday's disaster. It cannot be ascertained until the mountain of rubbish is sifted and carted away. In some places the debris is 150 to 200 feet high and it is impossible to know how many charred bodies are still in the ruins.

It is now definitely known that a number of workmen employed in the building were in the building, and their bodies are not all yet recovered. Before they could have time to reach the top of the ladders that scaled the interior walls the whole mass toppled over.

The dead now is known to be 23.

The number of dead includes those who died in the hospital from their injuries and the unfortunates whose charred and blackened trunks were taken from the mass of debris.

Collision in the Freight Yard at Rockville.

ROCKVILLE, CONN., July 11.—There was a slight collision in the freight yard at the railroad station here about 6 50 o'clock this morning, between engine No. 26 and a passenger coach, preventing the 7.05 train from leaving for Vernon. The engine was on the turntable and started to run down on to the main track. At the same time the passenger coach and baggage car was started down the same track and as the engine ran from the switch on to the main track, struck the passenger coach, lifting the wheels on that side from the track and forcing the car over against the freight cars on the side track. The car was completely wedged in between the freight cars and the engine. The water tank of the locomotive was smashed by the collision. The accident was reported to the Hartford office and an engine was sent from Hartford, but did not arrive until 9 o'clock, when the passenger coach and engine were released from their position.

Thrown From a Wagon and Killed.

STONEHAM, Mass, July 11.—Edward McKeon, a popular young man of Stoneham, met with instant death near Kingston, N. H., by being thrown from an express team which was loaded. Young McKeon was driving the load from Nashua to Stoneham. He was 19 years of age.

WATERBURY YARD CREW STRIKE.

Their Places Filled by Other Men Who Will Be Retained.

WATERBURY, Conn., July 11.—A strike is on at the yards of the New England railroad in this city. The strikers are five in number and consist of Yard Master Matthew Kinney, two yard brakemen, a conductor and one switchman. The cause of the trouble was a change made by Train Master Pollock that the above-named work on a short crew on Sunday. This the men decided not to do and went out.

The strikers are very peaceable and no trouble is anticipated. Train Master Pollock has made a number of concessions to the men. He says they struck before he had time to adjust matters to their satisfaction. It is believed here that the differences will be settled before the day is over. Some of the strikers' places are filled, but it is said the other men will be taken back.

Superintendent Quigg said today that the men employed to take the places of the strikers would be retained. They were doing their work satisfactorily, they had good jobs and received good pay.

CHEAP FARES TO CHICAGO.

Meeting of Presidents of Trunk Lines—An Agreement Reached.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The presidents of the trunk lines met today at the offices of the Trunk Line association to discuss the single fare excursion rate to Chicago. It was finally agreed that special trains composed only of day coaches will be run to Chicago to a schedule of not less than thirty hours, at the rate of one limited fare for the round trip by the route traveled. Tickets are to have a return limit of ten days, and are not to be good in sleeping, parlor and chair cars, and no stop over is to be permitted in either direction.

Tickets are to be sold to children between six and twelve years of age at 75 per cent. of the one way rate. Baggage checked upon tickets is to be confined to 100 pounds personal baggage only.

Two excursions will be run on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week, to be alternated by the several lines with the dates to be assigned by the commissioner.

On the Pennsylvania and Central the fare will be about $20 for the round trip. On the West Shore and Erie it will be about $18, and on the Ontario & Western $17.

Justice Blatchford's Remains Taken to New York.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 11.—The funeral party accompanying the remains of the late Justice Samuel Blatchford to New York, consists of Mr. A. Blatchford, son of the deceased and his wife, who upon their arrival will go to their residence in 56th street.

The Rev. Dr. H. G. Batterly accompanied the bereaved couple. Chief Justice Fuller and associate Justices Shiras and Jackson left upon the same boat on their way to New York, and were guests of the funeral car. Several of the many servants of the family accompanied the party.

The plate on the coffin bore the inscription, "Samuel Blatchford, born November 9, 1820. Died July 7, 1893."

Looks Like a Gobble.

LIMA, Ohio, July 11.—It was announced several weeks ago on seemingly the best of authority that the Standard Oil company had bought out the Manhattan, its only rival in this great oil and gas field. The Manhattan people promptly denied it, and the immediate actions of both parties appeared to corroborate the Manhattan's statement, but the latest developments indicate that the first report was correct. The Manhattan is discharging help, plugging wells and dropping leases, while the Standard is going right into the abandoned field.

A Defaulting Secretary Pleads Not Guilty.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 11.—R. O. Van Brocklin, the defaulting secretary of the board of fire commissioners, was arraigned this afternoon before Justice King on a charge of forgery. He pleaded not guilty and his counsel waved examination. He was held for the present term of the court of sessions. Nineteen warrants, ten for grand larceny and nine for forgery hang over Van Brocklin and they will be served one after another as fast as he procures bail.

Resignations Requested.

The Late Hiram Camp's Bequests.

NEW HAVEN, July 11.—The late Hiram Camp's will, it is understood, provides handsomely for Mr. Moody's Northfield seminary at Northfield, Mass., in the shape of 150 shares of stock in the Bristol Brass & Clock Co., shares of the Swift Packing Co. of Chicago and sundry small lots of good dividend paying stock. The Hebrew Christian association of New York is provided for in the will in the same way.

The American Sunday School association is given a block of land of considerable value here. The Connecticut Training School for Nurses, $1,000, New Haven Orphan Asylum, $1,000, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. of New Haven, $1,000 each. Mr. Moody's school also gets a block of four houses with land in Fair Haven. The estate it is believed will amount to $250,000.

Deputy Peach Commissioners Appointed.

HARTFORD, July 12.—Mr. Hubbard, state commissioner of peach yellows, under the new law, has appointed the following deputy commissioners:

Hartford County—Roswell A. Moore, Berlin; A. C. Stalsberg, West Hartford.

New Haven County—Darius Penn, Milford; E. C. Warner, North Haven; J. Norris Barnes, Yalesville.

Fairfield County—George Comstock, Norwalk; W. Jennings, Green's Farms.

Litchfield County—Asa Walton.

Tolland County—Gideon Tillinghast, Vernon.

Windham County—Ezra C. May, Woodstock.

They are to be allowed $5 per day and expenses, and will begin the inspection of peach orchards immediately. They have power to destroy all infected trees and the fruit.

Another Victory Over Slave Traders.

LONDON, July 11.—The Brussels correspondent of The Times says that latest advices from the Congo Free state give an account of another victory over the slave traders.

After the battle of Stanley Falls, in which the state troops won a decisive victory, the slave traders' forces fled to Isangi, an Arab fortress, at the mouth of the Lomami river. Tippoo Tib's son Sefu and his nephew Rashid were in command when the attack on the fortress was made by Commander Chaplin and Captain Forback. The Arabs fled and the state troops took possession of the fortress.

Why Canadian Distilleries Close.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 11.—Controller John F. Wood of the Inland Revenue department, said today, when asked why nearly all the distilleries in Canada were closing down for a year or more, that it was owing to a large surplus of stock and not to a decrease in the quantity of spirits consumed. He said that the revenue collected from spirits for the fiscal year which closed June 30 was over $250,000 more than the amount collected the year before.

The Rev. Henry Wayne Called to St. Mark's in New Britain.

NEW BRITAIN, July 11.—St. Mark's Episcopal church voted unanimously this evening to call the Rev. Henry Wayne of Westport, Conn., to the vacant rectorship of their church.

The President and Joe Jefferson Will Fish Together.

BUZZARD'S BAY, July 11.—The president did not go fishing this afternoon as expected. His catboat laid anchored in the harbor, and soon after 3 o'clock she went to the dock. The only one who cared to take the sail was Colonel Lamont, and he was satisfied with an hour's sport and returned to Gray Gables. It was pretty chilly. There is a report current tonight that if the weather is favorable the president in company with Joe Jefferson may take a fresh water fish tomorrow.

Dogs Among the Sheep.

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn., July 11.—Thirty out of a flock of forty sheep owned by W. H. Birge, a farmer of this town, were killed by dogs last night. Mr. Birge went out this morning to feed the sheep and found them dead. He is now trying to get track of the dogs, and has traced them to the Plains. If the owners of the dogs can be found, they will have to settle. If they cannot be found, the town will be called upon to bear the cost. This is the first case of this kind happening in the town.

TAFTVILLE.

Five members of the Helping Hand Mutual Benefit society have received checks for $71.55 each, which is over 50 per cent. of the amount paid in by them. They came out of their speculative endowment venture better than most of the investors in these societies have done.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Principal DeWitt to the Parents and Voters of the Town Street School District.

Principal A. A. DeWitt has addressed the following open letter to the parents and voters of the Town street school district:

Dear Friends: A short time ago a former beloved pupil, Mr. Francis D. Donohue, whose services in my behalf, so kindly and spontaneously rendered, have touched me with deep emotion, undertook, without any solicitation whatever on my part, to obtain from you an expression of opinion in regard to my being retained in the office of principal of the Town street school. Your response was at once so cordial and so overwhelmingly favorable as to demand from me an acknowledgment as public and hearty as I could make it.

[illegible] the special meeting of the district recently held. The [illegible] that meeting conclusively proved that an honest and faithful attempt to discharge one's obligations, how much soever such attempt may be exposed to the venomous attacks of malignant critics, will ultimately receive from those best qualified to pass judgment upon it proper recognition and approval. That you have thus approved, and in so flattering a manner, my administration of the school, will be treasured among the pleasantest memories of my life. To say that I am profoundly grateful for these evidences of your good will toward me is to express but feebly feelings that are too intense to be adequately rendered into speech. I trust that in the future I shall prove myself to be neither ungrateful nor wholly unworthy of your generous confidence.

In conclusion I beg leave to assure you of my affectionate regard for the Town street school, of my deep and abiding interest in it, and of my earnest desire and firm purpose to do all that I can at any time and in any way to promote its progress and its prosperity.

MILITARY BICYCLES.

Sections of the Brigade Signal Corps Equipped with Columbia Wheels.

The Pope Manufacturing company of Hartford Tuesday shipped thirty-six military bicycles to the several sections of the Brigade Signal corps. Brigadier General Haven, several weeks ago, in accordance with the power conferred upon him by the new militia law, ordered the [illegible] men of the signal corps mounted on bicycles; and directed the commandant of the corps to procure the machines. The officers will be mounted on horses as heretofore, but when expedient will use wheels. The state allows pay for the wheels at the rate of $2 per day per man.

The Pope company has fitted out the corps with new machines of the same style as they furnish to the regular army, with rifle clips and all necessary appliances. The wheels are fitted with pneumatic tires in order to facilitate riding over turf or through sand.

The brigade signal corps is one of the largest bodies of organized troops mounted on bicycles in the United States, and will be probably the best equipped.

Every man will have on his wheel a rifle, signal flags, blanket and overcoat and the corps will be fitted with two new heliographs, for signaling by the sun, now being manufactured by Major Giddings, telegraph and telephone apparatus, and a camera, cyclometer, barometer and odometer for reconnoissance work.

The wheels, which represent a large amount of money, will be "stabled" in a large tent at the end of the Signal Corps street. A sentinel will stand guard over them in the day time, but at night a more improved and less irksome means of guarding them has been devised by Major Giddings. At 8 o'clock in the evening when the guard is relieved, the wheels will be electrically connected with a powerful battery and gong, so that if any person touches a bicycle during the night it will break the connection and set off the alarm gong, which will be located in the adjutant's tent.

Forty copies of "Gilling's Handbook of Military Signaling," the latest and best authority for this branch of the service, have been issued to the corps.

Ordway "Cycle Infantry Drill Regulations" have been revised and changed to conform to the organization of the corps by Major Howard L. Giddings, commanding, by direction of the adjutant general, who has approved the revision and will issue the books in a few days.

A WIFE SOLD FOR 45 CENTS.

Edward Thompson Was Not Pleased With His Companion.

TRIED TO GET HER AGAIN.

Queer Ideas of Morality in the Catskill Region.

KINGSTON, N. Y., July 11.—Some of the people out in the Catskills have queer ideas of morality. Edward H. Thompson, who lives near West Hurley, was married last fall to Miss Finley, a young woman of the neighborhood. About three weeks ago his wife did something which displeased him. He spoke about the matter to his friend, Charles Lewis. The latter told him that if Thompson was not satisfied with his wife he would buy her.

A bargain was struck at once, and Lewis, who lives at Sawkill, paid over the purchase money, forty-five cents. Both Thompson and Lewis took a drink of hard cider at the village tavern over the deal. The woman was to be delivered on the following Sunday. When Thompson returned home and informed his wife of what he had done, she made no objection, but, on the contrary, seemed rather pleased.

Last Saturday young Thompson began to get lonesome and regretted the sale. He went to see his wife for the purpose of inducing her to return to him. She refused to do so, saying she was contented and satisfied with the change, and reproached him for his lack of honesty.

"You have got your forty-five cents," said she, "and I don't come back." The forlorn husband returned to his home and informed his father that she would not come back. The old man came to Kingston today to consult a lawyer and see if legal steps could be taken to compel his daughter-in-law to return.

Increased Business on the N. Y. & N. E.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 11.—Superintendent Quigg of the Western division of the New York & New England railroad spoke enthusiastically today of the increased business over the road. In the freight business alone the traffic is unusually heavy and the report for the moving of cars for June, 1893, is 1,200 in excess of the number moved in 1892.

In the passenger service business is continually on the increase. Nearly, if not quite 200 through passengers per day are delivered by the road to the Erie system at Newburg. An extra Pullman car will have to be added at Newburg to the through Chicago express which leaves the city at 12 50 p. m.

Ten new Baldwin engines have been ordered for the road, and they will be delivered here in September. Six of these will be put on the western division and the other four will go on the eastern division.

A Terrific Explosion of Dynamite.

DENVER, Col., July 11.—Almost the entire city was shocked at 4 30 o'clock Monday morning by the explosion of 3,000 pounds of dynamite in a storage house in South Denver. [illegible] window panes, and many doors were blown from their hinges. Two men are supposed to have been blown to pieces. Particles of clothing and a revolver were found near the scene. What caused the accident is not known, but it is supposed to have been the work of tramps.

Arrested on a Charge of Opening Letters Not His Own.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 11.—Marshal Strong tonight arrested Joseph Davis, an employe of the Cash Novelty company, on a charge of opening letters addressed to that firm.

Billiard Champion Ives Disgusted.

LONDON, July 11.—The representative of the United Press had an interview today with Frank C. Ives, the American billiard champion, who recently defeated John Roberts, Jr., the English champion. Ives, who is anxious to play another game with Roberts, said that he had done everything possible to have another game. He had conceded every point that Roberts had asked and had offered to play on the [illegible] table [illegible] in the previous game [illegible]. He had also offered to play on two tables [illegible] ball play barred. He wanted the stakes fixed at $500. To all his offers Roberts had made no reply, and Ives said he was disgusted with the way Roberts was acting.

Gov. Altgeld Their Hero.

NEWARK, N. J., July 11.—The anarchists held a meeting in Caspar's hall Monday night to commemorate the pardon by Gov. Altgeld of Illinois of the three "judicial victims" Schwab, Fielden and Neebe. Good pasturage for two cows.

A. B. Sprague has received another carload of Ohio horses.

Summer boarders can be accommodated by G. A. Brown at Gales Ferry.

This is just the weather to use the National Pure Food Co.'s soups. Get them of Welcome A. Smith.

Home made doughnuts and tea cakes made fresh every day at Mrs Chapman's bakery, No. 9 North Thames street.

For summer wear a suit of boating tweed is the popular thing. Smith & Gilbert have them in black, gray and blue.

E. Fay has received a new line of baby carriages, velocipedes, wagons, etc., and they are going to be sold at very low prices.

During the balance of this month Frank A. Bill will give special low prices on his line of summer shoes. It is a good time to buy now.

T. J. Falvey has a couple dozen of ladies' Youman's sailors in white, black and blue, which he will close out at a reduced price. All other sailors half price.

B. Gotthelf & Co. are going to make this a great month for bargains in millinery and fancy goods at their store by sacrificing in regard to price. The goods, however, will be of a high standard.

In sorting up for the annual midsummer clearing sale at the Boston store a few items were overlooked, but they go into the general lot, now they are found, at the same bargain prices which characterize the list. The advertisement this morning enumerates the missing links. Read carefully.

NORWICH AND VICINITY.

A Ten-Foot Sword Fish.

Powers Bros., received a ten-foot sword fish from a dealer named Jelly, who lives on Block Island. The sword measures about two feet and a half. The fish will be on exhibition at their market today. This firm usually receives a sword fish once a week, but it is seldom that one reaches Norwich without the sword, tail and fins having first been removed.

Vamoose Beats the Richard Peck.

The little steam yacht Vamoose, which was in New London harbor for some time about a year ago, beat the New Haven line steamer Richard Peck in a race from Fort Schuyler to Sands Point recently. The two met out on the sound and an impromptu race followed. The Vamoose finished three-quarters of a mile ahead of the Peck. The Vamoose then raced the yacht Javelin and beat her more than a mile on the course from Stepping Stone light to North Brother Island. Mr. Hallbron, who is in charge of the Vamoose, says he is willing to meet any other vessel that wants to try conclusions with his speedy little craft.

HUTCHINSON'S SUCCESSOR.

Why the President Will Not Appoint Until After Congress Assembles.

It seems to be understood that the president will not appoint a successor to Collector Hutchinson until after congress shall assemble in August. Taking this course saves considerable trouble, for the reason that if the president shall appoint during the time of the adjournment of congress the appointee will serve only temporarily, and the bond given by the temporary collector will be only a temporary one.

In the event of the appointment failing to meet the approval of congress some one else would have to be appointed, and the trouble of getting bondsmen, etc., would have to go through again. Should congress approve the original appointment, the transfer of the office in the district to which such a one has been appointed would have to take place, the more or less trouble and delay would be occasioned in the state department of Washington.

In view of these facts it is not likely that the president will appoint any one temporarily, but will wait until congress assembles and make his appointment a permanent one.

Death of Mrs Kate A. Griswold.

The friends and acquaintances of Mrs. Kate A. Griswold in Eastern Connecticut will regret to learn of her death in Bethel, Conn., on Sunday. She resided for many years in Willimantic, was a member of the Methodist church there and carried on the millinery business. She was a bright and energetic woman of good business capacity and while in "The Thread City" invented "the Comfort Corset" in the success of which she ventured her entire capital.

Mrs. Griswold sold out her millinery business at Willimantic about eighteen years ago and for several years travelled to bring to the attention of the women of the country her patent corset. She built up a large business, and had manufactories in New York city and Bethel, Conn. She is said to have amassed a fortune.

She was at the home of her son at Grassy Plain, Bethel, where she had been for the past nine weeks suffering from stomach disorders. She was sixty years of age.

THE YANTIC EXTENSION.

Proposed Plan for the Passage of the Electric Cars [illegible] Over the New London Northern Tracks.

The Norwich street railway through its attorney, Solomon Lucas, has submitted to the New London Northern railroad the following proposition for the traversing of its tracks by the expansion of the electric circuit: "This extension will pass over the track of your company between Bean Hill and Yantic. It is hereby proposed by the Street Railway company to render such passing over the track of your company free from danger, that the following proposed plan be adopted either by an order from the railroad commissioners or by a stipulation on the part of the street railway company, or both—namely, the street railway company shall cause its cars to come to a full stop before they reach the track of your company. The conductor of such street car shall then go upon the track of your company and ascertain whether it is clear and free from danger by reason of any thing on the track of your company, and if he shall find that the track is in that condition and the street car can pass over your track in safety, he shall then order the street car to cross, and shall remain on the tracks of your company till it has crossed over your road. This order is to be observed by the conductor and motor man of the street railway company and any disregard of it shall result in the immediate discharge of the person so neglecting to obey it.

"I trust by reason of some such arrangement your company will not object to the railroad commissioners passing an order permitting the street railway company to cross with its tracks the track of your company at the grade crossing above referred to."

TO TEACH THE BLIND.

State Board of Education Organized—Lawyer Cleveland Secretary.

The new state board of education for the blind, which consists of the governor, the chief justice, Mrs. Emily Wells Foster of Hartford, held their first meeting Monday at the governor's office in the capitol. Mr. Cleveland gave a little history of the movement which resulted in his drafting the bill which was passed by the recent general assembly. There are now over 700 blind people in the state, about seventy of whom are of school age.

The board elected Frank E. Cleveland secretary and Mrs. Emily Wells Foster assistant secretary. They were authorized to gather all the statistical information available regarding the blind in the state, and the board adjourned subject to the call of the secretary, [illegible] within three months.

STORRS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The New Departures Planned Under the Increased Appropriation.

The new plans, so far as matured, of the Storrs Agricultural college are as follows: Five new departments will be established—namely: Horticulture, veterinary science, domestic science, higher English, and wood and iron work.

The managers have elected Dr. George A. Waterman, a graduate of Michigan Agricultural college, to the professorship of veterinary science. Professor Waterman has been the ranking officer in the Michigan battalion, which is commanded by a captain of the regular army, who is also an assistant in the veterinary department there.

Miss Lottie J. Short of Kansas, a graduate of Kansas Agricultural college and a post graduate student in their domestic science department, and also an assistant there, has been elected professor of Domestic Science in Storrs Agricultural college. The young ladies will take the regular course, except where the studies are of a purely agricultural nature, such as fertilizers, stock breeding, etc., and in place of these, domestic science will be substituted.

Horticulture is to be made a leading feature, if not the feature of the new arrangement. It is proposed to expand the last three, within a couple of years, into a four years' course, making the whole five years in length for those who need it, or four years for those who can pass an examination upon the studies of the school.

The course is so arranged that what now constitutes the second and third in themselves will give a short course in agriculture to those who cannot afford to take the long one. This will give the [illegible] of an agricultural education; while the long course will give a more [illegible] education. Those taking the short course will receive but a certificate at the end of their course, while those who take the long course will be graduated with a degree.

The wood and iron work is to be plain carpentry and blacksmithing, such as is needed on every farm.

Recognizing the need of a more thorough education in English, a good deal more stress is to be laid upon the subject throughout the whole course, and a special professor is to be supplied for that work in the higher years. Declamation, elocution, orations, discussions, essay writing, and all forms of work that will give facility in the use of our mother tongue, will be a very prominent feature in this department of the college work.

The course as laid out is shown by all embellishments, and commends itself to those desiring an education for the [illegible] of life.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Butter Trade for Past Week Has Been Fairly Good.

STRAWBERRY BUSINESS IS OVER.

Blackberries, Raspberries, Blueberries and Currants Take the Place.

BOSTON, July 11.—The butter trade of the past week has been fairly good. A firmness in prices has been noted, which can hardly be accounted for, as operators seem to lack the confidence necessary to a good business. Western butter is being landed here in goodly quantities. It is reported that the cold storage warehouses contain 20,000 more packages today than they did a year ago. Extra creamery is worth 21 to 22 cents a pound, northern dairy, 18 to 19 cents, with some fine selections at 20 cents, and New York creamery at 2? cents.

In the Fruit Market

the bulk of the strawberry business is over, but as the strawberry disappears the blackberries, raspberries, blueberries and currants appear in its place. A few lots of fine native strawberries bring 10 to 12 cents a box. Cape and Mansfield blueberries sell at 18 to 20 cents a quart; blackberries, 10 to 12 cents, and raspberries in very small baskets at 5 cents per cup.

Many fruit stands display California peaches which, although tempting in appearance, can hardly be so to the taste. Watermelons are arriving in boat loads from the south and are worth from $13 to $20 a hundred.

Vegetables.

One writer on the market for the past week has called it the transition week, for about this time many lines of truck change from southern supplies to those grown in the open air on our nearby farms. Market gardeners have made considerable [illegible] of their peas this year. Prices the past week have ruled high; in fact there has been a flop in many lines, among which may be mentioned carrots, summer squash, spinach and turnips. A heavy supply has weakened the price of cucumbers. Prices are: Bunch beets, $2.50 a hundred; cabbage, $1.50 a barrel; parsley, 50 cents a bushel; lettuce, 50 cents a box; spinach, 50 cents a bushel; native squash, $2 a barrel; native green peas, $2.50 to $3 a bushel; new onions, $1.25 a hundred bunches.

Provisions.

BEEF—Fresh beef was in better demand yesterday, though [illegible] Monday. The market is slightly easier on light beef, with the best heavy beef firm. Choice to fancy steers, [illegible]; prime, [illegible]; good, [illegible]; light, [illegible]; extra heavy hinds, [illegible]; good, [illegible]; light, [illegible]; fores, [illegible]; light, [illegible]; flanks, [illegible]; rattles, [illegible]; chucks, [illegible]; rounds, [illegible]; rumps, [illegible]; rumps and loins, [illegible]; short ribs, [illegible]; loins, [illegible].

LAMBS AND MUTTONS—There is noted a lack of request for lambs, with the market easier. Muttons and veals, however, especially the latter, are in good demand: Choice spring lambs, [illegible]; common to good, [illegible]; poor and ordinary, [illegible]; yearlings, [illegible]; muttons, [illegible]; choice heavy Brightons, [illegible]; choice eastern veals, [illegible]; common to good, [illegible]; Brightons and fancy, [illegible].

BUTTER—The butter market continues to be rather easy, though without particular changes in prices. Western creamery extra, [illegible]; firsts, [illegible]; imitation creamery, [illegible]; factory, [illegible]; northern creamery, extra, [illegible]; northern dairy, [illegible]; eastern creamery, extra, [illegible]. These are prices for round lots. Jobbing lots and fancy lots cost more.

FLOUR—There are no particularly new features in the flour market. Wheat is scarcely strong enough to influence a brisk trade. Quotations continue at: Fine and supers, [illegible]; extra and seconds, [illegible]; Minnesota bakers', clear and straight, [illegible]; winter, clear and straight, [illegible]; winter patents, [illegible]; spring patents, [illegible].

MEAL—Cornmeal is firmer, from the position of corn: Kiln dried cornmeal, for export, [illegible] per bbl; bag meal, [illegible]; yellow granulated, [illegible]; ground, cut and rolled oatmeal, [illegible] per bbl; rye, [illegible] per bushel for dealers and at [illegible] from the trade in job lots; rye flour, [illegible] per bbl, as to quality.

OATS—Oats are fairly sustained. Chicago clipped, to arrive, are quoted at [illegible], with fancy higher. No. 2 white are quoted at [illegible], also to arrive, with clipped mixed at [illegible]. The spot market is steady at: Clipped, [illegible]; fancy, [illegible]; No. 2 white, [illegible]; No. 3 white, [illegible]; clipped mixed, [illegible].

CORN—Corn holds firm. Chicago No. 2 yellow, to arrive, is quoted at [illegible], with No. 3 yellow at [illegible]. The spot market is firm, with but little here. Steamer yellow, [illegible]; No. 2 yellow, [illegible]; steamer mixed, [illegible].

EGGS—Here the market on eggs is steady, though a [illegible] in some of the other markets: [illegible]; Michigan, [illegible]; [illegible] fancy, [illegible]; eastern and northern, [illegible].

CHEESE—Cheese is quiet and steady: Northern full creams, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; western choice, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; Liverpool is quoted at [illegible] on colored.

HAY—Hay is yet in free offering, with the best hay quotable at [illegible]. Bran is steady at about $16.50 for sack spring to arrive, and at $17 for sack winter.

POTATOES—Potatoes are in fair supply, with a fair demand. Quotations are steady at: Norfolk extras, [illegible]; fair to good, [illegible]; reds, [illegible].

PORK—Pork and lard are in quiet demand, with the market unchanged.

THE EXPOSITION HORROR.

Only Three Firemen Out of a Company of Eleven Now Alive.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The most interesting exhibit at the World's fair grounds today, and one not scheduled in the official guidebook, is the ruins of the cold storage structure, and 10,000 people this morning crowded around the debris, eagerly watching the search for the dead bodies.

Early this morning three bodies were recovered from the ruins, but they were so badly charred and disfigured as to make recognition absolutely impossible. One thing seems quite evident, however, and that is that they are not the remains of firemen. The locality in which they were found seems to preclude this possibility.

All the firemen who lost their lives were huddled up in one place in the dreadful firetrap at the top of the shaft, and, as they fell victims one by one to the flames, their bodies naturally fell somewhere within the small circle surrounding the smokestack. The bodies today recovered were evidently not the remains of any who jumped or fell from the shaft, because they were found at a somewhat remote distance from this point, and under a mass of steampipe and machinery that must have fallen from above.

The total of dead bodies recovered at this time has reached 15, though the search in the ruins was thus far very slight, owing to the heat and confusion. There seemed no doubt the death list was still incomplete.

The so-called "star" fire organization of the fair, yesterday morning boasted a membership of 11 men, under the command of Captain John Garvey. Two men, according to the books, were off duty at noon, and last night, but three men of the company had reported. They were on their way to the storage warehouse fire when the other companies were about starting, and it is claimed that Captain Garvey and his men were the first to arrive at the white building with the tall [illegible].

They ran to the roof and up into the tower and, taking ropes with them, waited for the other arrivals to bring their hose to attach the hempen strings. For 15 minutes these brave fellows were up there, being reenforced every minute by other arrivals, and just as the first lead of hose had reached them their doom came. From the edge of the tower they made the leap. That was the last seen of the brave boys from No. 1, and the three men who showed up last night hastily changed clothes, took a drink of brandy and went back to the scene of the catastrophe.

At midnight the remains of seven dead men were laid on as many slabs in the morgue. Only one body has been positively identified—that of William Denning—although seven firemen who called thought they saw in one heap of charred remains a resemblance of their comrade, M. McQuade, driver of engine 2. Four of the bodies bore little likeness to dead humanity. One gunny sack, when opened, showed a dampness of charred matter. Close inspection revealed black and fleshless bones, and only by these were the firemen enabled to tell that they had found what was left of a man.

During the evening many women called, wives, mother and sisters of firemen. They were told it was useless to go below and gaze upon the bodies, as there was no hope of identifying the dead. Their earnest pleadings were in vain, except in a few instances, but every time those who had hoped to relieve their uncertainty by a visit to the morgue left only sickened by what they had witnessed.

LOYALTY AND DEVOTION.

Public Letter From Queen Victoria Thanking Her People.

LONDON, July 11.—The queen has made public a letter thanking her people for their demonstrations of loyalty and affection during the recent celebration of the Duke of York's marriage to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. She says:

"I have been [illegible] and touched by the loyalty and devotion to myself and my family, so strikingly evidenced at the marriage of my beloved grandson. In weal or woe I have ever met the warmest and kindest sympathy. I know that my people are aware how truly my heart beats for them in all their joys and sorrows. In this lies the real strength of the empire."

NEGRO UPRISING FEARED.

Great Excitement at Bardwell Over the Lynching of Miller.

LOUISVILLE, July 11.—A negro uprising is feared at Bardwell, Ky., as a result of the lynching of Miller, the suspected murderer of the Ray sisters.

Since grave doubts of Miller's guilt has arisen the negroes have been worked up to a high pitch of excitement over the manner in which he was summarily put to death and have threatened to get even. The mayor of Bardwell is alarmed over the situation and has telegraphed to Paducah for 100 Winchester rifles.

Piece Stitchers Strike.

NORWELL, Mass., July 11.—The piece stitchers at Charles Grant & Sons' shoe factory on High street struck yesterday afternoon. The difference arises from a reduction of prices. The firm claim that the work is of a cheaper grade than they have formerly done. The stitchers were the only ones docked, and they immediately refused to work. A compromise could not be made and the day hands were sent home.

Cold Storage Receiver.

CHICAGO, July 11.—George M. Moulton has been appointed receiver for the Produce Cold Storage Exchange. It was alleged the exchange could not meet its obligations, and as there were perishable goods to the value of $750,000 stored in the warehouse, the suspension of business by seizure or attachment would entail great loss.

Rio Grande do Sul Blockaded.

RIO JANEIRO, July 11.—The central government has ordered the squadron to be prepared to blockade Rio Grande do Sul. Latest dispatches say that Admiral Wandenkolk, with the captured steamer Jupiter, has joined the federal [illegible]. General Castilho is reported to be sending [illegible] for the defense of the city.

Oil Stove Exploded.

DANBURY, Conn., July 11.—An oil stove exploded in the home of Daniel H. Barnes, 24 Main street, at 9:30 this morning and set fire to the building. The flames spread rapidly and the entire structure was destroyed. Only a little furniture was saved. The loss is $3000, insurance $1600.

Tried to Commit Suicide.

BOSTON, July 11.—While in a fit of despondency this morning Michael Hickey, 50 years of age, living at 7 Emmet street, South Boston, tried to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. He made a cut an inch and a half long, but the wound will probably not prove fatal.

The Child Burglar.

BOSTON, July 11.—Agent Bagley of the board of state charities brought Minnie Schneider, the child burglar, into the Dorchester court this morning. She was charged with the several offenses, to which she pleaded guilty. She was placed in charge of the state board, and will be incarcerated in the state primary school at Palmer.

Youthful Thieves Bound Over.

BOSTON, July 11.—Two boys, Fred Buttons and Merrick Chapman of Waltham, aged respectively 13 and 14 years, were before United States Commissioner Fiske today, charged with breaking and entering the Waltham postoffice in June last. They were held in $500 each for trial in the United States district court.

Billy Lester Dead.

RED BANK, N. J., July 11.—Billy Lester, the well known actor, died at half o'clock this morning after a long illness. Death occurred at his summer residence in Fair Haven. He leaves a widow, who is known on the stage as Annie Hart. Lester was about 40 years of age.

Found Dead In Bed.

BOSTON, July 11.—John Manion, 60 years of age, living at 43 Wexford street, Brighton, was found dead in his bed this morning. Death was due to natural causes.

Smallpox in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Three cases of smallpox have been found in the city, and the patients are now at the pest house. Sunday the medical staff of the health department was busy in the neighborhood where the disease was discovered, vaccinating the people who might have been subjected to the contagion.

Irregulars Give Up Arms.

BUENOS AYRES, July 11.—In pursuance of the decree ordering the disarmament of all irregulars, Dr. Costa has disbanded his troops and surrendered 2000 rifles and 200,000 cartridges. He purposes to protest to congress against the decree.

Child Instantly Killed.

SING SING, N., July 11.—Mrs. William E. Barlow and her child were thrown from a carriage by their runaway horse this morning. The child was instantly killed and the mother badly injured.

Kansas City Bank Assigns.

KANSAS CITY, July 11.—The Kansas City Safe Deposit and Savings bank assigned today. Liabilities unknown.

SENSE OF DIRECTION.

THE FACULTY IN ANIMALS THAT LEADS THEM BACK HOME.

What May Be Learned by Watching and Experimenting With the Pet Dog or the Household Cat—Some Striking Examples of This Remarkable Power.

It is well known that any of our domestic animals can find its way home from a distance of many miles, even after the lapse of some time. This faculty is perhaps oftenest seen in the dog, the horse and the cat, but is known to be almost or quite as fully developed in the ox. The faculty has been supposed by some naturalists to depend upon a sixth sense, independent of sight or smell. Such a theory involves an organ of sense by which the needed observations may be carried to the brain, an organ which must be distinct from eye, ear and nostril. Physiologists have not as yet found any such organ in the constitution of any animal, nor have they found any nerves different from those which belong to our own nervous system. This is almost conclusive evidence that animals possess no sense different from ours.

If we watch the conduct of a dog when he is thrown upon his own resources to find his way home, we shall see that he has made good use of his five senses up to this time, and that he purposes to make good use of them in the immediate future. It is always assumed that the dog has not slept during the time that he has been carried from home. If he were to sleep, he would lose all clew whether he had a sixth sense or not, for in sleep all the senses are equally dormant.

The case has been submitted of a dog taken by rail a distance of 200 miles in a circuitous course and set down 80 miles from home. He disappears and the next day is at his old haunts. He could not have followed the rail by which he came, for this would take him a longer time. He must have struck across country.

The question is, Did he take a direct line for home or did he shape his general course so as to come out upon some familiar spot, miles, it may be, from his home, and from that point follow remembered paths? Hunters say that the latter is most frequently the case.

Suppose that in the dog's absence the old home has been burned down and his master's family have moved five miles to the right or left, but are at the same distance from the point at which he was set down. He will go back to the old spot and from there will trace the family by scent if he traces them at all. He has no sense to inform him of the changed position of the family, nor of anything more than would be known to a man under the same circumstances.

But the [illegible] by supposing that the dog's master has left home, gun in hand, while the dog has been detained for a time. The man goes straight to the woods, but after getting out of sight makes a turn so as to bring him to the opposite side of the house. If now the dog is let loose, he takes to the woods at the point where he saw his master enter. From there he trusts to his eyes and nose, keeping close upon his master's trail.

If the dog had a special sense of direction, he would not so easily be thrown off the pursuit of a deer or a fox by the animal taking to the water. Every species of animal that has been made the prey of dogs has learned to baffle pursuit by deceiving the sight or scent of its pursuers. Such creatures would have been likely to find out before this time if the dog had any special sense, and we should see them acting upon the knowledge.

The most interesting and perplexing cases are those in which animals that have been taken some distance from home in closed cages have yet found their way back without difficulty. This shows a highly developed sensitiveness to every change of direction.

This faculty of perception is low in man, but it may be developed and trained. There are persons who sleep best with the head toward the north. Let such a person when traveling on a sleeping car make it a point to decide upon the course the train is going as soon as he wakes from sleep in the night, and he will find himself rapidly gaining new power to determine directions.

Darwin's experiment is an interesting one. He put some bees in dark paper boxes and carried them by a circuitous route a distance from the hive. When they were set free, they all returned in a straight line to their home.

Again he took them over a similar route, but on the way he spun the boxes rapidly around. This time only one or two bees reached the hive, and perhaps these got back only by accident. While spinning around in the boxes they lost perception of the direction in which they were being carried.

It is often observed that when a dog returns home by a way which he must have made out with care and on his own account he at once throws himself upon the floor or the ground and sleeps soundly for a time. This is apt to be referred to physical exhaustion, but is more likely to be due to the fact that the animal has kept his faculties all on the alert and has quickened his perceptions to their difficult task. All our domestic animals show wonderful power of application when their faculties are bent to the accomplishment of some cherished design.—Youth's Companion.

The Poverty of Printed Language.

"God will keep up his end of the sow if you give him a chance." That was the language used by Moderator Craig in his sermon, which had direct reference to the controversies before the general assembly. As it appears in print the sentence requires an expository note. Whether the word "row" rhymes with "how" or "hoe" becomes an important question.—Washington Star.

Strength of the Horse.

A horse can draw on the worst kind of earth road about four times as much as he can carry on his back. On a good macadamized road he can pull 10 times as much; on a plank road 25 times as much, and on a street railway 55 times as much.—Chicago Journal.

Clara—The North Southern railroad, and I'll never patronize that line again either. Their caramels are horrid.—Good News.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
Prevents hair from falling out.
"A number of years ago, by recommendation of a friend, I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop the hair from falling out and prevent its turning gray. The first effects were most satisfactory. Occasional applications since have kept my hair thick and of a natural color."—H. E. Basham, McKinney, Texas.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
Restores hair after fevers.
"Over a year ago I had a severe fever, and when I recovered, my hair began to fall out, and what little remained turned gray. I tried various remedies, but without success, till at last I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and now my hair is growing rapidly and is restored to its original color."—Mrs. A. Collins, Dighton, Mass.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
Prevents hair from turning gray.
"My hair was rapidly turning gray and falling out; one bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor has remedied the trouble, and my hair is now its original color and fullness."—B. Onkrupa, Cleveland, O.

The wind had just breathed it to the pine,
Who shook her head and sighed,
And then she told it to the oak,
Who said the wind had lied.
But, all the same, he told the ash,
Who told the willow tree,
And so it passed along the line
Until it came to me.
I heard it from the speckled trout,
Who had it from the pool,

A VENTILATING HAT.

I had got to the very bottom of the ladder. Never mind how I got there, or why I got there, that's my business, and it doesn't concern you in the least. But I was earning my living all the same, and earning it honestly. I had read stories of the workhouse, and they made my flesh creep. It wasn't pride that made me work; it wasn't an honest spirit of independence. It was the workhouse I dreaded and the peculiarly unattractive fare provided for the pauper. And there I was with 18 pence, my day's earnings, between me and the casual ward. Within 24 hours that 18 pence would assuredly disappear, and unless I got work of some sort to the casual ward I should have to go. I and a gentleman in a position similar to my own were talking matters over.

"Things is very slack, governor," said he to me.

"There is one game you might try," continued my acquaintance with a benignant smile, "and that's Wilkins, the ventilating hatter. But you can't keep on with that long, you know. It's ruin to the constitution."

Anything was better to my mind than the casual ward, so I asked for Wilkins' address.

"Oh, you can't miss it," was the answer; "you just walk down Shoreditch. There's always a crowd outside Wilkins' shop, and all you've got to do is to ask, boldlike, for Wilkins, and when you see him you just ups and says, 'I'd like to be in the way of earning a honest 'alf crown, sir.' Then he'll put you in the way at wunst." Then my friend nodded and departed.

I arrived at Shoreditch. I wasn't long in finding Wilkins—there was a crowd in front of the window. In the window were hundreds of hats. Every one of them had a ticket bearing the same legend, "Wilkins' Ventilating Hat," then followed the price. I gradually elbowed my way to the front row, and then I perceived the nature of the exhibition that gave so much pleasure to the inhabitants of Shoreditch.

In the midst of the array of hats were two human heads, which protruded through two carefully constructed holes in the polished mahogany which formed the flooring of the shop front. Each head was covered by what appeared to be an ordinary tall hat. The head on the right had a large window ticket behind it, on which were the following words:

"Wilkins' ventilating hat. Perfect comfort. No suffering from heat by want of ventilation. The wearer of this article enjoys life. The head is human. There is no deception. The only establishment in which Wilkins' ventilating hat may be obtained. 'It comes as a boon and a blessing to men, like the Pickwick, the Owl and the Waverley pen.'"

There was a similar ticket behind the head on the left:

"The ordinary silk hat. Observe how the unfortunate wearer suffers from the heat. Poor fellow! He evidently wishes himself dead. The common unventilated hat of commerce is a fiendish invention worthy of the atrocities of the worst days of the Spanish inquisition. The wearer of an unventilated hat is hurrying to an early grave. The head is human; there is no deception."

I noticed that the mahogany planking of the shop front below the heads was perforated with innumerable small holes. Then I observed that there was a very great difference in the appearance of the faces of those wearing the hats. The gentleman wearing Wilkins' ventilating hat looked the picture of contentment. He smiled. He seemed as if he had attained the summit of human bliss. He was evidently very comfortable indeed. The other head presented a striking contrast. Never till now had I the least idea that such dreadful effects were produced by the wearing of an unventilated hat. The face was as pale as death. A cold perspiration seemed to trickle from every pore. The mouth was set as though in agony, and all through an unventilated hat. I boldly determined to enter the shop.

"What can I show you, sir?" said an assistant, with excessive urbanity.

"I want to see Mr. Wilkins," I replied.

"That is Mr. Wilkins," said the man, indicating a portly and benevolent looking gentleman in a black silk waistcoat.

"What can I do for you, my man?" said Mr. Wilkins.

"I'd like to be in the way of earning an honest half crown, sir," I replied.

"Very good, my man," said Mr. Wilkins, with a smile. "Is there a vacancy today, Boldger?"

"Yes, sir. Certainly, sir," replied the man. "We shall be ready for the gentleman in about 20 minutes."

"Been here before, my man?" said Mr. Wilkins to me, not unkindly.

"Not I," I replied.

"Then you'd better put him through the mill, Boldger," said Mr. Wilkins to the foreman.

"Step this way, young man," said the foreman to me, and I followed him into a lavatory.

"There you are," he said. "You're in luck, young man," he went on. "Half a crown for wearing a new hat for three hours is good pay. You'll be on at 2, and you'll be off at 5. This gentleman is waiting his turn. He is one of our regulars."

The man who was waiting his turn was a wretch, but his neck and face had been carefully washed, and his hair well combed and brushed. I washed my face and brushed my hair, and I thought that to wear an unventilated hat even three hours couldn't be so very dreadful a punishment after all. I had reckoned without my host.

"This way, gentlemen, if you please," said the hatter's assistant as he motioned us to follow him through a door leading toward the basement.

At the end of a passage under the shop front was a little room with a sloping roof. Side by side were two easy chairs, beneath each of which was a winch for raising or lowering the chair to any required height. My companion took his seat at once. He was evidently used to the ways of the place. Then the assistant strapped him in by means of two thick leather bands with massive buckles, one at the neck and the other at the waist. Then the shopman suddenly opened a little trapdoor 12 inches square in the low, sloping roof of the apartment and worked away actively at the winch. The chair rose, and the head of its occupant disappeared through the little trapdoor to the shoulders. Then the man turned a large nut which was affixed to the back of the chair and motioned me to take my seat in the other.

"Why do you strap us in?" I said to the man as I took my seat.

"You'll know why, governor, by the time you've earned that half a crown," he said with a malignant grin. "Now, look here," he continued, "if you want to sneeze or cough or anything, get it done now, and don't you go a-larfing or larking with the boys at the window. If you do, it will be deducted for."

Then he began to wind me up, and I made my first appearance in Mr. Wilkins' shop front to a round of tumultuous applause from a crowd of idlers in the street who stared into the shop windows. Then somebody carefully fitted a hat onto my head and gave it a knowing cock. Then the mahogany arrangement was drawn up close to my neck, and there I sat, perfectly comfortable, staring at the crowd of idlers in the street. And then a draft of cool air began to flow through the holes that surrounded my neck. Mr. Wilkins really took a wonderful amount of trouble to insure our comfort.

At first the novelty of my situation entirely occupied my mind. I felt inclined to laugh as I thought of myself as a bodiless head wearing a ventilating hat. The boys in the street, too, made grimaces at me. Then I looked at my fellow victim out of the corner of my eye. He was evidently already suffering from the effects of his unventilated hat. His teeth were tightly set. He looked anything but happy. Great drops of perspiration already stood upon his brow. I didn't trouble myself very much about him.

The time passed pleasantly enough and I heard the clock of Shoreditch church at length strike 4. As it struck I was startled to hear the wearer of the unventilated hat give a hollow groan. I looked at him once more out of the corner of my eye. He had become ghastly pale. He looked as if he were melting gradually. In fact, the poor fellow seemed very ill indeed. Strange that a badly ventilated hat should produce such marked effects. Well, it wasn't my business.

The clock of Shoreditch church struck 4.30. I heard footsteps in the room below, and at the same time I was deprived of my ventilating hat. A brand new hat was placed upon my head, and the show cards which stood behind our respective heads were exchanged. The drafts of cool air which came through the innumerable little holes in the mahogany flooring around my neck suddenly ceased. A current of heated air supplied its place. I looked out of the corner of my eye at the other head. The face wore an ecstatic smile. The easy chair in which I was sitting began to grow warm, and finally became actually hot—unpleasantly hot.

I saw through the whole fiendish trick at once. I was to be tortured an hour and a half for the amusement of an idle crowd in order that the public might be gulled into the purchase of the so called ventilating hats of the fiend Wilkins.

I felt—but I will not dwell on my agonies; I will not dilate upon the horrible sufferings I endured. I was being gradually cooked alive, and I felt that concentrated boiling gravy was coursing through my veins. My features were contorted with agony. The crowd in the street outside applauded.

I tried to break loose. As I did so a voice from the room below uttered the following dreadful threat, "It's 120 now, my man, and if you move I'll make it 150!" I shed tears of rage, indignation and agony. I endured the most dreadful tortures an hour and a half. When I left Wilkins' establishment with a half a crown in my pocket, I was more dead than alive.

It is the dream of my life that I and Mr. Wilkins, the inventor of the ventilating hat, may meet in some lonely place. I am not a revengeful man, but I feel that I owe Wilkins a debt that I should like to pay.—Exchange.

The Art of Working In Gold.

The Romans copied the Greek and Etruscan goldsmiths' work, though they also often used the ornaments themselves taken from the ancient tombs. Much of the art of the ancients in working gold was lost until early in the present century, when Signor Castellani found some of the Etruscan methods still being employed by workmen in a village in a remote corner of the Apennines.—London Times.

Sailors as Astronomers.

It was a happy thought to enlist the sea captains in the service of science. While for obvious reasons the solid land is better for the accurate observations there seems good cause to hope that hereafter large additions to astronomical knowledge may be made by the masters of vessels happening to be in the path of eclipses.—Youth's Companion.

The First Women on the Stage.

It is now ascertained beyond doubt that women first appeared upon the stage between November, 1660, and January, 1661. On Jan. 3 Pepys, that inveterate playgoer, tells us that he saw "The Beggar's Bush," "it being well done, and here the first time that I ever saw women come upon the stage."—Cornhill Magazine.

She Did Not "Phase" Him.

Young Woman (in car, to Fogg, who offers to sit beside her)—This seat is engaged for a gentleman, sir.

Fogg (sitting down with easy assurance)—Thanks; very kind in you, and very flattering besides.—Boston Transcript.

For those in whom baldness has already begun, through no weakness of the general system, thorough brushing of the hair several times a day will be beneficial. The hair should be brushed from the summit in all directions.

Fishes are without eyelids, properly so called, and as the eye is at all times washed by the surrounding water that gland which supplies moisture to the eye is not required and therefore does not exist.

FARM, FIELD AND GARDEN.

FALL SEEDING TO WHEAT.

A Good Seed Bed Prepared by Suitable Working Is Most Important.

The importance of properly fitting the soil intended for fall seeding to wheat is urged by a correspondent of The Country Gentleman. This correspondent advocates plowing the land some weeks previous to seeding and then fining it as deep as it was plowed by harrowing and crushing. It may require four or five harrowings or only two or three to pulverize it to the condition of a good seed bed. Every time the ground is harrowed many hard clods are pulled up, and the top mold of fine soil on the surface falls into the places the clods were raised from. Thus repeated harrowing lets the fined surface soil down and brings the hard clods to the surface to be fined in their turn by crushing and atmospheric influences.

In this way by suitable working a good seed bed is made in the soil, the latter being fine enough to cover and come in contact with the entire seed surface, conducting the heat of the ground, when that is sufficient to cause germination, to the seed and causing it to swell and germinate. But if the seed be surrounded by small clods instead of fine soil the conduction of heat will be only partial, as the hard clods do not come in contact with all the seed surface. Hence two or three acres of ground may—in dry seasons particularly—be made by thorough cultivation to produce as much as five or six acres of cloddy or half cultivated land. The seed bed is where the seed is deposited, with the hope that it will grow and in due season mature. But there can be neither reasonable germination, growth nor maturity unless the right conditions for germination surround the seed at seeding time.

Shade For Growing Poultry.

The early chicks—that is, those hatched in the early spring months—require all the sun warmth we can give them. Sunlight is a desideratum in cool and cold weather. When, however, the chicks come to be 3 or 4 months of age and half or two-thirds grown, the summer days will have arrived, and the heat of Old Sol is then highly oppressive. Fowls and chickens both will hide themselves away in every shady nook or corner that is available, as we know. And provision should be made that they may escape the direct rays of the sun at this time for good reasons. If exposed unduly in excessively hot weather, the plumage of white fowls and light Brahmas will turn yellow frequently before the season is over, and thus discolor our best birds perhaps in an unsightly way.

But the growing stock are particularly sensitive to sun heat in the warmest days, and shelter or shade should be provided them where they can escape from the annoyance. This may be afforded, says The Poultry World, by a board roof lean-to placed upon short posts and rails not more than three feet high above the ground, slanting sufficiently to throw off the rain and open all around underneath. It may stand at one corner of the run against the north side of the barn, or anywhere out of the way, and be but a temporary affair—4 feet wide and 12 feet long. There may be three or four of these in different localities put up at small cost—plain, rough and serviceable. If you have plenty of low shade trees on your place, these will answer the purpose provided your fowls can have access to their cool shadows without injuring your plants and garden borders. If they can run beneath the trellised shelter of a broad, ample grapevine, this is a grateful spot for them in which to find the cooling shade they covet in midsummer.

Experiments With Winter Wheat.

The Ontario college station has issued a bulletin giving notes and tabulated data for 44 Canadian and American varieties of winter wheat tested at the station in 1892. Twenty-four foreign varieties were also grown, but as none of them proved equal to some of the best of the American varieties no details regarding them are given. The average yields per acre of the Canadian and American varieties in 1892 were, straw 3.3 tons and grain 42.6 bushels, weighing 60.5 pounds per bushel. The varieties which yielded more than 50 bushels per acre were Dawson Golden Chaff, Golden Drop, Mediterranean and Pol-caster.

The varieties which have yielded an average of over 40 bushels per acre during the past three years are Surprise, Early Red Clawson, Rodgers, Red Velvet Chaff, Golden Drop, Bonnell or Landreth, Golden Cross or Volunteer, Manchester, Standard, Hybrid Mediterranean and Martin Amber. During the past three years the average yields of the white varieties have been about one bushel per acre more than those of the red varieties, but the latter have averaged from one to two pounds more in weight per bushel.

Poultry Points.

The new Columbian Wyandotte, introduced by a New England fancier, is described as having the markings of the light Brahma, with the symmetry of the Wyandotte, their clean, yellow legs and close fitting combs.

When whitewashing the poultry premises, add coarse rock salt, say a handful to a pail of the wash, which will harden it materially, and when it is dry it will not easily rub off.

Scarlet Clover.

A South Carolinian, in a letter to The American Agriculturist, sums up scarlet clover as follows: This plant is an annual, and if sown in the spring is cut or fed off in the fall, or if in the late summer, so that growth may begin in the fall, before the winter, it is ready for cutting in the next spring. That is the end of it. It is most useful in places where the winters are mild, and it may grow all the winter. But where the winters are cold it cannot be depended upon and may fail altogether. It must not be sown with any grain, but alone. It can only be cut once, whether for seed or hay. The seed sown in your wheat may show in the spring, but it will make but little growth and will die in the fall. The best that can be done with it will be to pasture it and get what can be made in this way on the stubble.

It is reported that in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine the bounty upon maple sugar is likely to amount to about $70,000 this year, which is about twice as much as was paid last year.

IN THE APIARY.

The Plans of Prominent Beekeepers For Preventing After Swarms.

G. M. Doolittle, recognized authority on bees and honey, describes his method of preventing after swarms as follows in Gleanings in Bee Culture: The morning of the eighth day after a first swarm has issued I open the hive, take out the first frame and hastily glance over it for nearly ripe queen cells, and if none is found I shake most of the bees off near the entrance of the hive, into which they will immediately run, when the frame is closely inspected for queen cells, peering into every nook and corner for them, for should some small or crooked one be missed swarming would surely result. All cells found are cut off after a frame has been shaken to rid it of bees, for this shaking of the young queens in their cells is almost sure to kill them or cause deformity.

The next frame is treated the same, unless ripe cells are found, in which case it is set outside the hive awaiting the finding of a cell from which a queen has hatched, when all are cut off, but should none have hatched then the best one of these ripe cells is saved and put back into the hive. In this way we can make sure that no swarm will issue after the first from this hive, and it is the only certain plan I know of.
